Another Dist. 100 Vote!

DENNIS LEMPICKI, an Itasca Shell Station dealer, is protesting the oil company's coin games. His "reward" for refusing to participate may be a cancellation of his lease. He claims the company's "Mr. President" and "Man in Space" games give over a million-to-one odds for customers against winning the big prize. Customers have supported Lempicki's protest with letters. The station owner has joined others in picketing the Chicago Shell offices.

No Coins But Many Headaches

by KEN HARDWICKE

The sign above the station door read "Service Is Our Business." Inside mechanic Dennis Lempicki sat stoically behind a desk full of letters wondering if he would lose both within a year.

It wasn't always like this for the Itasca Shell station operator. Over two months ago, his stalls were filled with cars seeking repair and Lempicki was busier than the Christmas shopping rush. Shell Oil Company honored him with a plaque for five years of valued business association.

Lempicki could boast that he deserved the honor because he had doubled the volume of gas sold since taking over operation of the Itasca Shell Service Center.

But that was over two months ago and fortunes of men change regularly like dirty oil after 2,000 miles. The five-year plaque for achievement now hangs atop a bulletin board clustered with customer letters protesting Shell's recent actions against Lempicki and praising the mechanic for refusal to participate in Shell's coin games.

IT ALL started in September when Lempicki refused to distribute Shell's "Mr. $1,800 a month" coin thievery and a belief that the coin games were "unfair" to the public and station operators.

"I would like to see the service station turned back into a station, not a gambling casino," said the 29-year-old Lempicki.

Gambling may be all right for "Jimmy the Greek" of Las Vegas, but according to Lempicki's recent tabulations a customer's chance of winning the top $5,000 prize is 1,133,000 to one. When both "a house President" coin game, Lempicki's refusal stemmed from exorbitant costs of promotion for himself and other dealers ($400 and patron is losing, Lempicki feels something is definitely wrong.

Lempicki's accusations against Shell's coin games are not unfounded and he is prepared to show anyone who asks to see the figures.

"Only 10 to 25 per cent of the dealer's cost of promotion is returned to the general public," he said. "The customer expects something for nothing and his chances of winning are very, very slim."

SHELL SALESMEN guarantee boxes with $200 in winners but the figures never coincide.

Besides 35 customer letters lauding the Itasca dealer for his stand against Shell, Lempicki has received other assorted support. The Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago (GRA) which has a membership of over 440 stations has supported him.

A GRA attorney said 99 per cent of the dealers don't want to participate in the games and if a dealer refuses to participate in the games, his lease is threatened.

Lempicki is more than aware of the lease cancellation policy by Shell since company officials have informed him that unless he complies with the coin games such as "Man in Space," his lease will be terminated shortly.

Lempicki has one year before his lease can be renewed and he seriously doubts whether he will be a permanent fixture at the corner of Irving and Walnut Street.

Besides GRA, Lempicki took a personal poll of 32 Shell dealers in the surrounding area and 29 supported or sympathized with his objections. Even his closest competitor in town, Pat Bartuch, who operates the Standard station down the road, agrees with his game denial.

"The games are not fair to the public because of the percentage of winning to losing," Bartuch said.

Hegebarth in State Race

Bensenville Trustee William Hegebarth has thrown his hat into the ring as a candidate for state representative from the 37th District.

Hegebarth will oppose incumbent William Redmond in the Democratic primary in March. The winner of that contest will go on to run in the election next November.

Hegebarth has been a trustee for three years. He was elected in 1967 on the Economy Party slate of former Village Pres. Fred Stegling. Before that, Hegebarth served on the plan commission for four years, having been appointed by former Village Pres. Richard Thomas in 1963.

THE CANDIDATE for the state house said he has "a profound interest in municipal and all forms of government." Before serving as trustee, he was active on several citizens committees for school referendum.

In speaking of his political program, Hegebarth said, "My basic platform will be simple honesty, integrity and service to the community." He said his active campaign began as soon as he filed his petition in Springfield on Monday.

Facing an incumbent is never an easy job, and Hegebarth said he recognizes that fact.

"It'll be a tough battle, but I'm not adverse to hard work," he said.

Hegebarth has been a Bensenville resident for 20 years. He has been a member of the Lions Club for 12 years and has served on its board of directors. He has also served as an elder in his church, Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church. He has been employed by Aetna Bearing Co. of Chicago for 33 years as an engineer.

THE CANDIDATE said he wants to "get all over the district to speak to as many groups and individuals as possible." He plans to speak to civic groups, women's clubs and "any group that's interested in hearing me."

When asked where he thought his major backing would come from Hegebarth answered "Disheartened Democrats and independents."

Hegebarth and his wife, Ann, are the parents of three children. Their son, Donald, is chairman of the Bensenville Plan Commission and a member of the zoning board of appeals. Another son, Dennis, lives in Schaumburg, and their youngest Voters in Fenton High School Dist. 100 will be asked to vote again on a 25-cent educational tax rate increase.

The Dist. 100 board of education voted Tuesday to schedule to the referendum for Feb. 7.

"We have no alternative," Morton Wright, board member, said. Other members present agreed with his opinion. This will be the fourth attempt since January to pass the educational fund rate increase.

Supt. Martin Zuckerman told the board that unless a tax hike is approved by the voters in early February, no additional tax revenue will be available for the fall of 1970. By law any rate increase after the beginning of February will not be reflected in the budget until a year from the following fall, or September 1971.

BOARD MEMBER Jesse Parrish expressed his regret over the early date but echoed Wright's saying, "What else can we do?"

Fenton is currently operating on a curtailed program. Last spring, faced with a large and growing deficit in the educational fund, the board directed the various departments to cut back their programs for a total curtailment of $140,000.

The board's most recent attempt to pass a referendum was Dec. 2 when the proposal was voted down almost 3 to 2 by district residents. The campaign to pass that referendum was described as "low key."

Board members discussed the approach to be used during this campaign. Martin Romme said he felt the board should spend the time between now and February "looking at the school program."

Board president James DiOrto said he will spend the next month addressing various local civic and homeowners groups in order to "tell them our story."

IN OTHER business the board heard music department chairman Fred Lewis present a report on what curtailments have meant for his department. Lewis told the board many students were unable to take music this year because of the elimination of one period in the day. Lewis also pointed out that part of the music department's cut-backs was the elimination of a marching band whose absence, he said,

"has been criticized by many members of the community."

In his report Lewis said, "It is most difficult to build organizations and then, of your own volition, begin to hack at them without any regard or feeling for them. In my present position, I feel I have had to do just this."

Another item on the board's agenda was verification of a change of title for Kenneth Carroll from business manager to assistant superintendent in charge of business affairs. After much discussion about the change, the motion to change Carroll's title was approved by a vote of 3 to 2. Two board members were absent from the meeting.

The board also voted to go ahead with an organizational study in a combined effort with the Bensenville Elementary School Dist. 2 board. The purpose of the study will be to determine if a unit district, which shares administrators between two districts, is the most efficient method of management. The Dist. 100 board will pay the cost of the study in proportion to their percentage of students in the combined districts—approximately one third.

'Beeline' Founder Dies in Inverness

H. Edison Birginal, founder and chairman of the board of directors of Beeline Fashions in Bensenville, died Wednesday in his home of unknown causes. Birginal, 60, of Inverness, was formerly of Arlington Heights.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Highway, Arlington Heights.

Beeline Fashions is a nationwide distributor of women's apparel through the In-Home Party Plan. Birginal and his wife Beatrice, for whom Beeline was named, founded the company in 1945 on a $2,000 GI loan. Acting as his own salesman, Birginal went door-to-door in Illinois and Wisconsin selling hosiery and building up his business.

BY THE START of the sixties, the company had achieved national distribution and evolved its unique network of home stylists that was to make Beeline the largest seller of clothing through the home party plan.

Sample merchandise is brought into the hostess' home and displayed in a relaxed, party-type atmosphere. The woman acting as hostess invites the guests present to act as models for the fashions. She then receives the purchase price from her guests and when the fashions are delivered, the guests may pick them up from their hostess.

Today, Birginal's company is generating more than $50 million in annual sales and is represented by more than 20,000 stylists in the United States and Canada. The plant and offices located in Bensenville employ 250 persons, making Beeline the single largest employer in the community.

BIRGINAL, in addition to being chairman of the board at Beeline, was also on the board of directors of Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines and served in the past as director of the Direct Selling Association located in Washington, D. C.

Surviving are his wife, Beatrice; a daughter Shirley; two sons, Gary and Kirk; three brothers, Laurence, William and Sylvester; and eight grandchildren.

Highland Bid Awards Delayed

Awarding of received bids for renovation of Highland School in Wood Dale Dist. 7 was deferred this week until the two apparent low bidders have been contacted by Alexander, Borkin, Westphal and DeYoung, school architectural firm.

School officials, meeting in an adjourned meeting Tuesday night, found seven contracting firms bidding on the renovation work for the school district's oldest facility located on North Wood Dale Road.

Delay in awarding the contract which will bring Highland School up to standards of the state life safety code, was prompted by the apparent low bids falling in excess of the architect's estimate of $154,000.

Less than $300 separated the two low bidders W. F. Fitzsimmons & Co., Hoffman Estates, with a bid of $165,420 and C. W. Gaasrud, Inc., Park Ridge with $165,717.

WILLIAM HEGBARTH has filed as a candidate for state representative of the 37th district. He will run in the democratic primary, opposing incumbent William Redmond. Hegebarth has been a Bensenville trustee for three years and before that served on the plan and zoning boards.

Itasca to Seek Sewer Bids

The Itasca Village Board, acting in the capacity of the Board of Local Improvements, resolved a long-standing sewer problem Wednesday night by officially allowing for open bids on a storm sewer project.

The action came after a marathon debate developed between protesting village residents and various board members during a two hour "talkathon."

Village President Wilbert Nottke opened the discussion by reading a legal decision released by Judge William J. Guild of the 18th Judicial Circuit Court of DuPage County.

He denied a protesters' petition and agreed with the village assessment of $40-$45 per year (approximately $450 over a 10 year period) for the installation of storm sewers in a controversial basin area in the southeast portion of Itasca.

MOST OF NOTTKE'S words fell on deaf ears and a debate soon emerged between opposing residents of the project, headed by Gene Phillips, and proponents of the plan backed by Nottke and Village Attorney Lawrence Traeger Jr.

Emotions and embarrassment were further heightened when two former village presidents, Paul Baehne and James Clayton, who Nottke said would be available to inform the residents of past proceedings on the sewer issue, failed to appear. One of the absentee spokesmen resigned his post as village president because of the same sewer controversy.

Phillips requested that the board take some kind of action because his group of 118 known objectors had only Jan. 2 to file an appeal.

The objecting group of homeowners contends that the sewer installation is inequitable because it will benefit primarily that land which is unimproved. The dissenters believe the entire project only benefits those people who have property directly involved.

"LEGALLY YOU have won the battle but morally you have not," Phillips said. "The majority (65 per cent) of the people in the area still object to the assessment." After Trustee Roy Petherbridge informed citizens the board represented the "silent majority," the purported "vocal minority" indicated that from 85-90 per cent of the people concerned are in opposition to the sewer assessment.

Petherbridge suggested that Phillips and his dissent group conduct a poll or circulate a petition that showed the number of residents who oppose the project.

"If you come up with 99 per cent or a big majority of the people who are against the sewer, I would certainly have to agree with it," Nottke said.

NOTTKE AGREED that if a tie among the board members arose on the sewer issue, he would cast his deciding vote against the project.

The Board of Local Improvements, which convened promptly following the adjournment of the village board, designated Feb. 3 as the final day for acceptance of all bids.

Overlooked, but almost as important was the annexation by the board of 74 acres of land from Commonwealth Edison and the Central Manufacturing District (CMD).

Itasca officials had requested that Commonwealth Edison annex its 25 acres of R-1 zoning (single family dwelling) to the village. The power utility did so willingly.

"They are doing us a favor. This annexation is a stepping stone to getting the Granville Subdivision in the village," said Nottke.

THE 25 ACRES is north of the Itasca Country Club and borders 1800 feet west of Prospect Avenue and has Granville Avenue as its northern boundary.

The village trustees then proceeded to double that evening's first annexation with unanimous approval of annexation of 49 acres of CMD property. The second site lies east of Meacham Road and extends north to the DuPage County line. The new area lies 2,000 feet west of Route 53 and is approximately 1,000 feet north of Thornedale Road.

The board also accepted the Planning Commission's recommendation that the newly-annexed land be changed from R-1 to M-1 (light manufacturing zoning).

"That's more land than we have annexed in years," said Petherbridge following the formal approval.

Immediately after officially acquiring the new territory, Nottke suggested the board reinstate an annexation fee because it was needed for preservation of the tax base for schools. Itasca had removed the fee to encourage annexation.

DEBATE AROSE among Nottke and board members on whether the village could impose an annexation fee without a legal ordinance to do so. Robert Bremmer, attorney for CMD, said that "certainly you should pass my annexation if you passed Edison's without a fee."

Petherbridge agreed and the other trustees followed his recommendation. Nottke placed the annexation ordinance fee on the agenda for the next board meeting.

Delay Building Report to Jan. 6

The Citizens Advisory Council (CAC) of Lake Park High School Dist. 108 deferred compilation Monday of its final report on recommendations to school officials on future and immediate site and building needs until Jan. 6.

This was the date set by temporary chairman Al Eichstadt following presentation of reports by key subcommittees.

According to Eichstadt, the council's steering committee will evaluate the detailed data on educational needs, public opinion, economic factors and population trends offered by the various study groups representing a cross-section of residents within the school district.

ALTHOUGH NO definite indication was given during the evening session there was evidence that communication of the problems facing Dist. 108 and proposed courses of action would receive top priority by school officials.

The council was noncommittal about whether or not a referendum election would be recommended to members of the board of education. The seriousness of the problems facing the school district in 1970 could trigger implementation of split or double shifts.

Possible curtailment of band and chorus may be made as a temporary measure until adequate plant facilities are available.

The emergency measures may be necessary to meet the anticipated increase in student enrollment in 1970 sparked by current residential developments until solutions are finalized.

LAKE PARK High School is busting at the seams and it is not unlikely that Dist. 108 will find any solace from developers in easing its current crisis, according to officials.

The citizens advisory council could recommend to school officials that a referendum election is a must to provide facilities for at least another 1,000 students.

Land availability for additional sites is now at a premium and 50 acres is not easy to come by.

It has been estimated that a new facility would cost around $7 million if lucky, but this could go higher each year.

STANLEY ROSSOL, Itasca Police Chief, who has been chosen the new Itasca radio operator Karen Devine president of the DuPage County Chiefs of Police Association, shows how to fill out reports.

Rossol to Head Police Association

The DuPage County Chiefs of Police Association Wednesday elected Itasca Police Chief Stanley Rossol as the group's 1970 president. Rossol served as vice-president of the organization this past year.

Other officers elected include John Beukema of Hinsdale for first vice president, Harry Mottlow of Westmont for second vice president, Lee Applegate of Wheaton for treasurer, Joel Kagan of Woodridge for secretary, State's Atty. William Hopf for legal counsel, Herman Jones of Lombard for sergeant-at-arms and Dan D'Aquila of Downers Grove for a three-year term on the executive board.

IN OTHER business, the association voted to sponsor a hospitality room at the Illinois Police chiefs Bi-annual meeting on January 18 and 19 in St. Charles.

IT WAS decided that since the meeting is being held in DuPage County, it would be appropriate for the DuPage association to sponsor the hospitality room and serve as hosts for the event.

The association also heard from Kenneth VanDoren, executive director of the DuPage County Mental Health Department. Van Doren outlined the services of his department and told the chiefs they could use the personnel of the Mental Health Division to aid them in dealing with disturbed individuals.

VanDoren said he and his department are attempting to broaden their program by asking cooperation from all persons such as police and ministers who come in daily contact with a lot of people.

He said one out of every ten persons in the United States is in need of professional counseling care but added that many will not admit they need help. VanDoren asked the police chiefs to cooperate with his department in helping these people.

ONE MEMBER of the audience asked VanDoren if his organization has a 24-hour emergency service. He said they don't at the present time, but are hopeful that such a service can be put into effect in the future.

Edward M. Kowal, first assistant state's attorney, urged the association to lend their support to the programs of the Mental Health Department. Kowal said the association could help by urging the county and state to appropriate more funds for the programs on mental health, and said he feels the department is making a strong contribution to the residents of DuPage County.

Kowal also spoke of the need for a comprehensive educational system for all policemen in the county. He said funds are available for sponsoring courses in police science and added that he is presently trying to find out more information on just what monies are available for the program.

Walter Tett, Bensenville police chief, commended Kowal and his staff for a police course they held recently for patrolmen in the county. Tett said his men reported the course was beneficial and interesting.

Bensenville Man Faces 3 Charges

Larry D. Maehlemkamp, Lot 162A, 7500 Elmhurst Road, Bensenville, was charged with driving on a revoked drivers license, driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage in Wheeling Wednesday evening.

Maehlemkamp was charged by Wheeling police at 6:50 p.m. after he was stopped by Patrolman Billy Ralston on Hintz Road near Glenn Avenue.

Ralston reported that he stopped the car after he observed it swerve across the center line, back into its own lane, off the road onto the shoulder, and back across the center line again.

Police reports indicated that Maehlemkamp's drivers license had been permanently revoked in 1967.

Maehlemkamp was released later Wednesday night on $1,000 bond. A Feb. 2 hearing date for the case in Arlington Heights District Court was set.

School Show Tonight

The choir and bands of Blackhawk Junior High School, Bensenville, will hold a concert tonight in the auditorium at 8 p.m. The school is located at 5N060 Church Road.

The band is under the direction of Nate Turner. The chorus and choir are directed by Mrs. Marlene Hack.

The choir will dedicate three of its songs to Jeffrey Lythcke, a Blackhawk seventh grader who died last week of a brain hemorrhage.

DEMOCRATIC STATE candidates met Tuesday to discuss the issues with DuPage County press. Adlai Stevenson III, left, State Senator Alen Dixon, center, and Dr. Michael Bakalis met in Elmhurst. Stevenson, running for U. S. Senator, intends to campaign heavily in DuPage. Dixon wants to be state treasurer and blamed the failure of the state voting machine bill on DuPage County Board pressure. Bakalis, an assistant dean at Northern Illinois University, is seeking the office of superintendent of public instruction.

If Joe and Jane Really Cared . . .

by Staff of The DuPage County Family Service Association

"If Joe cared anything about me, he would have been more sympathetic when I had a headache last week."
"If Jane really loved me, she would have been more understanding when I was having all that trouble on the job last month."

These are the kinds of complaints that case workers at Family Service Association of DuPage County hear very often in the course of their working day.

Extension Cord Leads to Y Sale

What may be the longest extension cord in the world leads to the Twinbrook YMCA Y's Men's Christmas Tree sale.

An extension cord from Robert Frost Junior High School one-quarter of a mile away provides electricity for the salesmen.

The trees are being sold as the Y's Men's Club's first project on the new YMCA's 15-acre tract on Wise Road just west of Roselle Road in Schaumburg.

THE Y'S MEN chose the site because they wanted to focus attention on the site and develop its identity.

Y's Men were shocked when they learned there was no electricity. Y-Indian Guider John Skoney, Roselle, an electrician, solved the club's most current problem by stringing a 1,320 foot extension cord from the school to the temporary "Tree Forest."

"Club members got a charge out of that," Skoney said.

Salesmen are on duty evenings from 5:30 until 9 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday throughout the day.

"We are going to use profits from our sale to develop the site for our Y-Day Camp," said Gordon Borske, Schaumburg, Y's Men's Christmas Tree chairman.

Planned improvements for the site include a shelter and program area for the summer camping program.

The fact is that Joe might have been very sympathetic . . . in his own way or that Jane may have tried to convey understanding in a way her husband failed to comprehend. Everybody just got their signals crossed.

Perhaps Joe, who saw that his wife was depressed and miserable, tried to cheer her up by telling her all the latest office jokes, or by turning on her favorite TV show. What she wanted him to do was to offer to cook dinner and get her the aspirin. She took his apparent cheerfulness to mean lack of sympathy for her headache.

JANE MAY HAVE started to talk about their planned vacation when she saw that her husband was unhappy about his job. She thought that she might divert him from his troubles and give him something to look forward to.

The husband may have interpreted her action as lack of concern for his job problems . . . he wanted her to tell him that, of course, the boss was all wrong, and he would certainly be missed . . . should he ever decide to quit.

In both cases Joe had some very specific ideas about how they wanted love and sympathy conveyed . . . and they were not prepared to accept any other token of affection.

They were also not prepared to explain to their spouses what they expected by way of sympathy and understanding. As a result, their partners, who found their expression of affection rejected, became angry and resentful, and a whole cycle of conflict and misunderstanding had started.

A COUNSELOR is often able to help a troubled person to trace some of his annoyance down to its source. Why did he interpret Jane's action as lack of concern, when to an uninvolved observer they clearly indicate a desire of help? Why does he have such strong pre-conceived notions of how love and sympathy must be shown?

With the help of the Family Service counselor Joe or Jane can discover that no one meant to hurt their feelings . . . that, indeed, their spouse was trying to help in his own way. They learn also to understand that it is important to be able to recognize and accept love and affection in the way that it is actually given . . . not in the way in which it is imagined.

One of the most important results of counseling can be this untangling of crossed signals. If Joe and Jane are able to recognize signs and tokens of affection that are characteristic of their spouses, they will often find these more precious than the ones that they imagined to be appropriate.

Family Service is supported by Community Chest and United Fund.

Rift Ends, Clerk Sworn In

After six months of indecision, the Bloomingdale Village Board voted four to one to appoint Mrs. Fortune LoPresti as village clerk Wednesday night. Mrs. LoPresti was sworn in by Village Pres. Robert Meyers immediately after the village board meeting.

Mrs. LoPresti had been recommended by Meyers for the position in July after the resignation of Mrs. Dorothy Gallo.

Trustee Wallace Geils was the only dissenting vote. Trustees Werner Troesken and Robert Buckles were absent from the meeting.

The vote on Mrs. LoPresti's appointment came after a motion by Trustee Paul Ahlrich to table the motion failed. Ahlrich wanted the full board to vote on the matter.

Ahlrich's and Geils' votes to table the motion were overridden by Trustees J. Stewart May, Ralph Johnston and Meyers.

MAY POINTED out the absent trustees had previously abstained from voting on the issue "and obviously did not have an opinion on it."

"Since there were no other petitions for the position and no other alternate solutions," May moved for the appointment of Mrs. LoPresti.

Meyers asked for the motion "In lieu of Mrs. LoPresti's performance as clerical assistant to the deputy clerk." She has been working in the clerk's office since September as a secretarial assistant to Mrs. Kay Funk, deputy clerk, who had been carrying out the duties of clerk.

At the end of the meeting Mrs. Funk said it was a pleasure to sit among the "gentlemen on the board" as deputy clerk.

"At times it was interesting, very hectic, very educational and rewarding," she said. "I am sure the village will find Mrs. LoPresti an asset."

Original opposition to Mrs. LoPresti's appointment arose when it was alleged she had not paid a water bill to the village. Investigation into the matter revealed there had been confusion over an adjustment of a bill contested by Mrs. LoPresti. She finally settled when she said a corrected $46 dollar bill.

In a statement issued Thursday, Mrs. LoPresti said:

"It will be my pleasure to work with the village trustees and with the people of Bloomingdale. I tip my hat to Mrs. Funk who carried the ball efficiently and expeditiously during the period of time the village was without a clerk. It will be an asset to the clerk's office to have her remain as deputy village clerk."

Itasca's Police Dept. to Expand

The Itasca Police Department will be gaining more room for the New Year according to Chief Stanley Rossol.

The available space being provided is the former fire department garage adjacent to the police station which will house all fingerprinting, booking, mugshots plus police lockers.

Chief Rossol said, "We need space and we're very happy to be able to enlarge our quarters. Now subjects under arrest can be taken directly to this new room and not disturb police communications."

Concert Set at Addison Trail

Music will fill the air around Addison Trail High School today starting at 7:30 p.m. when the annual Christmas concert is presented.

The school band will play Christmas carols and related classical music. Following the band, the orchestra will perform Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto Number 2," for solo violin, oboe, trumpet and flute. Variations will also be played on such traditional carols as "Joy to the World."

OPENING WITH A traditional candlelight procession, the concert will start promptly at 7:30 p.m. The audience is requested to be seated at least five minutes beforehand.

Freshman girls' choir will perform "Carol of the Shepherds," a Bohemian carol, "Angels We Have Heard on High," "Winter Wonderland," and Christmas hymns from the 12th century.

The Junior Choir will sing "Guiding Star," "Go Tell It On the Mountain," and "The Conqueror Comes."

"Hush, My Dear," by Bach and the "Christmas Song" will be performed by the Girls' Glee Club.

ADDISON TRAIL Concert Choir will sing "We Wish You the Merriest," "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," by Bach, "Do You Hear What I Hear" by Simeone, "Carol of the Bells," "Jingle Bells" by J. Pierpont, and a Spanish carol "Fum, Fum, Fum." Accompaniment will be by Carol Nelson.

The program will be held in the school auditorium. John Duckwall conducts the orchestra and the band is led by William Geis. Richard Anderson, music department head, conducts the choirs.

Lake Park Cites Steger, Explains Insurance

"All of us in this auditorium today should feel very honored, because we are seeing perhaps the most significant event in the history of high school athletics in Illinois."

With those words, Carl Forrester, Lake Park High School superintendent, commenced a 45-minute ceremony at Lake Park Thursday morning that paid tribute to Gary Steger — the Lancer quarterback who was severely injured in a football game in September 1968 — and announced a new catastrophe insurance plan for high school students that will go into effect Jan. 1, 1970. (It was Gary's injury that brought to light the need for such insurance.)

Moments prior to Forrester's comments, a jam-packed crowd in the auditorium had risen in unison to give Gary (whom Sun-Times sports columnist Bill Gleason later called the most inspirational individual he had ever met in the world of sports) a standing ovation.

UNDER THE new catastrophe insurance program — the most far-reaching plan in the nation — over 200,000 students at the Illinois High School Association's (IHS) 794 member senior high schools will be covered for medical and hospital expenses through accidental injuries, up to $105,000.

The official announcement of the insurance plan came from Harry Fitzhugh, executive secretary of the IHS, during the convocation Thursday sponsored by WIND Radio.

"Through this insurance program we will be covering all male and female interscholastic activities, both athletic and non-athletic, involving students from member IHS schools," Fitzhugh said.

The insurance will cover some 134,000 male participants in the playing and/or practicing of all interscholastic sports. It also includes coverage of 20,000 girls involved in interscholastic sports such as field hockey, badminton, and 35,000 young people involved in non-athletic activities such as drama, speech, debate, band, orchestra, etc. Coverage also involves travel to and from the site of competition.

THE PLAN calls for payment of medical and hospital expenses in excess of $5,000 and ranging up to $105,000, which could extend over a four-year period. Most schools now provide $5,000 or more in basic coverage. A $1,000 death benefit also is included under the program.

"There are seven states currently holding catastrophe insurance up to $25,000," Fitzhugh added, "but we're certainly the first to provide coverage exceeding $100,000."

Announcement of the program came two and a half months after Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's veto of House Bill 2187 which would have provided catastrophe coverage.

The bill, introduced in the legislature last spring by Rep. William Redmond (D-Bensenville) and Sen. Jack Kneuper (R-Elmhurst), passed both Houses by overwhelming margins and was vetoed when the IHS offered to provide blanket insurance coverage with the costs to be underwritten by receipts from the state championship basketball tournament.

THE IHS's state-wide program will cost each school district about $40 annually as compared with expenses insurance authorities estimated might have cost $400 per school under individual coverage.

WIND Radio, and particularly editorial director Charles Cleveland, played an active role in the development of such insurance coverage, having worked with Rep. Redmond and Sen. Kneuper in preparation of the legislation.

Libraries Become 'Mini-Mass Media Centers'

The increasing emphasis on independent study and new curriculum developments in the Community High School Dist. 88 schools have opened new chapters in the services offered by the school libraries for the students and teachers.

Although hampered by the budgetary restrictions in effect in the Dist. 88 schools this year, the libraries have tried to pattern themselves as "mini-mass media centers," convenient storehouses of the written and the electronically-recorded word.

At Addison Trail high school, the newest of the Dist. 88 libraries will expand its services to the second floor next semester, when the school's audio-visual department puts into operation ten "listening stations," or "plugged-in" study carrels. The library is amassing a collection of tape cassettes to provide lessons, poetry, readings and music.

THE STUDY carrels, the result of new developments in courses and teaching techniques in the district are one phase of the "classroom laboratory library" concept in the three schools.

Pioneered by York 15 years ago, the concept divides the school library into specific departments, based on the major areas of the curriculum. At York, for example, the first floor library area is devoted to books, periodicals and other material in the useful (science) and fine arts, as well as fiction, college handbooks and vocational trade reference books and pamphlets.

"Our philosophy is basically that we are here to serve the students and the faculty," said Myrtle Ellis, York librarian. "We must see that the teacher has the books he needs in his curriculum and that the student has a place where he can find help in his assigned or independent study."

THE NEWER Addison Trail library is concentrated on the first floor, but will expand in a limited fashion with use of the "listening stations" on the second floor. A total of 18 carrels are planned for that area.

Specialized courses within the curriculum have resulted in additional library services. The resource center at Willowbrook is used extensively by students in the team-taught humanities classes. Reference works, tapes and slides in the resource center are also used by students in the new cinema-as-art class, by the English literature honors students and by certain history classes.

Each of the three levels (freshmen, sophomore and juniors) in Track II has its own classroom resource center.

The Addison Trail library is assisting with books and facilities in the new credit course in outside reading developed within the English department. The library is also stocking reference books and materials on vocational trades to assist those students enrolled in the school's work experience program.

ADDISON TRAIL'S library was the first to offer a circulating collection of art prints, which students can check out and keep for a month. The school's library currently has 200 prints, while Willowbrook has a collection of nearly 100.

The new "open door" study policies in the schools will mean even more business for the libraries.

Addison Trail is using the 11-period day, eliminating homerooms and allowing the students time for independent study. They are free, for a certain period of time, to pursue their own interests — study or browsing in the library, informal discussions or conferences with teachers and counselors.

Budgets for the libraries have been reduced because of the Dist. 88 austerity budgeting, making it almost impossible for the librarians to purchase sufficient new and replacement books for new courses and increasing enrollments.

YORK AND Willowbrook are working on library budgets of $5,500 each, as compared with a "normal" budget allocation of $12,000. Addison Trail, because its library is still in the developing stage, was allotted $9,000. The budget allocations must cover the library's purchase of new books, as well as other supplies.

Allice Parrish, Willowbrook librarian, said that $3,021 of her allotment is spent for the purchase of new books, $1,075 for bindings and supplies and $944 for periodicals and films. A survey taken by Miss Parrish of her own stock revealed that book prices have increased by 32 per cent in the last 10 years.

The American Library Association standard for school libraries is 10 books per student. York, with an enrollment of 3,225 this year, has approximately 25,000 books and paperbacks; Willowbrook, with an enrollment of 3,321, has approximately 23,000 books; while Addison Trail, with 2,312 enrolled and more coming next year, has approximately 11,500 books.

Dist. 88 Supt. R. Bruce Allingham recommended in his recent "position paper" that the budgetary reductions in the libraries and other instructional areas must not be extended further.

"WE CANNOT make further cuts in our funds for things like the libraries without hurting our educational program," Allingham assured the librarians at the recent curriculum meeting of the board of education.

"I was first attracted to this district when I noted the quality of its graduates in my college," Miss Mayfield, an Addison Trail library assistant, told the board of education. "Your libraries are interested in seeing that quality maintained."

The face that's launched a thousand trips.

Consultant's Article Is In Magazine

Teaching Consultant Serena Niensted of Wood Dale Elementary School Dist. 7 had her article, "Meaninglessness for Beginning Readers," published in the November issue of The Reading Teacher magazine.

The article stated that the "child may have trouble realizing that printed language is separated into words, that words can be isolated from spoken language and isolated words read from the page must be reassembled into ideas."

Mrs. Niensted has put her words into practice. During the current school year, Wood Dale kindergarten children are trying to avoid such "meaninglessness" for beginning readers by using the Distar program in which words are isolated, elongated and accelerated in a meaningful context.

The results have been prompt and successful as teachers report that children are learning more rapidly than previously expected.

OK Tuition Increase At College of DuPage

The Board of Trustees of the College of DuPage recently voted to increase tuition from $5 to $6 per quarter hour and to increase the service fee to $1 from 50 cents per quarter hour. This action was taken as a part of a revision of tuition fees requested by the Illinois Junior College Board.

The increased tuition will go into effect the fall quarter, 1970.

In adjusting the tuition, the trustees also converted tuition charges to a direct hourly rate. The College of DuPage policy had been to permit students to take from 14 to 18 quarter hours for tuition based on 14 credit hours.

Election procedures in DuPage County as conducted by the county clerk, Ray W. MacDonald, came under fire Monday when he allegedly refused to accept the primary petitions for 44 Democratic committeeman candidates in Addison and Bloomingdale Townships.

Democratic County Chm. W. A. Redmond, who attempted to file the nominating petitions, filed a petition for a writ of mandamus in the DuPage County Circuit Court Thursday which asks that the court order the county clerk to accept the petitions and place the names of the candidates on the primary ballot.

Redmond says he has complied with the law in every respect and the refusal was an arbitrary act on the part of the county clerk.

INVOLVED ARE SOME 500 citizens, candidates for committeeman and the signers on their petitions, 31 candidates from Addison and 13 from Bloomingdale townships. At least 10 party signatures are necessary on a committeeman's petition for it to be valid.

The Democratic chairman charges he arrived at the courthouse eastside parking lot on Monday, Dec. 15 and appeared at the main double entrance at five minutes to five and found it locked. He and his companion thought this strange and hammered loudly on the double glass doors but got no response.

This is the main entrance to the courthouse for people out of the Wheaton area who have to drive. This entrance takes care of the major courthouse traffic. Why was it locked before the five o'clock deadline on the last day for election filing?

After the frustration of waiting several vital minutes, Redmond went around to the north side and saw the lights on in the county clerk's office. Then he says he tried the north entrance and found this door unlocked. This entrance is used mainly by judges and officials who have reserved parking north of the courthouse.

But Redmond claims he got into the clerk's office at just 21 seconds to go. How did he know? The second hands on his watch and that of the clock on the office wall jibed.

Yet, according to Redmond, the county clerk claimed both the clock and his watch were slow. The right time, he said was 21 seconds after five. This was cutting it pretty thin.

"HE MUST HAVE got the time he called correct," the Democratic chairman said, "off the top of his head. I could see nothing to confirm it and much to invalidate it."

Another question then is if the Democratic chairman's watch and the county clerk's clock agreed on a point of accuracy of the time of day, both before five o'clock, what more was needed?

MacDonald gives this version of what happened: He says Redmond received the petitions a week ahead of the final day for filing. What was he doing in the meantime?

"He helped write and pass this election law as a legislator," the county clerk says, "and should be well informed how its provisions must be carried out."

These of course are matters of judicial

Driver Arrested

Larry D. Maehlenkamp of Lot 162A, 7500 Elmhurst Rd., Bensenville was charged with driving on a revoked drivers license, driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage Wednesday evening in Wheeling.

Maehlenkamp was charged after his car was stopped at 6:50 p.m. at the intersection of Hintz Road and Glenn Avenue by Wheeling Patrolman Billy Ralston.

Ralston reported that he stopped the car after observing it cross the center line of Hintz Road, swerve back into its own lane, off the road onto the shoulder, and then back across the center line again.

The driver was released on $1,000 bond Wednesday evening. A Feb. 3 court date in Arlington Heights District Court was set for the case.

determination after the two litigants state their cases respectively.

Redmond was somewhat incensed at first but said later that these kind of "she-nanigans" are probably going on throughout the state. His frustration was because he had worked hard with other Democrats in North DuPage County to get signatures properly on the 44 petitions.

The Democrats think they have the best ticket in years in candidates running for federal, state and county office. Without committeeman on the ballot, it's a tough task to elect write-in candidates. Committeemen get out the votes.

"I'M NOT BLAMING Elmer Hoffman (GOP chairman) for this kind of thing," Redmond remarked, "I've known him for a long time and although he is a tough conservative politician I don't think he plays this kind of pool."

But the Democratic chairman's Irish dander was up when asked if he would try to get some election law reforms in the Legislature he said: "You bet I will."

He said he would discuss it with other legislators and if possible would, himself, introduce legislation that give both a "Republican or a Democratic party candidate an every county in the state an equal and a fair opportunity" to get on an election ballot and participate in the elective process that we all brag about as "free."

But he will by all means bring it before the state election laws commission, he said, because if the taxpayers' voters' desires can be vetoed by the arbitrary whim of an election official it's time to be concerned.

WITH THIS AS a starter, there's bound to be more fire in the future. DuPage County has come of age and can expect more aggressive and more challenging politics between the two major parties.

High taxes, better government in the interest of all, and more and better services for all residents and voters, are issues that are bound to arouse citizens from their lethargy in this county.

The Way We See It

Con-Con: Good Start

Although the Illinois Constitutional Convention is only concluding its second week today, and it will be several more months before Illinois residents begin to see a new constitution taking shape, there already are reasons for optimism.

Except for a few minor flaws, it is unlikely that the state's sixth Constitutional Convention could have gotten off to a better start.

Partisan politics and geographic factions have been at a minimum thus far and in the few instances in which they have risen to the surface, they have been handled well by the convention leadership and convention delegates.

The first official action of the convention provided a good indication of the mood of the delegates and the prevailing climate in Springfield. In that instance, Samuel Witwer, a Republican attorney from Kenilworth, was elected temporary, then permanent, president of Con-Con.

Witwer has been highly regarded throughout the state as one of the leading campaigners for Constitutional revision. Many newspapers, both in Chicago and downstate, urged his election as Con-Con president and some have even called him the "father of Con-Con."

In 1960, Witwer was the Republican nominee for U.S. senator, losing to former Sen. Paul Douglas. This background in partisan politics could have been his undoing at Con-Con, or at least could have caused a deep split between Democrats and Republicans.

Yet in the election for temporary president, Witwer received 88 votes, indicating heavy support from both Democrats and downstaters. When it came time to elect a permanent president, there was no opposition and 107 of the 116 delegates voted for him.

The second clear indication of the mood of the delegates came shortly after the election when Richard M. Daley, son of Chicago's mayor, introduced a resolution rebuking Gov. Ogilvie for taking stands on some of the major issues. The delegates could have voted on the resolution and the roll call would have clearly pointed out the division between Republicans and Democrats.

But they didn't want to do that, so the resolution was tabled by a 71-42 vote, preventing an early partisan split and giving a polite, but firm, warning to young Daley that partisan politics won't be welcome.

Con-Con is expected to last about eight months and it may be two or three months before various constitutional proposals are aired. Until then, residents of the state should remain patient and may rest assured that the early indications point to a very successful convention.

Report Yuletide Vandals

by RICHARD BARTON

Yuletide home and apartment decorations are designed to bring Christmas cheer to the heart of the beholder. Many devoted residents spend hours of prudent care arranging lights and other objects in just the right way.

Most observers delight at seeing a brightly decorated neighborhood ring with holiday cheer. Unfortunately some people, and I use the reference lightly, think beautiful home decorations are for tearing up or stealing to destroy later.

THE CHRISTMAS vandal is like all the others throughout the year who strike out at beauty and serenity by defacing it, ruining its beauty for others to see. The guy who loses in the end is the property owner who must pay for damages out of his pocketbook through no fault of his own.

Addison police reports are full of minor incidents of wasteful destruction of property for "fun." The Christmas vandal like most others strikes like the sneak he is, at night. The warm glow of Yuletide merriment coming from a colored string of lights attracts the Christmas vandal like some type of freakish creature out of his cover of darkness.

The strike is sure and deadly like the wasp. One quick stroke and any string of lights or a plastic Santa Claus falls victim.

VANDALISM IS the leading crime among young people, according to several surveys of police records. It accounts for thousands, perhaps millions of dollars of useless waste every year. The Village of Bensenville recently spent thousands of dollars to repaint a water tower because it was covered with scribbled prose of midnight marauders.

The real crime came soon after the painting job was complete when unwanted lettering appeared again.

The word "vandal" is of Germanic origin. According to Webster's Seventh Collegiate Dictionary, there was a tribe of Germanic people named Vandals who overran Gaul (now France), Spain and northern Africa in the fourth and fifth centuries. The tribe ransacked Rome in 455 A.D.

A second meaning of "vandal" given by Webster's more befits the true modern meaning. It says a vandal is one who willfully or ignorantly destroys, damages or defaces property belonging to another or the public.

The Register has received several phone calls from citizens complaining about loss of property due to vandalism. A letter recently received read:

"Gentlemen:
"THIS LETTER is written in hopes that you can get across to some parents in Addison that other people's property means a lot to them.

"During this Christmas season, we would love to decorate our home outside, but we cannot. Last Monday night, it was proven. We put a string of colored lights on our garage and lo and behold, not two hours later four bulbs were missing.

"Maybe if you print a letter, maybe some parents will wake up and find out where their children are and what mischief they are getting into.

"I have children of my own, they are grown, but I always knew what they were doing and where they were at all time.

"Yours truly,
Edwin M. Janik
521 Willow Glen Addison"

THE TROUBLE may or may not lie with parental control but it certainly won't hurt to have some. Useless destruction is bad enough, but when it ruins a fine holy holiday season like Christmas, it is disgusting.

In the true holiday spirit, neighbor should help neighbor. If you see suspicious activity around someone else's apartment or home, report it to the police. Just chasing the potential troublemakers away may not stop them from coming back, maybe to strike your home next.

Our Card: Gift to Counseling Center

At Christmastime many corporations send cards to business friends to express heartfelt thanks for the holiday season and for their continued relationship.

For several years Paddock Publications has been substituting a contribution to a suburban charitable agency in lieu of the customary card. This year a check will be sent to the Salvation Army Counseling Center.

We trust our friends will accept this contribution with the same pleasure they would greet a card. The Counseling Center offers help to married couples, homemakers, unmarried parents, families with parent-child problems and other individuals in need of counseling.

Our contribution, on behalf of our business associates, expresses their desire that Christmas be a happy time for those less fortunate.

Stevenson Eyes Suburbs

by CHARLES HUFNAGEL

The suburban voter in Chicagoland will cast the decisive vote in the 1970 elections and DuPage County may well be a major battleground in what now appears to be a critical election year shaping up.

This is the way Adlai Stevenson III, 39, present state treasurer and the Democratic party choice for the U.S. Senate slated in the March 17 primary looks at it.

STEVENSON WITH two other party choices for state office opened the coming campaign in DuPage County Tuesday when William A. Redmond, DuPage County Democratic party chief, arranged a press luncheon at Steven Steak House, Elmhurst.

The two other Democratic candidates for state office present were Alan Dixon, Belleville, who at 42 with 21 years in the state legislature is the candidate for state treasurer. He has served 12 years in the House and three terms in the Senate where he is now minority leader.

Michael Bakalus, 32, assistant dean at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, is the party's choice for state superintendent of public instruction. With a Ph.D. from Northwestern and teaching experience at the elementary, secondary and college levels, this candidate at 32 gives a new appraisal of education in Illinois and says a new direction is needed.

This represents the Democratic offering at the state and national level in 1970, a new generation in politics with ideas that reject the old party ideologies as capable of finding solutions to today's critical problems.

"RISING ANXIETY IN this country," Stevenson said, "among the young, the poor and the black raise grave doubts about the future of free government in America."

He said we as a free people are at a critical point in history, a fork in the road which could lead us through misunderstanding, selfishness and defeatism to self-destruction or with the restoration of confidence in our institutions toward a rich new era for all to participate and enjoy.

The fault, he thinks, is not in our stars but in us, and we have it within our power to set a new direction. This will be a basic theme in the coming campaign to restore faith in our neighbor and confidence in a free society established on a common ground of equal opportunity with justice for all.

This is an appeal to the intelligence and compassionate understanding of all people of good will. Stevenson brought memories of the concerns of his father when he said at all times he would talk sense to the people of Illinois in the coming campaign.

In the question and answer period, Stevenson gave peace in the world today as the primary issue. He said he opposed escalation in Vietnam from the beginning and endorsed the withdrawal steps now being undertaken by President Nixon.

ON THE QUESTION of Vietnamization, he has his reservations but added his position on Southeast Asia would be announced later. However, he did not hesitate to say that continued growth in armaments must be stopped and ways must be found by the men of good will and understanding in all nations.

Military armaments are breaking the backs of taxpayers, distorting the economies of the nations of the world and becoming a cause for dissension in the social order. They are a constant threat to domestic and world peace, even survival.

The press and modern means of communication, like Jefferson said, are more important than ever in the functioning of a free government in a technological age, Stevenson remarked.

In fact what he called for was leadership and in a new direction. His Democratic party, he believes, can and must find such leadership on state and national levels in this age of crisis.

Living in a new age of the miracles of technology, this Democratic Senate candidate appears to be telling us that we must restructure our institutions and methods of governing to meet the needs of rich and poor, old and young, the educated and those lacking and the unfortunate as well as the favored.

Dr. Milton Eisenhower in comments on crime in America alluded to poverty and lack of opportunity as causes. He documented his statement from the English historian, Toynbee, who said that of the 21 great nations that once were supreme in the world, 19 disintegrated because of failure to cope with internal problems.

Crane: Instant Demands Cause Frustration

(Copy of letter to State Editor Ed Murnane.)

This is to acknowledge receipt of your very thoughtful column and I have read it with considerable interest.

I appreciate your expression of confidence in me as a Congressman and I want to assure you that, although getting reelected is important, the reason I sought this office was to be able to contribute what I could to the solution of problems facing our society.

In regard to the questions you have asked concerning racial strife and its causes, I will not attempt to give you unsound pat answers.

One difficulty of our age is that we are becoming "instant oriented." We have instant food, instant beverages, super sonic transportation, instant communication, etc. Our advertisers constantly sell their products as "quicker and easier." We are being conditioned always to look for quick easy solutions to our problems. If the study of history has taught me anything it has convinced me that in free societies there are never quick and easy solutions to major social problems.

THIS PRINCIPLE definitely applies to our racial problems. I think one of the major causes of racial strife today is that many of our Negro leaders are demanding instant solutions and such expectations result in cruel frustrations and disappointment when people discover that there are no instant solutions.

It is a historical fact that a free enterprise economic system has always produced the highest standard of living. I believe the solution to the Negro's problem is basically one of economics and that the Negro's best chance of economic success is within the framework of our free enterprise system. I also believe that a welfare state is inconsistent with our economic system and can ultimately destroy it. In addition, I am convinced that no governmental body can solve the Negro's problem. Only he can solve it. We can best help him by seeing to it that we have an economy that will make opportunity available to him. Jefferson's reference to man's inalienable right to the "pursuit of happiness" has been misconstrued to mean a right to happiness. The emphasis in that phrase is on the word "pursuit" which involves the preservation of opportunity.

Our government cannot and should not attempt to support its citizens. Rather, what it should do is help to maintain an economic climate in which opportunity exists for all, what Woodrow Wilson once described as a free field with no favors.

The road ahead for the Negro is long

I read with interest Dick Barton's articles in the Dec. 10 issue of the Register. I would like to express my appreciation for the fine job you have done relating to the community education programs and needs in Dist. 4.

Service 'Bad'

I feel I must voice my objection to renewing the contract with Laseke Disposal Co.

We get very poor service and I don't know of one person I've talked to who is satisfied. The rate we pay for garbage pick-up is so high; way too high.

THE THING THAT also bothers me is that there have been meetings about the renewal of the contract, but no one seems to suggest any alternative. Why aren't we getting any bids from other disposal companies?

I think it is fairly obvious this situation is probably all settled already between the city officials and Laseke. Something is wrong or should I say rotten in Arlington Heights and I'm not talking about garbage.

Women Antifeminist, Too

In regard to the lively column by Ken Knox in the Dec. 1 paper, entitled "Girls, You've Gone Too Far," I have a few comments which may be of interest to you.

This column was well written and very well taken. It shows, however, an astounding problem in male comprehension of the kind of persons who are crashing down the barriers. The problem that seems most prevalent is the use of the terms women, girls and females as synonyms.

Women don't complain about chivalry being dead. It isn't dying where one is a true woman. A woman — a person who is aware of and content in her femininity — regardless of her age, education, employment (if any), marital status or the number of children she has, need not worry about whether she'd be served a drink at Berghoff's Men's Grill. She probably wouldn't go into any establishment having a bar without an escort.

JUST BECAUSE some female beings are so immature that they feel discriminated against, that does not classify them as representative of all women.

Women don't swear in company, booze with men or swap smutty stories with them. They may try to put up a brave front when such stories are told in their presence, but probably feel uncomfortable. Women don't need to be one of the guys. They may need to vote, to hold a professional position which suits their education and ability, to run for and hold public office, to be able to speak at public meetings and listened to with respect, but they don't need to be one of the boys. Look at our Congresswoman, our Con-Con delegate, our school boards, village, park and library boards in Northwest Cook County. We have many women of merit here. Are they "one of the boys?"

Tasteless Timing

While I support the right of people to demonstrate their political beliefs in any peaceful manner, it seems to me the holding of moratorium days during the season we traditionally celebrate the birth of Christ sets a record for bad taste.

Considering the basic anti religion philosophy of communism, what could be more insulting to Christians than pro communist demonstrations at Christmas time? What could be more ironic than the participation of some people that proclaim themselves to be Christians? John C. Hurley Palatine

We aren't Amvets, Letionnaires, Masons, Elks, Lions, Rotarians or Jaycees and don't feel the need to be. We can be the match of any guy on the block in terms of position (including salary), intelligence and influence without losing our femininity.

We still bear the children, make the home, prepare the meals, bake the breads, coffee cakes and cookies. We are the wives, lovers and mothers of time eternal.

THE GIRLS WHO need to crash Berghoff's also need something more fundamental. They need to grow up. Maybe if some nice men would make them feel femininity is not a banishment to kitchen and diapers but a glory which can and should extend out from the home, they would emerge as the kind of women we know and hold dear. True woman are not a vanishing breed, but then we don't get front page coverage in the Chicago dailies like our immature sisters.

I hope this note will be of assistance in clarifying the situation. Most women deplore the women's rights movements as much as men, perhaps more.

Elk Grove Strong for Crane

An open letter to Mr. Edwin J. Kudalis of Mount Prospect about his Fence Post letter of Dec. 5.

Dear Mr. Kudalis: I would like to present some facts in response to your letter which appeared in Fence Post on Dec. 5 regarding the recent Crane-Warman congressional race.

Had you been active in the Elk Grove GOP you would have been aware of the effort put forth for Phil Crane was most complete. This was particularly evident as every precinct in the township went heavily for Crane, and this would not have been the case had the organization's effort been half-hearted.

AS YOU KNOW, political organizations here in the suburbs are virtually 98 per cent volunteer, and getting out the vote is just a part, the important one, of the year 'round job that must be done. Many of our people take a day off from work to help on election day but cannot as easily do so in off years or during special elections.

A lot of time and effort on the part of the organization is spent analyzing each precinct, and where gaps occur, an effort is made to fill in with new workers, particularly phone workers. It takes organization to determine where you need help, and I know personally that the initiative for getting phone workers was taken by the Elk Grove organization, and every precinct was covered.

Regarding the 35 per cent voter turnout, consider that this special election occurred only two days before Thanksgiving and many people were already out of town or so pre-occupied with holiday plans that it was most difficult to motivate them to vote. In addition, the election came on the heels of a school referendum, the Con-Con election, plus the two primaries. People were tired of voting and getting them out was like pulling teeth. Because of this, every township had difficulty getting a turnout on Nov. 25.

All of us active in the Elk Grove GOP are proud of our political credentials. We worked for Goldwater in '64 giving him 65 per cent of the vote. Last year President Nixon carried the township with 69 per cent and Phil Crane garnered 74.6 per cent with over 5,000 more votes in November than he received in the primary. Elk Grove led the 13th Congressional District in percentage for Crane and gave him a 4,600 vote plurality over Warman. This is hardly the effort of an "ad hoc committee of the Democratic Party."

MR. KUDALIS, the best way for an individual to shape the philosophy and direction of a political party is to become active in the party and exert influence in person. We're grateful if you made phone calls for Phil Crane on Nov. 25, and we hope you will continue to be active in the future on behalf of Republican candidates. We hope you will be seeing you at Republican gatherings during 1970 and beyond. William C. Froude, Jr. Captain, Precinct 15 Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township

Shoveling Law

In view of some of the ridiculous proposals made recently by the Elk Grove Village plan commission, such as prohibiting services and businesses operated out of residential establishments, and placing restrictions on storage of boats, campers, etc. on residential property, I would suggest the following.

Why not propose an ordinance making it mandatory for all residential property owners to shovel their sidewalks that run horizontal to the street? Although some residents already do, many merely shovel their driveways forcing grade school children to walk to and from school on the street which has been plowed. Here is a good enforceable ordinance which eventually will probably save a child's life. Let's not wait until one of our children is struck or injured or killed by a car to get this one into the law books.

Spread Cheer

I want to tell you how favorably impressed we were by one of your Arlington Heights policemen. I am referring to the young man who was directing traffic at the corner of Duntun and Northwest Highway during the recent parade. He was wearing a blue helmet and boots.

He was so cheerful with a ready smile as he asked people to step back or gave other directions. He really added to the gaiety of the day with his friendliness. He did his job well too, giving clear directions so there was no confusion and, best yet, keeping everyone safe so there were no accidents to mar the day.

Thank you for such a nice morning in Arlington Heights and thanks to that policeman.

Mrs. Bernard Callahan (Editor's Note: The policeman whose cheerful manner brightened Mrs. Callahan's day is Officer Larry G. Thoren.)

Christmas Story 'Current'

Christmas in the United States is listening to the Christmas story read in churches across the land of how a Babe was born in a stable because there was no room for him at the inn. Smug in our piety we know that this happened long ago and refuse to believe that babies are still being born, living and dying in shelters every bit as poor as that one in Bethlehem — being born to hard working parents for whom the prosperity of our great country cannot provide decent homes.

These children are our neighbors, but we listen to the injunction, "Love thy neighbor as thyself" and embellish it with the fanciful interpretation that our neighbor means only the equally prosperous and only those with white skin.

EVERY OTHER neighbor becomes the anonymous "they" for whom we have all kinds of rhetorical questions. What do "they" want? Probably they want very much the same thing we want — respect, a warm home, a decent job.

Why do "they" act the way they do? Probably because their cries of frustration have gone unheeded so long that they become howls of rage and acts of violence.

Now in order to keep some of "them" safe from the dangers inherent in their substandard housing, we're burning their homes — worse than stables they often are, but still better than nothing at all.

Instead of immediately building adequate housing, we save our consciences by saying, "They were going back to Texas anyway." The truth probably is that they were going back to Texas only because they couldn't keep warm here in sub-zero weather by any means in their shelters. Housing is equally bad in Texas and there are few jobs. They were also planning to come back here in the spring to the jobs that so badly need them, but where will they live?

Communism Called Hard Road to Capitalism

by K. C. THALER

LONDON (UPI)—"Communism has degenerated into the longest and hardest way to capitalism."

In these cynical words an aging, lifelong East European Communist voiced recently his disillusionment over the course applied communism has taken in the 50 years since the Bolshevik revolution in Russia.

Two party-shaking events of the 1960s played a role in this old communist's disillusion—the Sino-Soviet split and the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

The first marked the collapse of the Communist monolith which, while it last embraced in a single bloc the more than one billion people of the Soviet Union, Red China and other Communist nations.

The second fragmented the loyalties and trust of millions of Communists around the world.

Both events, coupled with economic needs and pressures, will have strong influence on the path of world communism in the 1970s.

By general agreement of western experts and Communist leaders, the Sino-Soviet split which began at the start of the 1960s and grew progressively worse throughout the decade has come to stay—even if Peking and Moscow state relations seem to be papered over.

From this division, largely, stems the urge for more independence among East European countries, still suppressed by force of arms, and among Communist parties elsewhere.

Most experts believe the fragmentation of world communism begun in the 1960s will continue into the 1970s, with further erosion of the Kremlin's once firm control.

Communist parties outside the European bloc have had a hard time making Russia's invasion of Czechoslovakia—regarded as an "imperialistic tactic"—acceptable to their memberships. Many lost a considerable number of card holders in the wake of the Czech adventure. Some parties, including the key Italian and French parties in Europe, have remained basically unreconciled.

Neutral countries, too, and many among those of the so-called uncommitted third world, have thought to take a new look at Moscow-led communist strategy. In practical terms this has resulted in a cooling off toward—and in some cases a pulling back from—close cooperation with the communist bloc. This has been most marked in newly emerged countries of Africa and in Latin America.

Economically, developments in bloc countries, including the Soviet Union itself, have contributed to making the system less attractive.

Ten years ago, then Premier Nikita Khrushchev boasted publicly that Russia would overtake the United States' economy by 1970. Actually since then the technological gap between the two powers has widened markedly.

East European countries lately have begun to decentralize their economies and to put incentives and profit principles into operation, thereby trying to overcome damage resulting from the stifling centralization of the past. Russia, too, has been doing it to some degree.

Close observers of the communist scene believe that as a result of all this, and despite renewed repression and tighter controls in Russia and the bloc countries, the desire for more freedom—political, social and ideological as well as economic—will become stronger in the coming decade.

Their prognosis is that the 1970s will witness many changes within the communist orbit which, barring war, will find Moscow still the leader but less the ruler.

Aliens to Report Addresses Soon

Acting district director, W. G. Folts of the Immigration and Naturalization Service stated that aliens in the United States will be required to report their addresses to the Attorney General within the near future.

All aliens, with few exceptions, who are in the United States on Jan. 1 each year must report their addresses by the end of that month. Only the following classes of aliens are excused from this requirement: accredited diplomats, persons accredited to certain international organizations.

Forms with which to make the report can be obtained from any post office or Immigration and Naturalization Service Office during the month of January.

Folts said that the law provides severe penalties for failure to comply with the reporting requirement.

The Working Wife

How Home-Bound Mothers Earn Money

by MARY B. GOOD

With more jobs than people to fill them, today's working wife can pick and choose. Whether she has only precious hours free or all the time in the world, there's a slice of the economy earmarked for her.

Resourceful is the word for her. Part 1 of this series discussed the working wife's motivation; part 2 focused on how the working woman manages home and career. Today's article talks about home-bound mothers and how they find money-making things to do.

Mrs. Joel McMains of Bensenville doesn't want to be away from her three pre-schoolers. She doesn't want to pay somebody else to do what she enjoys doing. "Kids grow up too fast as it is," she said.

So she works around them, substitute teaching guitar to her husband's music students at home.

A woman who is husband and child-oriented, Mrs. McMains considers her husband's interests her interests. When Joel collected cobras, puff adders, gaboon vipers and other venomous creatures, Pat became a "snake charmer," too. The 23-year-old mother, married at 17, loves to play pool — like her husband — and learned to play the guitar from him.

"Teaching students on weekends is something different to look forward to. And it doesn't interfere with my home life," she said, plopping a bowl of cereal on the breakfast table for her oldest son.

Some women raise herbs or gerbils for sale, clip poodles or type. Some iron or do illustrations, write or mobilize whatever abilities they have.

A YOUNG Elk Grove Village mother finds it more profitable to work from home. She makes $5 an hour tutoring under-achieving elementary children. One Buffalo Grove homemaker, forced to quit her job as a high school teacher because of two tots at home, holds a neighborhood pre-school twice weekly.

A Schaumburg woman makes salable chalk accent pieces in her home. Mrs.

Richard Burton (Itasca artist Marie Zvanja Burton) gives art lessons to children and adults. In Palatine, Mrs. Pearson Brandelle whips up cruise dresses for her dressmaking customers for $75 apiece. "I'd rather paint than bake a cake," said Mrs. Donald Teichert. This Arlington Heights artist produces about 50 miniature paintings on wood each month for a local decorator shop — all at home.

SOMETIMES MOTHERS who want to work have to be extra resourceful. A Bensenville beautician discovered she was allergic to hair dye and other cosmetics, but that didn't sabotage her career. Now she gets $7 and up styling and cleaning wigs at home. Another woman has curlers and will travel — this area beautician is available to go to other people's homes on a 24-hour emergency service basis.

Working around eight children can be chaotic for Mrs. Charles Moser of Arlington Heights. She makes flower arrangements and decorations in her basement workshop. By giving occasional talks to garden clubs and women's groups, this accredited flower show judge has discovered the lecture circuit, another profitable way of earning money when you want it.

THE CONFERENCE of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen holds regular auditions for prospective lecturers who want to get on the coveted list for women's clubs, garden clubs, civic organizations, social groups and church affiliates. Knowledge can pay off when there is a familiarity with gardening, handwriting analysis, chamber music, decoupage, diamond appraising, wine tasting, Peace Corps, book reviewing, traveloguing, exercising, foreign policy, criminology or any number of topics geared to draw a crowd.

One enterprising Roselle lady has gone one step farther. She calls herself a "program counselor" and while she doesn't give talks, she rounds up foreign dignitaries, university heads, military VIP's and others as after-dinner speakers. How she does it is her secret, and she's clever enough to keep it to herself.

NEXT: Why does a woman go into business for herself?

GIVING SUBSTITUTE MUSIC lessons to her husband's students in her home is Mrs. Joel McMains' outlet. The mother of three, she feels strong family obligations. "I want my youngsters to enjoy their childhood." She may pursue her musical interests further, but not until the children are grown.

Painting Tips 'For Men Only'

by DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI)—Out of the morning mail come some painting hints "for men only" from Armstrong Chemcon, Inc., Chicago paint manufacturer.

Not surprised that women usually are the instigators of any redecorating project, nor that they have about 100 per cent participation in color choice and the like, the company's customer services people do seem intrigued by the finding in their recent survey that "women are active participants in 62 per cent of actual interior painting efforts."

Thus, the company concludes, "do-it-yourself has, more often than not, become do-it-together," and it points out to husbands, of course, "these several ways in which the little lady can be helpful:

"1—Since women usually are more patient, why not let her do some of the detail work like moldings, baseboards, and window and base frames?"

"2—Take advantage of her kitchen experience and let her be the one to stir the paint often.

"3 — WOMEN CAN help tremendously when preparing to paint by removing pictures, drapes, and the like, also by washing woodwork, walls and cabinets to remove dust and grease.

"4—She'd be great at doing the stairs—but remember to tell her to paint every other one, so that you will be able to continue to use them . . ."

Now, however, a word to the wives from the writer who has just gone through a "do-it-together painting partnership" with one husband who seems to have anticipated the Armstrong advice by several weeks.

Said writer — of course, she was on vacation—somehow found herself following more-or-less the above program in a situation involving: eight walls (two paneled, at that) two ceilings (paintable without ladder in a low-ceilinged 150-year-old house) and with assorted beams, doors, bookshelves, radiator enclosures, woodwork and nine beautiful, brand new windows, delightful spic and span untouched wood casing, each requiring undercoat and three (he said) topcoats.

NEXT TIME, writer wields the roller over lovely, wide open expanses of wall and ceiling; husband follows Armstrong's steps 1, 2, and 3. Mercifully, our hall stairs are carpeted.

"A do-it-together partnership," Armstrong concludes its advice, "should enhance the quality of your paint job and speed it up, too." The survey had no conclusions as to its effect on marital harmony.

In some additional tips to the do-it-yourself painter (whether male or female, member of a do-it-together partnership or not) Armstrong suggests:

—For best results when using a paint roller, wash cover to remove lint or dust. Be sure it is thoroughly dry for oil-based paint. It can be damp for latex. Roll lightly, evenly and not too fast. As you bring the roller to a stop, lift it, but do not stop the roller completely as it will leave a striped spot if you do.

LEFT-OVER enamel from a previous paint job can be used if you are careful to strain out any lumps or broken skin that may have developed during storage. Just mix paint thoroughly, cut a piece of screening to the dimension of the inside of the can and place it on top of the enamel. As it sinks to the bottom, it will take lumps with it.

To insure a more flattering reflection in your bathroom mirror, use shades such as pink, coral and melon on the walls. Greens and yellow greens will lend a sickly pallor.

Holiday Hair Fashions

Their Look Is Soft and Free

There's a soft and free look to the holiday hair styles designed by the official Hair Fashion Committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

The softness of the holiday styles is more than one of touch, though hair must feel soft and silky. It must look soft whether hair is dressed in flowing waves, curls, curves, in clusters or individual flips.

This swing to softness continues a trend that's been easing into hair fashions for some time. The feeling of freedom in the hair styles breaks definitely with the concept of a single, "in" look for all women. Now a woman can have a different hair style from day to day, from mood to mood.

FOR SOME WOMEN waves will be best, for others, curls. Most women will be using both in different degrees and in different combinations.

Whichever style you choose, it should be proportioned to your own requirements, taking into consideration the shape of your head, face and body. Actual length of hair must be determined by individual requirements, but short enough to give a head-conscious fit to the styles.

This will require superbly cut hair and, for most women, a soft permanent to give the hair manageability.

Most of the new styles premiered at the hair fashion show in New York earlier this fall featured an open forehead. Where special brow treatment was needed, wave formations were brought over the hairline. Bangs seldom were seen.

SOME OF THE new styles had a soft rise at the crown area. This was a natural lift from which hair usually flowed down in easy waves and then burst away at the sides in soft curls. In other styles, clusters of transparent curls crowned the top of the head, while soft waves framed the face and defined the nape.

In hair coloring for the holidays, hair should glow as if a soft light had been switched on. A subtle blending of differently toned hair strands gives this rich and natural looking effect. Warm tones will be particularly popular. For special effects, contrasting color will be used but softly and subtly, like the blending in a tortoise shell rather than a tiger's stripes.

MAKE-UP RUNS the spectrum, from a naturally glowing and warm look at sporting events to softly translucent effects for gala evenings. But during all, the soft velvet eye holds sway and the berry mouth. Facial tones call for romantic moon glow effects, rendered softly with transparent and shimmer powders.

BUOYANT CURLS crown this coiffure with soft waves and curls framing the face. Hair at nape and lower crown hugs head in soft waves.

IN THIS FLOWING holiday hair style, soft waves bounce away in loose and airy curls. Off-center part subtly adds to the natural appeal of this fashion.

AIRY CURLS BRUSHED up and away at the sides give a free look to this holiday hair style. Brow is uncovered, but curls can drape onto face if hair-line or face require aid.

DOTTED SWISS, an old fashioned fabric improved through the years, is used for this bridal gown and its matching bridesmaid gown. Lace daisy trim adds an additional old fashioned touch.

The Potting Shed

by MARY B. GOOD

Indoor gardeners come in at least two varieties.

One is the cultivator who grows for specialized interests and couldn't care less about the artistic arrangement of green things on display. He has a touch of collector's mania and is something of a nursemaid to sickly plants. He takes pride in keeping a croton hanging onto the very last leaf.

THEN THERE is the "decorator" gardener. He cares little for individual plants and is more interested in exotic effects with pot plants — He's a showman, not a grower. The minute a begonia looks peaked, maybe it needs a little drink — that's all, — it's disposal time. His attitude is like that of a slave-driving boss; if it doesn't perform, get rid of it.

But it's the fellow whose attitude lies somewhere between the extremes who has the best chance of getting satisfaction from house plant care.

House plants have long, spindly growth? A sure sign of insufficient light, temperature too high or both. Keep them away from radiators and other sources of dry heat.

GROUP LESS dramatic plant pots together with a Christmas plant or two — poinsettia, kalanchoe, cineraria, amaryllis, for a pick-me-up holiday window garden.

Girdle young trees like maple and apple from rabbits, if you haven't already, with three to four-foot high chicken wire. You can prevent winter sunscald damage by wrapping the trunk with aluminum foil. Sun scald can be severe to smooth, thin-barked young trees. It's caused during brief mild periods when the sun stimulates the inner bark to grow, usually on the south to southwest side of the tree. The freezing weather kills the tender bark growth, causing the bark to loosen, break off and expose the wood. The wrapping also will help reduce insect borers in the following spring and summer.

JIM SCHUSTER, assistant horticultural adviser for the University of Illinois extension service, prefers to wrap the trees with 40-pound Kraft paper or a tough crepe-type asphalt impregnated paper, applied more easily in three to four-inch widths. Foil or paper, recently planted trees need protection from winter injury.

Does learning to garden generate more interest in why plants do the things they do? For those of you who get "curiouser and curiouser," the Time-Life library has a colorful volume among its publications simply called, "The Plants." In it you'll discover why delphiniums are blue and roses are red, why mimosa curls up at the touch, the miracle of turgor, how water lilies and other aquatic plants survive, and various minor revelations.

With a new decade of space age and jet setting on the horizon, romance is having a revival according to the bridal bureau of Carson Pirie Scott & Co. To salute the Sentimental '70s, Carson's Randhurst store announces a showing of spring and summer bridal fashions to be held Tuesday evening, Jan. 6.

The 7:30 p.m. show will be held on the upper level of the Randhurst store. There is no charge for admission.

Included in the showing will be the ever-popular empire gown that brings memories of by-gone days. Tradition is the theme that makes 1970 brides beautiful and a bit old-fashioned, say the bridal experts, and fashions are romantic, traditional and beautiful.

Five young women from Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect will be among the debutantes presented this month at Holy Family Hospital's presentation ball, Cotillion IV. The affair will be held Saturday, Dec. 27, at Arlington Park Towers Hotel in Arlington Heights where the girls will be presented to the Very Rev. Msgr. James V. Moscow, the Cardinal's representative for hospitals in the Archdiocese of Chicago.

The Mount Prospect girls are Miss Cheryl Lee Costello, daughter of the John Matthew A. Costellos, who attends Northwestern Michigan College in Traverse City, Mich.; Miss Sarah Ann Crnich, daughter of the Anthony B. Crnichs, a senior at Sacred Heart High School in Rolling Meadows; Miss Elyn Ann Reese, daughter of the John H. Reeses, who attends Southern Illinois University; and Miss Cynthia Kay Vogt, daughter of the Eugene Lowell Vogts, who attends Prospect High School.

MISS CHRISTINE CASEY, daughter of the Thomas J. Caseys, represents Arlington Heights. She is also a student at Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows.

The Cotillion, a benefit affair, will raise funds to purchase additional cardioversion and resuscitation units for the hospital.

Juniors Wrap Gifts To Aid Santa

Santa's pack will include more than 100 gifts, all wrapped by Rolling Meadows Juniors, when he visits today (Friday) at the annual party the juniors are sponsoring at Clearbrook Center for the Retarded in Rolling Meadows.

Chairman of the gift-wrapping project was Mrs. Gregory Langlotz, who announces that in addition to her committee, several high school volunteers also helped with the wrappings.

The party, scheduled for 10 a.m., will also include candy canes and refreshments.

LOOKING AHEAD to the new year, the club's president, Mrs. Walter Sergot, feels that the various enthusiastic committees within the group offer a special challenge to women of the community interested in joining the organization.

Further information about the club may be obtained by calling the membership chairman, Mrs. Lawrence Kellerman, at 392-7571. Those interested are also invited to be guests at the regular meetings held the second Monday of each month at the Rolling Meadows Fire Hall.

Family Entertainment

Theaters Set for Christmas

Twice the week before Christmas and all through the house... bedlam had broken loose. The kids are home from school. Christmas vacation begins today and continues through the new year.

The question always arises as to how to occupy the kids while mother and dad are frantically searching for that last item that Junior said "all the kids have." Or, since the holiday season is also considered a family season, what's the solution for entertainment besides Gun Rummy and television?

Maybe it's the movies. No, I'm not referring to any spicy scandalous films rated X for sex, but the now too few light and frothy movies that tickle the funny bones of all family members and possibly make the season just a little bit brighter.

THEATERS IN THE immediate area are stocking "cute ones" for the whole family and several special features just for the small fry.

Beginning Friday at the Arlington Theatre in Arlington Heights is Tony Curtis in "Those Daring Young Men in Their Jaunty Jalopies." Opening on Christmas Day for an extended exclusive showing is "Oliver," which won the academy award for the best picture of the year.

The Jaunty Jalopies will also be motoring across the screen during the holidays, at the Randhurst Cinema in the Randhurst Shopping Center, and the York Theatre in Elmhurst.

The motion picture king of them all, John Wayne, will be featured in an outdoor adventure story entitled, "The Undefeated," at the Catlow Theatre in Barrington. Big John is involved in a horse drive to Mexico following the Civil War. Playing with "The Undefeated" is "Run Wild and Run Free" with Mark Lester and John Mills. The film is from the book "White Colt" and is about a young man who is suppressed by his parents and quits talking. The setting is the English Moors.

An animated cartoon feature specifically for the children, "Pinocchio in Outer Space" will be shown at 2 p.m., Dec. 27 and 3 p.m., Dec. 28 at the Catlow. At 2 p.m., the following day, Dec. 30, another matinee, Snow Queen, a Hans Christian Andersen tale, will be available for children's viewing.

Lucille Ball plays the mother of eight who marries a man (Henry Fonda) with ten, in the comedy, "Yours, Mine and Ours," which begins today at the Mount Prospect Cinema. As an additional feature, Dick Van Dyke stars in "Chitty, Chitty Bang Bang."

A full length animated cartoon, "1001 Dalmatians" and "Hang Your Hat On The Wind" will begin Christmas Day at the Cinema. Both are Walt Disney features.

Then, on New Year's Eve, an exclusive showing of the new Walt Disney film, "The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes" will be shown at the Mount Prospect Cinema, 7:30, 9:30, and 11:30 p.m. The movie stars Kurt Russell and Caesar Romero.

Beginning on Christmas Day at Golf Mill Theatre in Niles is the celebrated musical "Funny Girl" with Barbra Streisand.

Mill Run Playhouse, which is now specializing in children's plays will be presenting a musical version of Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol," the 20, 22, and 23 of December at 2 p.m. "Beauty and the Beast" can be seen on the 21, 27, and 28 at 2 p.m.

As a special holiday treat, take your kids to see "Disney On Parade," a giant musical production which opens at the Chicago Stadium Christmas Eve and plays through Jan. 4.

The cast, consisting of 104 personalities, represent the largest and most expensive show to ever be staged at the Chicago Stadium.

The idea is to bring Disneyland to the many kids across the country who have not or will not ever get the chance to see the acres and acres of Disneyland in California.

Musical numbers will work around such stories as Peter Pan, Cinderella, and Alice in Wonderland. The Jungle Books and Dumbo's Circus will also be represented. Of course Mickey Mouse and his entire gang will be on hand.

After the world premiere in Chicago, "Disney On Parade" will tour an additional 26 cities across the country.

Because of the installation of the new Zeiss Mark 6 projector, the Sky Theatre of the Adler Planetarium will be closed during January and February, announced Dr. Joseph M. Chamberlain, Planetarium director. The Theatre will reopen in March with a showing of "A New Look at the Universe."

Although the Sky Theatre will be closed during January and February, the Adler Planetarium will remain open. The public can enjoy such exhibits as the Apollo 11 Moon Flight, a collection of ancient astronomical instruments and large dramatic transparencies of the moon.

Violinist Yehudi Menuhin will be the guest soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in subscription concerts today, 2 p.m. and Saturday, 8:15 p.m. Conducted by Music Director George Solti, the concerts will be presented in Orchestra Hall.

A series of seven chamber music concerts will be presented by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra this season. The series will open with a concert by the string quartet tonight at 8:30 p.m. in Orchestra Hall.

Born with Scissors in Hand?

Designing Is Her Hobby

by GENIE CAMPBELL

"Twenty Bird" might be embarrassed by his own meager suit of feathers in comparison with the six individually hand-sewn yellow canary costumes Mrs. Loretto Gomes, her mother and her grandmother once put together.

Often accused of being born with a silver pair of scissors in her hands, Mrs. Gomes, a custom dress designer, is a natural with a thread and needle.

"It runs in the family," she said. The Mount Prospect dressmaker already had a headstart when she first began sewing at the age of 10 with a mother who sewed all her life and a grandmother who designed for royalty while the family was still living in Europe.

"THEATRICAL COSTUMING is just an art and hobby for me now," said Mrs. Gomes as she cut out a piece of material to be made eventually into a $200 dress for one of her customers.

"I do it just for personal theatrical friends. They send me the sketches of what they need or have in mind, and then I take it from there," she said.

Mrs. Gomes' costume designing had an early start. "The costumes we rented while I was in dancing school were expensive, yet terrible, so my mother and grandmother started making me mine," she said. "Then we started making them for other kids in the class, too."

She recalls the canary costumes as being one of the trickiest undertakings.

"IT TOOK THE THREE of us six months practically working night and day to do the six costumes," she said. "We had to individually fit the costumes and then hand sew each and every feather."

"In order to get the various thicknesses right," she explained, "we had to buy down, cock and rib feathers."

Shaking her head in recalling the experience she quickly added, "We could have filled an entire room with all the feathers we used."

Besides the birds, Santa suits and various other costumes created under the needle of Mrs. Gomes are various costumes designed from historical eras.

"Like going on a Roman Holiday" is how she expresses her pauses in dress designing in order to turn back the pages of history and recreate period costumes.

"PERIOD WORK is interesting," she said, "and a challenge." But, she also admits that it is time-consuming and difficult work.

"First, because there is always a definite theme or period around which I have to work, I must first go to the library and do research in order to recognize the basic lines and styles that were important at that time," she said.

"Then it's necessary to shop and search for the right material. Sometimes what I want is very difficult to find."

As in her regular custom sewing, Mrs. Gomes first draws a pencil sketch and then makes muslin fittings.

"IF THE COSTUME is being made for a musical, you have to allow for motion and gyrations so the costume will freely move with the individual. Sometimes it takes three or four muslin fittings before the costume is absolutely right," she affirmed.

Beaded costumes are also quite difficult and time-consuming because every bead has to be hand sewn.

"Sometimes beaded gowns weigh up to 150 pounds when finished and have close to a million beads," said Mrs. Gomes.

Most of the time Mrs. Gomes is busy sewing for her more than 150 regular customers. Sometimes, her sister and aunt, also proficient sewers, help out.

"My customers just usually tell me the occasion for which they need a dress, and then leave all the details up to me," she said as she pointed out several sketches she had completed recently.

"AFTER TALKING to a woman, I begin to know her personality, desires and what she basically needs," said Mrs. Gomes. On shelves lining her sewing room are various bolts and pieces of material Mrs. Gomes has picked up for her customers on her many fabric searches. Sometimes it means ordering things from New York.

Bridal work is also a favorite of Mrs. Gomes.

"Most girls have a preconceived idea of what they want to look like as a bride," she said. "In talking with them, I am usually able to bring this out."

"LIKE GOING on a Roman holiday," Mount Prospect describes her hobby. That's how Mrs. Loretto Gomes of theatrical costume designing.

Turkey Talk

For serving turkey, lift the bird onto a warm platter or carving board. Cover tightly with foil and allow to stand for 30 minutes. This will let the juices be absorbed into the meat, make carving easier.

Just before bringing to table, garnish with parsley, cranberries or spiced crab apples.

For a wonderful gravy, pour drippings into pint or quart measuring cup. Skim off fat. Add broth made from giblets to make needed amount of gravy, pour into saucepan. If browned-on juices stick to foil pan liner, pour some of broth into pan, return to oven a few minutes to dissolve, then pour into saucepan.

For each cup of broth, allow 1 tablespoon flour. Mix with a small amount of cool broth, then add to broth in saucepan. Stir and cook until consistency of heavy cream, unwhipped. Taste, add additional seasonings if needed, simmer a few minutes, and serve. Add giblets, if desired.

Easy Fruit Glaze For Cheese Cake

Make a bright fruit glaze for cheese cake, open fruit pies, big and little. Fresh strawberries provide the fruit flavor in this delightful recipe.

Strawberry Glaze

1 pint strawberries
1 tablespoon corn starch
Dash salt
1/4 cup water
1/3 cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon lemon juice
red food coloring

Crush enough strawberries to make 1/4 cup; leave remainder whole. Mix corn starch and salt in small saucepan. Gradually stir in water and corn syrup. Add crushed berries. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 minute. Remove from heat. Strain. Stir in lemon juice and food coloring. Cool slightly.

Arrange whole berries on pies or cake and pour glaze over all. Chill until set.

Pie Crust Capers

Nothing finishes off a meal with fanfare on cold evenings like a warm pie. Tart apples for filling crusts are abundant. Featured too, are makings for the holiday favorites — pumpkin, pecan and mincemeat.

Yet for pie perfection every filling demands a flaky crust.

STICK WITH LARD for flaky, tender pie crust every time, but change the looks of that crust sometimes. Try fluting the edges with a fork or scalloping with thumb or the tip of a spoon. To honor a member of the family or celebrate the holidays, slash the crust with appropriate initials or designs. Decorate a one-crust pie such as pumpkin with simple pastry cutouts.

Kurth Comments

by PHIL KURTH

By now we all know that because of Gary Steger every high school athlete in the state of Illinois will be protected by catastrophe insurance.

This is great news of course — when and if tragedy strikes again.

But what of Gary Steger? What has happened to Gary in 15 months since that terrible day he was rushed from the football field at Mundelein to Sherman Hospital in Elgin where he underwent emergency surgery for a broken neck?

For four months, he lay in Sherman Hospital unable to move. For six months after that, he underwent therapy at the Chicago Rehabilitation Institute. Since July he has been home, confined to a wheelchair.

And how has it all affected the young man?

Has he languished in self-pity? Has he gone to the opposite extreme and lost himself in a fevered pursuit of a sainted kind of nobleness?

The extraordinary truth is that Gary Steger is still Gary Steger — possessed of an understanding that few 18-year-olds ever attain, but still a quiet, thoughtful, likeable kid who somehow absorbed a knock-out punch of fate and came back a little tougher.

The unfortunate part of Gary's personality is that he's never been a particularly glib kind of guy — and his unfortunate only in that people often misunderstand.

Says his mother, "People sometimes say to me after talking to Gary, 'Is he depressed?' He isn't, really, it's just that he's never been a real talkative kid."

But he's trying to learn to be a better conversationalist — for the sake of others.

"He told me one day in the hospital that he'd noticed how uncomfortable people were talking with him sometimes, and he said he thought he was learning how to make them feel more at ease."

"We figure we have a pretty great kid — he's made it pretty easy for everyone."

"We have discovered, and it seems ridiculous to say, that our son is very lucky. There are a lot of people worse off than he is — and he saw a lot of them at the Rehabilitation Institute."

"Today he can take a five-pound weight and lift it with his wrist. A year ago they said he'd never move. We think it shows what determination and a hell of a lot of guts can do."

"He's learned an awful lot and has grown up a lot in a year."

There are doubtless a lot of days in the last 15 months that Gary would like to forget, but there have been a lot of warm, pleasant moments mixed in — a scrapbook of memories that he'll always cherish.

There was the day this spring Virgil Carter and his wife and ex-Bear Bill George spent a couple of hours at the Rehabilitation Institute visiting with Gary. Brian Piccolo has also become a friend.

There have been visits with Pete Ward, Gary Peters, Tom McGraw, Ted Abernathy, and others.

A lot of people have done a lot of nice things for Gary, and the kindness has continued since he's been home.

Dave Osman, the father of one of Gary's Lake Park teammates, owns a contracting firm and came in personally to rip out a closet in Gary's room and put in a shower for him (the bathroom is upstairs). Two other neighbors, Bill Murphy and George Brinkman, donated the plumbing and plastering work.

Hersey Hosts Frosh Tourney

Hersey will host a freshman basketball tournament Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 22 and 23, in the Huskie gymnasium.

The first game will be played Monday at 1 p.m. as East Leyden takes on Maine South. At 2:15 p.m. Barrington will tangle with Elk Grove.

Monday night at 7 p.m. will have Deerfield against Maine West and Mundelein versus Hersey.

The winners of the first and second games on Monday will compete Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. The winners of game three and four will play at 10:45 a.m.

A consolation game will be played Tuesday night at 7 p.m. and the championship game will be played at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday.

Student tickets will be 50 cents and adults one dollar. Hersey High School is located at 1900 East Thomas Street in Arlington Heights.

Illinois Bell came out to install a special telephone hookup on Gary's wheelchair, which was especially appreciated by his mother. "If I have to go to the store, I know he'll be able to get help if he needs it."

Gary, like any young man, remembers the nice things, but he also has his share of gripes and not everything has left a pleasant taste in his mouth — particularly the food at Sherman Hospital.

"The food was better at the Rehab. — and it wasn't real good there. If you ate a grilled cheese sandwich there, you might never want to eat another one as long as you live."

Then, prompted by a menacing look from his mother, he added: "Of course, the food is better at home than anywhere else."

All his life Gary has wanted to be a math teacher. And that's still his ambition.

He just finished his first college course — Psychology 101 (a College of DuPage extension course offered at Lake Park High School two nights a week) — and he has enrolled at DuPage for a full class load (18 hours, to be exact) starting in January, which will include a Biology course, two Math courses, and an English course.

Full-time attendance at DuPage in January, though, is contingent upon transportation. Says his mother, "The Director of Admissions at DuPage has talked to the Veterans' Club at the college and he's hopeful that they'll set up a car pool to get Gary to and from school.

"All of his classes are in one wing of the school so we're going to rent an electric motor to connect to his wheelchair until his electrical wheelchair is ready."

Following the summer term at DuPage, Gary would like to go to the University of Illinois — if they'll let him. The university refuses to answer questions, and has offered no indication of whether or not he'll be admitted.

"We had heard before that the U. of I. was great — everything was oriented to people in wheelchairs," says Betty Steger. "Now we hear otherwise. Two or three kids he met at the Rehabilitation Institute who tried to get in there and couldn't are very skeptical about his chances, because he can't take care of himself."

"He has submitted the necessary applications and we have written them several times, as have some other people, but we never get an answer."

"If he really wants to go down there, I am going to fight like mad to see that he can."

Gary's response is typical (he doesn't get ecstatic about too many things and he's not the excitable kind: "It doesn't matter — I can always go somewhere else."

But he definitely wants to go to school full time. "I think he's happy about the chance of getting away from his mother," says his mother. And Gary quickly smiles and nods assent. This bantering kind of wit is common in the Steger home, and Gary is as adept at it as the rest of the family.

It obviously takes more than personal tragedy to dim his sense of humor. Gary Steger is not a martyr, he's not a saint, and he's not embittered.

He's a remarkable kid who knows more about life and more about suffering than most people twice his age. He understands, and he accepts it.

"The great influx of cards and letters and calls in the first weeks after the accident were wonderful, of course," says his mother, "but it's the few who remember now who Gary really appreciates and thinks the world of."

It might be nice at Christmas-time if some of the people who have forgotten remember Gary Steger with a little card or note (his address — 136 S. Park, Roselle). That's what the season is all about.

Rivalry Battle a Big One

by PHIL KURTH

Some of the adjectives that are usually used to describe a Lake Park-Fenton confrontation — titanic, monumental, classic — might not be appropriate tonight.

Neither team at the moment would be considered a championship contender (though neither could be ruled out completely, of course). Neither has won a conference game — the Lancers in two starts, the Bisons in one.

Lake Park is currently in the throes of a six-game losing streak, their season record standing at 1-6. Fenton, shaking off a four game swoon that opened the campaign, has won two of their last three to bring their record to 2-5.

YET DESPITE the various miseries that each club has suffered, despite the defeats and the early season problems, one traditional adjective of a Bison-Lancer clash still stands out in capital letters — BIG.

It's a very big game for Lake Park, it's a very big game for Fenton. And not just because of the rivalry between these schools, although the Milwaukee Bell is a very powerful incentive (the Bisons lead in Bell points, 48-24, for the first time in a good many years).

The game is vital simply because it could be the pivotal point of the season — the loser may never recover, the winner could go on to a highly respectable year.

SAYS LANCER COACH Frederick Fell, "The kids were a little down this week, but I think they'll snap out of it."

At Fenton

OPEN	G	Zempel	6-6
6-2 Robertson	G	McDonald	5-5
6-1 Nottke	G	OPEN

TIME: Preliminary, 6:30 p.m., Friday

PLACE: Fenton High School, Bensenville

COACHES: Lake Park, Frederick Fell; Fenton, Bill Pelekoudas

IN A WAY, playing Fenton at this stage of the season may be a break for us. We have to go into the buffalo pit tonight an underdog. If the kids don't get up for this game, they probably won't get up all year."

Says Bison coach Bill Pelekoudas: "I said before last week's game with Elmwood Park that if we could be 1-1 in league play before Christmas time, with the experience we'll get in the holiday tournament, we could be very much in the race."

That means, of course, that Fenton must beat Lake Park tonight. And Pelekoudas isn't worried so much about his team being ready as he is about them being too ready.

"IN A GAME LIKE this, you have to keep your kids from getting a little too high and consequently a little tense. There's a certain emotional peak you want to reach, but you don't want to go above it."

Both teams are going to have revised lineups tonight, although for different reasons.

The Lancers, who have gotten pretty good production out of John Robertson, BETWEEN BISONS. Elmwood Park's Ken Desmaretz gets good shooting position between Fenton's Bill Rosner (22) and Chuck Zempel (20) to notch two-pointer. Desmaretz scored a game-high 27 points to lead the Tigers to an 86-56 Tri-County victory Friday night.

Glenn Damato, and Carter Nottke (94-87, and 76 points respectively) have not been particularly consistent and fell is still trying to fit the jigsaw together to find a good, solid starting lineup.

"I've moved Robertson back to a guard position with Nottke, and Damato will be at forward, but the other two spots are up for grabs."

JUNIORS STEVE BORNACK and Scott Abrams impressed Fell enough Saturday night to warrant a further look. "If they don't start, they're certainly going to play a lot."

The Bisons, who have been looking better and better with every game as their predominantly junior team gains in confidence and experience, came up with a big come-from-behind overtime victory Saturday night against Glenbard North.

"I thought we played well overall," says Pelekoudas. "We moved the ball better on the fast break, defended well, and didn't give up when we were five points behind in the last couple of minutes. The kids showed a lot of hustle."

Unfortunately, indiscreet off-the-court activities will sideline a couple of the Bisons for this weekend, necessitating some shuffling in the lineup. "I had to discipline two kids, so I won't have them for this week or probably for a few more weeks. And something like this could really hurt — I just don't know how the rest of the team will react. Hopefully, they'll tighten their belts and play a little tougher."

THE BISONS AND Lancers are comparable teams. Neither has a super star. Neither has much experience. Neither has intimidating size. Both are hustling outfits that battle for every inch — and have to out-scrap the other guys to win.

But there is one big difference — and again that word "big" pops up — between the two. That would be Fenton's 6-6 center Chuck Zempel.

The Lancers simply don't have anyone with that kind of size, and it's the main reason they're 1-6 right now. Opposing centers have killed them because the Lancers have no one to stop the other team's big guy.

Zempel, who hasn't always lived up to that 6-6 stature, could destroy them and Fell is worried about exactly that. "He'll undoubtedly play a great game against us — he always does against Lake Park."

FOR THOSE WITH faulty memories, it was little less than a year ago that the Bisons overcame a 13-point Lake Park lead in the final quarter to register a stunning 81-73 upset victory over the powerful Lancers. Mr. Zempel was one of the key figures in that incredible triumph, out-battling the Lancers' super-center Chris Petersen through much of the final quarter to help turn the tide.

Can he come up with another great performance tonight?

That might be the biggest question in one of the biggest games of the year in Bensenville.

Blazers Fear Shooting Stars

by PHIL KURTH

Depth, balance, everyone doing his part.

This is the teamwork theme that Addison Trail coach Frank Hulka has been hammering away at since the season began. Without any superstars — in fact, without any lettermen — the Blazers can't relax and look to a couple of men to do the winning for them. They've got to hustle, they've got to pull together, and they've got to get a contribution from everybody.

Addison's 4-2 record offers proof enough that this is what they have been getting.

Tonight in Addison the Blazers will host a Des Plaines Valley team that is a study in contrast.

The Hornets of Hinsdale South boast two of the area's finest players — guard Jim May and forward Joel Hawkins. Both have played varsity ball for three years, both are "complete" performers on the hard-court.

"May has been held under 20 only once, and he's averaging 22 points a game," says Hinsdale coach Jerry Leggett. "And after six games, the Hornets'

"Hawkins isn't scoring at quite the rate he did last year, but he's playing much better defense. We put him on the other team's big guy and he does a heckuva job of shutting him off."

"These two guys are one-two in every category for us — rebounding, shooting, passing, defense."

Adds Hulka: "May and Hawkins are probably two of the best shooters in the suburban-area."

And after six games, the Hornets' record is 1-5. The explanation is obvious — you don't win with two men.

"I can get 50 points a game out of these two," says Leggett, "but we have to get something out of other three. If we could just get somebody to help them out on defense, scoring, rebounding, anything, we could start winning a little."

Center Jim Balvich, forward Mike Conditino, and sophomore guard Kevin Feldott currently round out the starting five for Hinsdale. "Feldott is coming right along," says Leggett. "We really didn't plan on using him on the varsity this year, but the way things have been going we needed to do something."

Top three backup men presently are forwards Phil Wickey and Richard Mapes and guard Randy Oberbey (who has earned a varsity shot with impressive work in Jayvee competition).

The Blazers, who might be inclined to take the Hornets lightly in view of their record, aren't likely to do so if Hulka can help it.

First, they've never beaten the Hornets.

Second, Hulka has the highest esteem for his coaching adversary.

"Any time you meet a Leggett-coached team, you meet a team that is fundamentally sound — a thinking team. He'll find something out or do something that will exploit your weaknesses, and if you don't adjust you're in for trouble."

"His teams are never short on desire or hustle. And I'm trying to sell my kids on this thought."

"I think we have an excellent chance to beat them, but we have to produce. We've got to play a good, solid, thinking basketball game to be in it."

While the Blazers think they have a pretty good chance to chalk up their first conference victory of the season tonight, their visitors are thinking along the same line.

"Just looking at the personnel from the scouting report, it looks like it could be a pretty even game," says Leggett.

That it could. But the Blazers can probably win by stopping two men. The Hornets will have to stop a team.

Forecast Low-Scoring Battle

Grove Entertains Pace-Setting Cardinals

by LARRY EVERHART

No matter what transpires in Mid-Suburban League basketball during this month, it's pretty hard to call any result a genuine upset.

Why? Well, for one thing, it's too early in the season — with just two weeks gone by — to separate the league into the powers, the not-so-powerful, and the wait-until-next-years. And for another, it appears there will be exceptional balance in the league this year, with no one or two teams dominating.

Thus, if Elk Grove beats Arlington Friday night, "upset" wouldn't quite be the term to use. Maybe something like "mild surprise" would be more appropriate.

For even though there is a lot of uncertainty surrounding every contest, an Arlington win would seem more likely than an Elk Grove success Friday in the Grenadier gym.

That's only based on statistics, and they go out the window once the teams face off. But just for the record:

Arlington, at 2-0, is one of two teams without a league loss so far (the Cards are 2-2 overall). Elk Grove is 1-1 in MSL action and 2-3 on the season.

The Cardinals are averaging 57 points a game to their opponents' 51.5. Elk Grove has a 41.5 average to their foes' 43.5.

Arlington also leads the league in field goal percentage (49.4) while Elk Grove is seventh (34.4). Arlington is fourth in free throw percentage (54.2) while Elk Grove is ninth (48.7).

The Cards have a decided edge in both rebounding and turnovers, being fifth in the MSL in the former department and second in the latter. Elk Grove is last in rebounding and ninth in turnovers.

A facet of which Elk Grove can be proud is field goal defense. The Grenadiers lead the league in that, having allowed only 31 baskets and a 29.8 shooting percentage in two games. Arlington, however, is second with 34 buckets yielded for a 33.0 shooting average.

That may make it difficult for the Groves to find the basket more often, as their coach, Bob Rees, hopes. The Grenadiers must work the ball in for better shots.

"We hit 10 of 35 from the field against Hersey (when the Grove lost 43-30)," lamented Rees. "They shot even worse (15 for 59) but outscored us because they got more shots."

Rees is also very interested in the rebounding battle shaping up.

"We were beaten on the boards against Hersey but we really didn't rebound badly," he says. "We got 30 or so which isn't bad against guys who are 6-8 and 6-5 when we have no one over 6-2."

"Arlington isn't that big but still has more size than we do. We'll have to position well to get the ball off the boards."

This will be a matchup of two teams similar in style — teams that like control-pattern offense and tight defense. Neither has been involved in a high-scoring game yet, and don't look for much scoring tonight.

Neither team has a scorer in the league's top ten, though John Brodman of Arlington is 11th with a 14.0 average and Elk Grove's Eugene Pinder 12 at 12.5. Arlington's next best point man is Jack Hult with an 11.5 average and the Grove's is John Flesch with a 10.5 standard.

Both teams usually hope to get enough points from these boys and rely heavily on stopping the other team.

"Yes, it should be a defensive-type game without a lot of scoring," agrees George Zigman, Arlington coach.

"Elk Grove's got two real fine boys in Pinder and Flesch, and we think they're a real tough opponent."

"The league is so even that the winners every week are just whoever cuts down on their mistakes. I've been real pleased so far. If we can just keep hustling down there, we can beat 'em."

Funny thing — Elk Grove feels exactly the same way.

Arlington and Elk Grove. Similar clubs with similar motives. It should be a good ball game tonight.

Injury-Plagued Conant Still Worries Falcons

by PAUL LOGAN

The two biggest stories in last Friday's second night of Mid-Suburban League games involved Conant and Forest View. And after tonight it could be the same tale again.

While the Cougars were being shocked by Glenbard North, the Falcons' veteran ballclub was letting a close one slip from their grasp and into Arlington's.

Now the Cougars and Falcons, two teams that were highly favored to do well in the conference race, find themselves out of first place and at the .500 mark in league play. Both coaches are pointing to tonight's contest, which will get underway at approximately 8:30 in the Cougar gym, knowing full well that a victory just before the holiday would be a big boost toward the MSL title.

Conant, 3-2 on the year, has been plagued by injuries in recent weeks. Two top players — Dennis Grady and Bob Wallin — have already been shelved for part or all of the season. And the latest in a series of hospital bulletins from Hoffman Estates lists forward Dave Kellermeyer (6-1) with a badly sprained ankle.

"Forest View will be a very rough game for us, especially since we're missing so many boys," Coach Dick Redinger said, contemplating Kellermeyer's absence for the weekend.

Meanwhile, the Cougars will be facing a very healthy and eager Falcon team which is fresh from a romp over Adlai Stevenson last Saturday, 85-38.

"I think that probably our biggest problem of the week is not letting the Conant loss to Glenbard North disturb us," said Falcon coach Ken Arneson. And it's easy to see why: Forest View belted the same Panther ballclub that upset Conant (63-58), 81-53. Comparing the two scores would be a costly mistake for the Falcons.

Arneson is far from over-confident, especially after hearing from his scout about the explosiveness of the Cougar backcourt — Brant Barton (6-4) and John Macdonald (6-1). Barton is presently leading the league with a lofty 29.6 average.

to holding down his man, will get Macdonald.

"I like to put Long on the opposition's more dangerous scorer as long as they're matched pretty well in height," he said. "They've got big assignments, those two."

Forest View, 4-2 so far, presently boasts some fine scoring punch of its own in the same two players. Long is second in the league (21.5) and Olson is tied with two others for third (17.0). Wayne Meier (6-2) is also in double figures after two games with 11.5.

Rounding out the starting Falcon lineup will be Greg Shevell (6-3) at an offensive guard and defensive forward and Keith Phillips (6-3½) at center. Phillips, starting his first game this year, popped in 21 points for just three quarters of work.

"Even though the competition (Stevenson) was a little weak, he still delivered," said Arneson. "We want to see what he can do against Conant."

Conant's other two listed starters are center Dave Lloyd (6-4) and forward Bruce Newman (6-4).

Redinger didn't want to say too much about the Forest View game because "I might have fired up Glenbard and I don't want to do the same thing again."

Both teams are offensive-minded with Forest View being first in the league (69.5) and Conant second (62.5). They are pretty equal in field goal percentage with the Falcons holding a slight edge, 46-45. However, the visitors are second only to Glenbard in free throw accuracy with 62.3. The hosts are farther down the list with 53.5.

This latter statistic spelled the Cougars' downfall against Glenbard. Although Cougars had six more field goals, they committed 25 fouls which were cashed in by the Panthers for 29 free throws.

The injury-laden Cougars must lay off unnecessary personals if they are to defeat the healthy Falcons.

TOP GYMNAST on the touring all-star squad from West Germany that will appear at Arlington High School is Age Storhaug, of Norway, who has participated in two Olympic games, two World championships, three European championships, and has been gym champion of Scandinavia since 1961 and champion of Norway since 1957. The competition at Arlington is scheduled for Mon., Dec. 29 at 8 p.m.

allel bars, Andreas Pillich, former all-around champion of New Zealand and Peter Langnickel, Ludwig Langenfelder, Jürgen Niemeyer and Ulrich Ott, all members of the West German national gymnastics team.

The Leverkusen gymnastics team is affiliated with the Leverkusen Sports Club which was founded in 1904 and is considered the greatest sports club in West Germany. It has a membership of 2,250.

Tickets for the dual meet are $2 general admission and $1 for advance student tickets. They may be purchased at the Arlington High School or the Chicago Circle Center, at 750 S. Halsted.

Touring West German Club To Perform at Arlington

The University of Illinois at Chicago Circle will record a first in collegiate gymnastics history this winter when the Chika varsity will compete against a touring all-star gymnastics club from Leverkusen, West Germany.

Scheduled for Dec. 29, at 8 p.m. at the Arlington High School gymnasium, the dual meet will match for the first time ever a United States college varsity team against an international club under National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA) rules.

Other international teams have competed against American gymnastics clubs in the past but none have met full-fledged varsity teams and all have competed under international rules.

Bill Roetzheim, Chicago Circle's gymnastics coach who has only recently returned as men's coach of the U.S. gymnastics team that toured the Middle East last summer, said the meet will be included in Chicago Circle's dual meet record.

"I am very pleased an international team of this caliber will perform in the Chicago area," Roetzheim said. "I am hopeful this will stimulate future competition with international teams throughout the nation."

Following the Chicago Circle meet, the team will meet Louisiana State University in New Orleans and Iowa State College in Ames, Iowa, in January.

The Leverkusen team will be making its second trip to the U.S. It competed against an Iowa State alumni-varsity club and a similar club at the University of Washington in 1967.

The team is currently participating in the newfounded National Gymnastics League, in which the top 10 German teams compete in regular dual meets. It began competition for the first time in 1967 when the team placed fourth in the German team championships.

Ten members compose the team, including coaches Josef Knoch and Reginald Nestler. The most outstanding individual performer on the team is Age Storhaug, of Norway, who has participated in two Olympic games, two World championships, three European championships, has been gymnastics champion of Scandinavia since 1961 and champion of Norway since 1967.

Other team members include Ulf Berge, 1968 German Student champion, Michael Keremann, 1969 German student champion in free exercise, rings, long horse and per-

Prospect Mat Tourney Opens Tonight

by LARRY MLYNCZAK
The 11th Annual Prospect Holiday Wrestling Tournament will be held tonight and Saturday at Prospect High School.
Eight teams are entered in the tournament: Downers Grove North, East Rockford, Glenbard East, Niles West, York, Forest View, Lake Park and Prospect.
East Rockford won the championship last year by 27 points but does not seem to have the material to repeat this year.

Prospect has the best team in the Mid-Suburban League so far this year and should be a favorite. Lake Park has a few standout individuals, Glenbard East will be stronger than last year, York seems to be loaded, Niles West has a few wrestlers back from last year's strong team and Forest View could improve on its third place finish last year.
Prospect's top wrestlers this year have been 107 pounder Ken Klein who is 5-1 and finished second in the Prospect Holiday Tourney last year; Les Verde, who was third in the tourney last year and is 5-1, will wrestle at 123 pounds. Scott Szala, who is 6-0 at 145 pounds, will be at 137 for the Knights; Tim Loeffel is 5-0-1 at 165 and will be at 155.

Szala and Loeffel took first place in the rugged West Leyden Quadrangular meet. Forest View has Bruce Brod, who is 3-0, at 175 pounds, John Walker (3-0) at 185 pounds, Tom Moore (2-0-1) at 123 pounds and was the tournament winner at 120 last year, Mike Pirron (2-2) who was last year's 130 pound finalist and Mike Altergott who is 2-1.

Glenbard East's strength comes from 123 pound Rory Turyna and 185 pound Wayne Marshall who are both 2-1.

John Scott, Lake Park's 138 pound champion in the Prospect tourney, will be with the Lancers this year at 145 pounds. Scott is 3-1.

Dan Harbacek (5-0 at 98 pounds) and Tom Stuckey (4-1 at 185 pounds) are two mainstays on the Lake Park squad.

York appears to have a solid squad with 155 pound Chuck Depaepe (4-0), 107 pound Bob Dick (3-1), 123 pound Bill Blanchard

East Rockford's top performer this year has been Dave Cox who won the 145 pound class last year and is undefeated this year. Niles West's top wrestler appears to be unbeaten Mark Gilbert who wrestles at 130 pounds.

There will be three sessions for the Holiday tourney. The first session will get underway Friday at 7 p.m. The second session will begin at 8 p.m. and the finals will be at 7 p.m.

THE BEST IN / Sports

Falcon Wrestlers Thump Cougars

Conant's wrestling team started out well, posted a pair of wins in the middle, and ended up well. However, the Cougars totaled just single victories at either end of the meet and so, in all, only had four matches on the plus side.

Meanwhile, Forest View, which hosted the meet last Saturday, racked up eight victories in lumps of three and five to easily defeat their guests, 28-14.

Blaine Bachus got the Cougars off to a fine start taking a 6-1 decision. But the Falcons came right back and reeled off five straight — Mike Altergott (107) winning 1-0, Mark Hyneman (115) winning 7-4, Tom Moore (123) romping 11-2, Mike Pirron (130) gaining a pin in 0:22, and Mark Bowe (137) by a wide margin, 16-2.

Brian Rucks and Ron Orwerth then got two easy ones for Conant by a pin (3:27) and a decision (10-2), respectively.

But the Falcons crushed all hopes of a Conant victory by ripping off three more in a row — Greg Swanson (165) with a pin at 3:49, Bruce Brod (175) in a 17-4 romper and John Walker (185) winning 9-5.

Rich Heisel then gained the final win for the visitors as he shutout Don Reid, 4-0, in the battle of the heavyweights.

Forest View's jayvee squad posted a pair of wins over the weekend taking Arlington 28-18 and Conant 21-18. On the sophomore level, both visitors handled the Falcons. It was Arlington 33-11 over Forest View and Conant 35-13. On the freshman level, Forest View took Arlington, 39-10, but lost to Conant, 35-9.

Forest View will participate in the Prospect Wrestling Tournament starting this Friday. Conant will be competing in the St. Francis tourney on Saturday.

Four Cards Quad Champs

Four wrestlers came up with first place finishes but Arlington's grappling team fell short of winning a quadrangular meet at Proviso West. Morton West was the winner with 84 points, Arlington had 74, Proviso West 52 and Elgin 49.

The winners for the Cardinals were 130 pound Rich Stanczak, 137 pound Mike Weber, 155 pound Don Stumpf and 185 pound Andy Locken. Stanczak's wins were by pin in 5:22 and by a 6-1 decision. Weber won 4-0 and by pin in 2:33. Stumpf won by pin in 5:38 after a 6-0 decision triumph. Locken had 4-3 and 6-4 decision victories.

Second place finishes for Arlington were turned in by Scott Douglas at 145, Carl Anderson at 165, Pete Harth at 175. Third places were recorded by Bob Wilson at 123 and Wayne Pierre at 115.

The Cardinals will wrestle with Elk Grove at home Friday at 7 p.m.

Sectional Tournament To Fremd

For the first time in the history of the Arlington High School gym, there won't be a sectional tournament held there this spring.

Ever since the dedication of the Cardinals' gym back in 1952 there's been a sectional tourney, but the 1970 sectional will be moved to William Fremd High School.

Feeding the Viking hosted sectional will be regional winners from Arlington, Hoffman Estates, Skokie and Waukegan. So, in all, three Mid-Suburban League schools will be handling post-season play.

The tournament action will get underway on Feb. 23 at 42 district centers throughout the state. Assignments of teams to the district tourneys will be limited to the schools of smaller enrollments within each regional area.

The regional and sectional tourneys will follow the districts at one week intervals. Dates for the state final tourney are March 17, 20, and 21. The 16 sectional tournament winners will play at eight centers, one game at each center, and the winners of these games will play at the University of Illinois on March 20-21.

There will be 708 high schools competing for the coveted prize in 1970. Defending champion and runnerup are Proviso East and Spaulding, respectively.

SOMETIMES, THERE are too many hands in a soup and sometimes there are too many hands going up for a basketball. Here Jeff Algeier (13), Dave Hasbach (44) and Rusty Sehnert of Palatine and Bob Kline (33) of Prospect go up for a rebounding basketball. As it ended up, none of this foursome got the ball as it flew out of bounds. Prospect was the Friday night victor over the Pirates, 54-44.

First Half Roars to Close In Paddock Classic Loops

It all boils down to Saturday night between 5:30 and 8:30.

For four men's teams and two ladies teams, the tension is mounting this week.

It is those teams which are still in the running for the first-half championships in the Paddock Classic Traveling Leagues. Sixteen weeks of league bowling that got underway in early September makes up the first half — the 1969 portion of the '69-'70 season that ends Saturday.

Position night, as always, is closing out competition for the half and adding spice and suspense to how things will wind up — not only who finishes first but how the whole lists of standings will look.

Teams now eliminated from contention for the title are just as interested in Saturday's position round as the others. They want to end the half on the upgrade and start some momentum for the second-half race that begins after the New Year.

And those who still have a shot at the title want it badly. Not only for pride, but also for a guarantee at a shot at the grand season championship next spring. (If first and second half winners are different, a post-season grand championship roll-off is held).

Saturday, the spotlight will be trained on six alleys — lanes 25, 26, 31, and 32 at Elk Grove Bowl and lanes 7 and 8 at Beverly Lanes. Contested on those alleys will be the three matches that mean everything.

At Beverly, Des Plaines Lanes will take on Kemmerly Realty for the Paddock Women's title. Des Plaines currently leads the league with 65 points; Kemmerly has 62. Last week, team series for these two units were 16 pins apart: Des Plaines had 2678; Kemmerly 2668.

Here are the possibilities for this crucial match: If Kemmerly wins 7-0 or 6-1, it is the first-half champ. If Kemmerly wins 5-2, the race ends in a tie with an immediate roll-off to follow. If Kemmerly wins 4-3 or Des Plaines wins by any score, Des Plaines is champ.

In the men's league, the situation is tighter. The top four teams are three points apart and all are eyeing that first-half prize. There's even more possibility of a tie here. All the individual possibilities are too numerous to go into.

The top two teams, Uncle Andy's Cow Palace and Snack Time Restaurant, will go at it on lanes 31 and 32. The third and fourth-place units, Aladdin's Lamp Restaurant at the Flying Carpet Motor Inn and Morton Pontiac, clash on lanes 25 and 26. All this action takes place at Elk Grove Bowl.

If the race does end in a dead heat, roll-off would be held at the same site immediately following regular bowling. The lanes would be determined by a coin toss.

So the tension Saturday night, besides reaching a peak in its climax, may also be drawn out a little longer than usual.

It's bound to be a highly interesting evening of bowling as the Paddock leagues' first half roars to a close.

Hersey Tankers Distant 3rd

Maine South and St. Patrick's both glided past Hersey in a swim triangular conducted at the Hawk pool last week.

The hosts captured the varsity affair with a strong 94 point display while the Shamrocks picked up 62 tallies and the Huskies earned 10.

Dean Goins and Bruce Morris paced the Hersey tankers. Goins clocked in at 1:08.3 to notch a fourth in the 100 butterfly and added a fifth in the 50 freestyle at 26.1 individual medley at 3:13.8 and a fifth in the 200 while Morris nabbed a fourth in the 200 the 400 freestyle with a 6:06.5 time.

Other fifts were garnered for Hersey by Jeff Teselle in the 200 freestyle

(2:46.4), Vince O'Leary in the 100 freestyle (1:07.1) and the 100 breast stroke (1:27.2) and Glen Johnson in the 100 back stroke (1:11.5).

St. Pat's captured the frosh-soph phase of the gathering with an 89-point production while Maine trailed at 58 and Hersey collected 16. Mike Richartz was top Huskie point-getter with a second in the 50 free and a third in the 100 free.

Also tallying were Gary Brossett second in the 100 butterfly and fifth in the 200 individual medley, Dave Traub with a fifth in the 200 free, John MacDonald with a fifth in the 100 back, Mike Welch with a fifth in the 400 free and Bill Kessel with fifth in the 100 breast stroke.

Northwest 'Y' Boys Swim to Easy Victory

The Northwest Suburban boys swim team was victorious again, winning over West Communities 227-81 in a home meet at the Northwest Suburban YMCA pool.

There were three records set by the Northwest "Y" boys: the first a pool record for the Cadet 50 yard freestyle, set by Mark Funk with a time of 40.7; the second a pool record for the Intermediate 100 yard freestyle, set by Rick Schwarting with a time of 54.4; and the third a team record for the Junior 100 yard breaststroke, set by Ross Peterson with a time of 1:16.2.

The Northwest "Y" boys cleaned up in the relay races, winning every one, and bringing their total wins to 19 out of 20 relay races in the last two dual competition meets.

The next meet will be Dec. 27, when the boys go to Harvey for the Harvey Relays. If the relay teams do as well at the Harvey Relays as they have been doing so far, it promises to be a smashing victory for the Northwest Suburban YMCA boys.

Forest View Swimmers Chalk Up Lopsided Win over Elmwood Park

Forest View's swimming team splashed to its fourth dual meet victory last Friday easily sinking Elmwood Park, 69-21.

The Falcons posted seven individual victories and copped both relay events. John Mate and Fred Westdale were the only double winners. Mate captured the 200 and 400 yard freestyle events and Westdale won the individual medley and the butterfly.

Taking single titles were Jim Johnson in diving, Norb Polacek in the breaststroke and Scott Patience in the 100-yard freestyle. Patience also placed second in the 50 freestyle with Mark Bailey taking third.

Other seconds were chalked by these Falcons:

Bailey in the 100-yard freestyle, Feldhan in the butterfly, Polacek in the individual medley, and Doug Schmitt in the backstroke.

Three Victories For St. Joseph

St. Joseph of Wheeling swept to three victories Sunday in the Northwest Suburban basketball league, setting up crucial games this coming weekend.

On a sixth grade level, St. Joseph stipped by St. Francis of Lake Zurich, 29-26, with John Mubb toting in 13 points.

Al Lyne scored nine as St. Joseph won by an identical 29-26 count in seventh grade play, and Bill Passolt had eight in the eighth grade's 23-21 triumph.

In action this Sunday at Holmes Jr. High, St. Joseph will meet St. Joseph of Libertyville, starting at 1:00.

St. James Sweeps Two

St. James School, of the Northwest Catholic Athletic Conference, won both the seventh and eighth grade level games against St. Theresa of Palatine.

St. James won the seventh grade game 37-24 as Bill Heffernan led the way with 15 points. Neil Bruns had 11 points for St. Theresa.

On the eighth grade level, St. James won 36-18. Ward Schell scored 13 and Pat Siberson eight for the winners. Ed Federson had 11 for St. Theresa.

At Beverly Lanes

Only five points separate the first four positions in the Men's Parkway bowling league at Beverly Lanes with one night remaining in first half play. . . . George Quade's team lost all three games to brother Glenn's team and Williams won three by forfeit. Glenn's 600 topped all individual scoring although teammate Otto Helmann's 508 was not far behind. Bob Lampert scored 551 to boost his team, Bergdahl, to a 5-2 win over Cutler.

St. Viator Heads South

by LARRY EVERHART

There is really no such thing as a breather in Chicagoland Prep basketball.

The old "on any given night . . ." axiom holds especially true in the CPL because of the wide area the league spans, the great variety of gymnasiums and playing conditions, and fans sometimes hostile to visitors.

So even when you're playing a team with an unimpressive record, you'd better be ready for a battle if you're playing on their floor.

That's why St. Viator's engers are taking Saturday night very seriously. When they migrate 'way down south (to 115th St. in Chicago) to take on Marist.

The Redskins carry only a 1-5 record this season, but numbers can be deceiving. St. Viator is readying themselves for this contest as though Marist had won five of six instead of having lost that many.

"All I know," says Lion coach Ed Wasielewski, "is that everyone who plays at Marist ends up fighting for their lives."

Marist has played only one home game thus far and seeing a little more of their friendly home grounds might be just what the 'Skins need to break out of their losing skein. If so, the Lions hope the new trend doesn't start Saturday.

Of course, road victories have been known to occur in the CPL. Like just last Friday, when St. Patrick (which usually has headaches playing at Marist) won there by 18 points while St. Viator was handling St. Joseph by ten on the losers' court.

Another encouraging factor for the Lions is that their big man, Dave Kaskie, is recovering rapidly from a sprained ankle which kept him out of action for three games. Kaskie should be ready to go just about full steam again Saturday.

The Lions' other co-captain and fine all-around performer, Terry Cullen, has been bothered by an old back ailment, but that didn't keep him from scoring 17 points against Maine South last Saturday. He, too, will be ready as usual for the Marist confrontation.

Marist coach Ed Molitor saw the Lions play once in the pre-season tournament and he is plenty concerned especially about Kaskie and Cullen. "Those are two fine ball players," he praises.

"Our main objective in Saturday's game will be to keep Kaskie off the boards and keep the ball away from him as well as Cullen," Molitor says.

Keeping the ball from Cullen is mighty difficult, because he is generally all over the floor. And warding the strong 6-5 Kaskie off from rebounding territory is also far from a simple task.

Molitor hopes to accomplish these things with a young lineup that includes only one senior, three juniors and a sophomore. The senior, 6-2 forward John McCumbridge, is the key man. He is averaging about 15 points and ten rebounds a game.

Steve Carney plays one of the forward positions for the Redskins at only 5-11, but he is nonetheless averaging about ten points and eight rebounds a game.

At center, Bill Tracy matches Kaskie's height at 6-5. But Tracy needs to gain strength and will have his hands full against a healthy, more experienced Kaskie.

Marist last week was leading St. Patrick by seven in the second quarter, but missed two layups and then four free throws in a row to blow a chance to break the game open. The explosive Shamrocks charged back and won by 18.

St. Viator, meanwhile, was playing "pretty well" in beating St. Joseph Friday and losing to Maine South Saturday (those results brought the record to 3-5). "We made too many mistakes, though — like violations and throwing the ball away. We've got to cut down on that," says Wasielewski.

Hoping to do so will be the Lions' other starters, who will probably be 6-4 junior Mike Pettenuzzo an 6-2 Mark Keenan at forwards and 5-8 Bob Rech at guards. All have been gaining valuable experience and improving with every game.

Pettenuzzo was out of practice with the flu this week but Wasielewski feels he should be ready by Saturday. The Lions are idle Friday night to give them some much-needed extra rest to recover from their various maladies.

They'll need a healthy squad Saturday, because the trek down to 115th Street is a long and perilous one.

But the Lions don't plan to go all that way for nothing.

Blazers Suffer First Mat Loss

Willowbrook won the first four matches from Addison Trail Friday and then hung on to defeat the Blazers 25-15 in a dual wrestling meet at Addison.

The win kept the Warriors record clean while the Blazers' mark fell to 2-1 — 6-1 in Des Plaines Valley competition.

Steve Cripe (130), Bob Paulsen (137), Mike Ryan (155), Ed Vatch (165), and Lou Cook (185) were Addison winners during the meet, and all registered shutout decision victories.

Cripe defeated Pat McCombs 6-0, Paulsen blanked Tony Venezia 15-0, Ryan shut out Bob Grant 3-0, Vatch whipped Don Stratt 9-0, and Cook bested Chuck Lettenbacher 5-0.

Willowbrook also won the jayvee meet (27-16) and the freshmen competition (34-16).

Grove, Conant in Mat Tourneys

by LARRY EVERHART

Eight-team wrestling tournaments seem to be in vogue this holiday season. Elk Grove and Conant are each involved in one tomorrow (Saturday) and Elk Grove will be in another next Tuesday.

The Grenadiers' first assignment tomorrow at 9:30 a.m. is in the Ridgewood tournament. Their opposition, besides the host school, will be furnished by Homewood-Flossmoor, Maine South, Niles North, Elmwood Park, St. Charles and Fenton.

"Homewood-Flossmoor is really loaded this year," says Elk Grove coach Norm Lovelace. "They've won 31 meets in a row. And Maine South and Niles North are real tough, too."

Undeclared in five meets so far for the Grenadiers are Jerry Ancona at 98 pounds and Jeff Froisland at 145. Another who has done well is Joe Dagangi, who was in the 145 class but is now down to 137.

More morning action is slated for next Tuesday at 9:30 when Elk Grove is in the Grant tournament. Opponents in this one will be Grant, Deerfield, Antioch, McHenry, Harlem Park and Crown.

Conant will also hit the road tomorrow morning, going to St. Francis where a tourney will get underway at 10 o'clock. Conant will be defending the championship it won in the St. Francis tourney last year, its first time in the meet.

Other schools entered are Elgin Larkin, Montini, Willowbrook, Glenbard North and Geneva.

Cougar coach Merv Muller feels Willowbrook, which finished second in this tournament last year, will be strong again. Of the teams entered, the only one Conant has wrestled against is Glenbard North, whom they defeated.

Conant is 3-2 thus far, having downed the Panthers, Lake Park and Fenton and lost to Palatine and Forest View.

Two undefeated wrestlers with 5-0 records will be entered for the Cougars at St. Francis tomorrow. They are heavyweight Dick Heisel and 145-pounder Brian Rucks. Others who have done well are 123-pounder Scott Hendricks (4-1) and 115-pounder Mike Beck (3-2).

Men's Deadline Saturday

He who hesitates — will be without a preferred time in the Paddock Publications men's bowling tournament.

That was the announcement Thursday by tournament manager Marian Phillips as she continued processing entries for the men's bowling headliner Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 24-25, at Rolling Meadows Bowl.

"The 5:20 and 7:45 spots are almost filled now," Mrs. Phillips said, "and the others are starting to fill up fast. Each league secretary who hasn't contacted us already about a preferred time is encouraged to do so as soon as possible."

Squads will roll at 2:30 that Saturday, Jan. 24, and at 12:30, 2:55, 5:20, and 7:45 Sunday.

First place teams as of this Saturday, Dec. 20, in all area men's leagues will be eligible for the Paddock tourney. Deadline for official league entries is Jan. 10, 1970, but secretaries can reserve time slots now.

The women's tourney will be held Sunday, Feb. 1, at Buffalo Grove-Rose Bowl among first place teams as of Dec. 27. Available squad times are 12:00, 2:40, 5:20, and 8:00. Reserve now!

MIKE MARSHALL, of Buffalo Grove, has just one more trophy to go—the national championship one for nine year olds in the Punt, Pass and Kick contest. Mike captured the Western Division trophy last Sunday in Detroit and will compete for the No. 1 prize on Jan. 3 during the halftime of the National Football League runnerup bowl.

Knights Hold Share of First

Prospect Tests Surprising Glenbard

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

Before getting down to the business of reviewing tonight's basketball game between Prospect and Glenbard North, let's mull over an item:

Glenbard North is tied for third place in the Mid-Suburban League basketball standings.

Third place!

The Panthers of this Carol Stream school have been thought of so long as the Mets . . . or . . . make that the Bears . . . of the Mid-Suburban League, third place is very hard to comprehend for Glenbard North.

But it is true. Forget the fact that the Panthers are tied with six other teams for third place. Glenbard North is not the party of the MSL this season.

"They're not all that bad a basketball team," says Prospect coach Bill Slayton. "They're going to beat some more teams this year."

The Panthers are 2-3 this season (which equals last year's win total) and they are 1-1 in the MSL, the win coming over Conant — the same Conant team that one writer said would win the championship.

Glenbard North, by beating such caliber as Conant, is no fluke by being in third place.

Now hold on to your hats because here is another little tidbit about Glenbard North — the Panthers could be in FIRST place by the end of the week, provided they beat Prospect and Arlington loses to Elk Grove.

Of course, Bill Slayton and his Prospect Knights have other ideas about Glenbard North getting any higher in the standings.

Slayton's starting lineup tonight will be the usual — Brad Rucker and Bob Kline at forward, Dave Lundstedt at center and Casey Rush and Stu White at guard.

The Knights have had good balance all year. Rucker leads the team in scoring against MSL foes with 17 a game. White is averaging 12.5 in the MSL. Each of the others have score in double figures at one time or another.

Glenbard North coach Bill Connors will have Dan Crabtree and Gene Howell at forward, Bill Wright at center and Don

At Glenbard No.

PROSPECT	GLENBARD N.
6-1 Macher	F Crabtree	6-11
6-1 Kline	O Howell	6-10
6-3 Lundstedt	O Wright	6-5
6-2 Rush	G Anastasi	6-10
5-11 White	G Pauling	6-9

TIME: Preliminary game at 6:30 p.m. Varsity game at 8:15 p.m.
PLACE: Glenbard North High School, Kuhn and Liss Road in Carol Stream.
COACHES: Prospect: Bill Slayton. Glenbard North: Bill Connors.

Anastasi and Tom Pauling at guard. "They're kind of small," Slayton said, "so they like to control the ball. We saw them press some against Fenton. On offense they run a patterned offense and like to keep possession of the basketball."

"We're going to have to break up their patterns," Slayton continued. "We just can not afford to let them control the ball too much. And we sure can't foul them."

Glenbard North has a remarkable record from the foul line. So far this year the Panthers have hit over 75 per cent of their foul shots and connected on 21 out of 24 against Forest View.

Connors, like his players, feels that the idea of the Panthers being Patsyville is long gone. "We're going to beat somebody in the conference this year and we're going to hold our own with some people, too. Nobody is going to run all over us. Sure, Forest View did, but they were playing a great game while we were terrible. But nobody else is going to run over us."

Connors is trying to install a winning attitude at Glenbard North and it seems to be working somewhat. "We're even getting bigger crowds for our games," he said.

Slayton's squad is in a first place tie with Arlington and he says, "It sure is nice to be up there."

Of course, Slayton would like to say the same thing after the final buzzer tonight. But Glenbard North's Panthers are thinking, "If the Mets can do it, why not us?"

At Beverly Lanes

Cutler's team of the Parkway Men's League walked away with the season's first half of competition by sweeping all three games from Donahue, Bergdahl, George and Glenn all tied for second. Overall scoring was high with Wally Joern following Bob Paddock's 601 with a 578 including a 288 game. Others were Vern Schroeder 568-202, Bob Lampert 581-223, Russ Frye 581-221, Wally Mueller 560-221, Bill Scheller 588 and Glenn Quade 554-203. Otto Heilmann had games of 206 and 204, and George Quade had a 214.

Rich Vehe Sparks Skaters

The Mount Prospect Skating Club traveled to Joliet last Saturday to participate in an Amateur Skating Association of Illinois Indoor Meet.

This meet is the final indoor meet for 1969. Speed Skating moves outdoors for the balance of December and the months of January and February before moving onto artificially frozen ice during March.

Bob Haensch, the club's leading Junior Skater, joined Bob Vehe on the disabled list by breaking his leg in a fall last Thursday. Haensch will be out of competition for six weeks. Vehe has been incapacitated since being hit by a truck last July while bike riding.

Rich Vehe led the Club by winning the Midget Boys Class A Championship with a first place finish in the 220 yard sprint and a second place finish in the 440 yard event. Tommy Grunah, another strong Midget Class contender in the Club, recovered from some near spills to win third place in the two events skated.

Jimmy Tangney missed an opportunity to score, but Coach Mary Polaski feels that he will be a top contender in a few more weeks.

Dan Gillogly skated in his first meet of the year as a Midget "B" and hopes to get into the finals with a little more experience. Teammate Dave Hughton showed great improvement by qualifying for the final in the 220 yard sprint. Dave's fifth place finish put him close to the scoring column.

Eric Jonland skated as a Class A Midget and missed qualifying due to some hard luck spills.

Bobby Knight, Tom Tangney and Jay Kuivinen competed as Intermediate Boys and provided some of the most thrilling races of the meet. Knight placed second in the 440 yard and one mile events and third in the 880 yard race. Tangney was disqualified in the 440 yard final and finished second in the 880 yard final.

Barbara Westlake was the Club's only entry in the Intermediate Girls Class where she placed fourth in the 440 yard event. Steve Pedersen and Dick Robertson showed improvement in their Junior Class B events. Pedersen won the 440 and placed second in the 220 yard sprint, while Robertson finished third in the 220 and the 440.

Bonnie Bruck moved into the Class A Midget Girls class this year and is doing well against tough competition. Bonnie qualified for the 220 yard final and finished in fifth place. Joan Guzzardo is competing as a first year Class A Juvenile and scored a point for a fourth place finish in the 220 yard sprint.

Todd Jonland moved into the tough Junior Boys Class and was unable to score this week. Danny Lindstrom showed a real competitive spirit in the Bantam Boys Class by finishing in third in a 110 yard heat. This class is particularly good this year and Danny should win his share of awards. His big brother, Steve Lindstrom, is skating this year as a Class B Pony and he qualified into his semi-finals in the 110 yard and 220 yard races. Joan Wagner had a birthday on December 3rd, which moved her into the Midget Girls Class. Coach Mary looks for top performance from Joan on outdoor ice.

Randy, Amy and Marty Westlake did their best in the Pony, Midget and Juvenile classes and hope to score at the next meet.

The Mount Prospect Skating Club will host speed skaters from all over the country at Lions Park on Sunday, December 28, 1969. President Herman Haensch invites everyone to attend and see skating at its best.

Skiing with Saier

Buy, Rent Your Ski Equipment?

Al Saier

(Sixth in a series of ski columns by Al Saier, instructor from Aspen, Colo. Questions should be directed to Saier in care of Pro Sport Center, 261 E. Northwest Highway, Palatine.)

QUESTION:

I have never skied and do not have equipment. What would you suggest, buy or rent?

ANSWER:

This problem is faced by many who start skiing. Not knowing whether they should buy, and if they do, how expensive and how much should they buy. If you are hesitant and uncertain about skiing and your likes for the sport, it would be wise to rent your equipment for the first time.

After trying the sport and you feel there is a possibility of continuing, I'd suggest in buying a good pair of boots for several reasons. (1) boots are personal, (2) in having your own boots, it expedites the rental time by just asking for skis and poles, (3) it becomes important to maintain a good linkage from your feet to the skis, thus bettering your edge control. After buying boots and having skied some more, and you like the sport, I'd start buying the rest of your equipment.

When you have your own equipment you'll feel proud knowing that you're no longer a renter and have stepped up from the stage of a rank beginner.

Message of Christ One of Perennial Love of Mankind

by LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

The shepherds were frightened when the angel appeared. But the angel said: "Don't be afraid. For I am here with good news for you, which will bring joy to all the people."

The coming of Christ is "good news" — for you, for me, for all people. That was the herald angel's proclamation on the first Christmas Eve. It is still the basic rationale of Christmas festivity.

Nearly everyone would agree, probably, that the birth of Christ is "good news" in the sense that the world has been a better place because of His life and teaching.

But the herald angel meant a great deal more than that. And it is the more that makes Christmas an occasion for joyous celebration by all men in all ages.

What the angel meant—and what has always been the heart of the Christian gospel—is that Christ was the living embodiment of a message which God was unable to get across to mankind in any other way.

The message is simple and enormously comforting

God does not hate us. He loves us.

He does not wish to punish us for our errant ways. He seeks reconciliation and offers forgiveness.

The destiny He has prepared for us is not extinction, which would render our brief existence ultimately meaningless. He offers us eternal communion with His own timeless being, and thereby confers crucial importance on each deed and word and thought by which we become more or less worthy to be called His sons.

The distinguished British theologian Erik Routley points out that men have an ingrained tendency to suspect that God is hostile toward them.

This is a hangover from the primitive era of religion when gods were thought to be vengeful and capricious beings who had to be appeased by every means possible. Some versions of Christian theology have helped to perpetuate this unflattering concept of God, Routley says, by depicting Christ as a scapegoat who sacrificed himself in order to assuage God's hatred of humanity.

But this, says Routley, is "a pernicious distortion of the truth."

"Jesus Christ did not come to stand for us over against God: To vindicate mankind against a God who disbelieved in man's worthiness to be saved. The office of Christ was not to represent men to God, but to be God among men. Where men were saying constantly that 'God must be caused to love the world,' Christ said, 'God is love' — meaning that God loves the world and has always loved it."

That is indeed good news, forever relevant, perennially fresh, worthy of being celebrated with joy over and over again.

Merry Christmas!

LORDS AND LADIES

Bob Hester from Rockford, will be the guest caller tomorrow night for the Lords and Ladies Square Dance Club's Christmas dance, at the Highland School, Melrose and Highland Avenues, Elgin, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Everyone is invited to come and join us. . . rumor has it that "Santa" may stop in.

Additional information about the club's activities may be obtained by calling, Leslie Feuser at 428-2273.

BRONCO SQUARES

Club caller, "Foggy" Thompson will be calling the squares tonight, when the Bronco Squares meet for their regular dance at Grove Avenue School, 900 Grove Ave. in Barrington, from 8 to 11 p.m.

Cuing the rounds throughout the evening

The Almanac

by United Press International

Today is Friday, Dec. 19, the 353rd day of 1969 with 12 days to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Venus and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1777, George Washington and the Continental Army began their winter encampment at Valley Forge, Pa.

In 1942, members of the American Federation of Labor elected William Green as president to succeed organized labor pioneer Samuel Gompers.

In 1950, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower was named commander of military forces operating under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In 1965, Charles de Gaulle won a second five-year term as president of France when he received 55 per cent of the vote in a national runoff.

In 1968, Norman Thomas, six times the Socialist party candidate for president, died at the age of 84.

A thought for the day: President Woodrow Wilson once commented, "Sometimes people called me an idealist. Well, that is the way I know I am an American. America is the only idealistic nation in the world."

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"He just didn't have a sense of humor. I thought it was very amusing when you asked him if they accepted credit cards."

Marine Corps Officer Candidate Program will be Pat and Don Johnson.

Refreshments are served and everyone is invited to join in the fun of square dancing.

BELLS AND BOWS

Guest caller, Jim Smith from LaGrange, will square 'em up at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow night when the Bells and Bows Square Dance Club gathers at the Boy Scouts of America Building, 1622 N. Rand Road, Arlington Heights, for their Christmas dance.

Come early and get in on the half-hour round dance work shop starting at 8 p.m. with Edna and Gene Arnfield.

Staff Sgt. Robert J. Arvin Jr., Marine Corps recruiting representative for the area has received information on the new Marine Corps Officer Candidate Program open to young men who possess 60 semester hours (at an accredited college or junior college) and have a 2.0 grade point average on a 4.0 grading scale.

A young man who is accepted into the Officer Candidate Program will attend 10 weeks of training at the Marine Corps Base, Quantico, Va., and upon completion of this training he is commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant.

From the date he is commissioned he has a three year active duty requirement. The first five months of the three years would of course be Officers Basic School at Quantico, Va.

DURING THE THIRD year of the young man's active duty he may apply for the College Degree Program. If selected, he will be allowed to return to college to get his degree at full pay and allowances of his present rank. If the young man does not elect this program he, of course, will

The Danes' Yule Gift

Blue is beautiful, especially at Christmas time for collectors of the deep blue Danish Christmas plates.

Each year, thousands of people await the arrival of the charming plates, enjoying increasing popularity. The plates have a history extending back hundreds of years, however. Many years ago, the wealthy in Denmark started giving a plate heaped with fruits and goodies to each of their servants at Christmas time. Though the plates were at first crudely made, the servants hung them on their walls, probably because they had no other decorative objects in the house.

The servants began comparing their plates with those of their neighbors, and rivalry developed between the wealthy landowners in the making of beautiful plates, using wood pottery and metal. Later the plates were dated to distinguish the year they were given.

ALTHOUGH Christmas plates are now made in Germany, Sweden and Norway, the oldest and most well-known are Danish. The first commercial production of Christmas plates, in 1895, was by the Danish firm, Bing and Gröndal. The Royal Copenhagen Porcelain Manufactory has issued Christmas plates since 1908. It is said the Queen Juliana Marie gave this company the idea for its trademark, three wavy blue lines symbolizing the Sound, the Great Belt and the Little Belt, the three Danish waterways.

Employees of the Danish companies submit designs and compete for the honor of designing the next year's plate. After a limited number of the plates is made, the mold is broken on Christmas Eve or shortly after. Since the plates will never be reproduced, they become collector's items around the world.

The cobalt blue plates are a reflection of the joyful spirit of the Danish people, depicting the Danish way of life. What have they revealed? Quiet landscapes, a family on its way to church, an old water mill, moonlight over snow covered trees and a ship's boy at the tiller on Christmas night are some of the scenes portrayed.

But the most cherished plates depict the story of the first Christmas and the Christmas spirit. The shepherds hearing the angel's song as they watched in the fields, the Mother and Child, the arrival of Christmas guests, the Christmas star over the sea, the family gathering around the holiday tree to sing the songs of Christmas and the Danish custom of setting out a choice sheaf of grain for the wild birds at Christmas are all depicted, traditions belonging to a Danish Christmas.

CHRISTMAS PLATES have more than sentimental value. "Since only a limited number of the plates is made each year, the shortage in any year makes it worth many times the original investment," said

S. R. Rasmussen, a collector of Danish art work since his youth in Denmark. He and his wife own the Rasmussen Gift Shop at 1618 N. Rand Road, Arlington Heights.

"My interest in the arts and crafts of Denmark became a serious hobby only after I came to this country in 1925," he said.

Rasmussen noted that the trading and selling of these plates resembles the action of the stock exchange. His collection is one of the most extensive in the country of Christmas plates and porcelain figures made by the Royal Copenhagen manufactory.

Every household in Denmark has at least one of the plates, said Rasmussen, who travels to Scandinavian countries each year.

"Many Danes are not aware of their value to collectors, particularly Americans who buy a large share of the plates," he continued. "Antique dealers send dealers into the hinterlands to acquire them from people unaware of their value."

RASMUSSEN IS OFTEN called by collectors asking him to sell a plate he owns or to acquire a particular one. Through his family in Denmark, he is usually able to satisfy their requests.

Mrs. Clarence Hendrickson of Arlington Heights, whose Bing and Gröndal collection of Christmas plates dates from 1904, believes that the plates are a link with the traditions and heritage of Denmark. Since her husband's family is Danish and hers is Swedish, the plates have a special meaning.

"The legends and the willingness to share are important to the Danes, and are depicted in the plates," she said. "They are a friendly people. When you walk down the street or meet someone, you can be sure of receiving a warm welcome, food and drink."

She prepares traditional Scandinavian foods at Christmas time, another way of remembering her heritage.

"People need a sense of belonging to something," she said. "Each one of these plates represents part of a tradition."

BLUE AND WHITE are appropriate colors for the Christmas season. Blue, the color representing Mary, the mother of Christ, is intermingled with white, the symbol of purity and Christ. The colors are also said to represent the blue of the heavens and the white of newly fallen snow. The color is actually part of a Danish tradition, the production of fine porcelain in one of the most difficult ceramic techniques, underglaze porcelain.

Blue is also the favorite color of Mrs. Jean Deal, Arlington Heights, who displays her Royal Copenhagen and Bing and Gröndal plates in her blue dining room. A Danish friend started her collection, and each year sends her the newest Christmas plate. "It has become a family hobby," said Mrs. Deal, whose three daughters, Mrs. John Weidner, Pamela and Mary Pat have also started collections of the cobalt blue plates.

"We really look forward to the arrival of the plates each year," she continued. "Although at first we didn't understand the traditions behind them, the longer we have them, the more we become attached to them." One of her favorites is a plate depicting a dog similar to the family pet, a Keeshond.

Next year a jubilee plate will be produced by Bing and Gröndal. Made every five years, the jubilee plates bear the date of production as well as the date jubilee plates originated, 1895.

WHAT COULD BE more charming than Christmas plates to go with your model of a Viking ship? The plates are part of a collection at the Rasmussen gift shop, 1618 N. Rand Road, Arlington Heights. The plates are collector's items, as only a limited number are produced each year before the molds are broken.

A TWO-FOR-ONE stock split and an increase in the cash dividend rate were voted recently by the directors of the Van Dorn Co. (AMEX), diversified manufacturer with headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio. The stock dividend will be made Jan. 30, 1970, to shareholders of record Jan. 9. Directors also increased the quarterly dividend rate from 14 to 15 cents a share and declared a cash dividend payable Jan. 30 to shareholders of record Jan. 9. Lawrence C. Jones, president, said the split is the fifth major stock action taken by the board since June, 1961. Van Dorn's product lines include containers of plastic, metal and composition materials, heat treating service for steel and metal lithographing. A company plant is located in Itasca.

OVER 800 REAL estate personnel attended the recent sixth annual Realtors Institute of Illinois, sponsored by the Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards. Edward A. Bundy, Kenneth E. Morgan and Kenneth Lahnner of Bundy-Morgan Realty, Inc., Itasca, attended the week-long meeting in Peoria. The institute is a three-stage program designed to increase the professional competence of the members of the real estate industry. Those completing the three courses receive the designation G.R.I. (Graduate, Realtors Institute).

Transamerica Has Arlington Office

The Transamerica Insurance Group branch office located in the new Oakton Executive House at 1114 N. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights, recently held an open house, attended by 200 guests.

Formerly located at 223 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, the firm moved in May of this year to Arlington Heights. Burcher Sheard, branch manager, is the supervisor of this office and four service offices in northern Illinois and Wisconsin, including approximately 91 employees.

"We felt that being in the suburbs would be advantageous to our business," said Ivers Upenieks, office manager, "and we have had a 12-14 per cent increase in our business this year."

THE FIRM IS PART of the Transamerica Corp., which last year had a net income applicable to common stock of $88,531,938. Headquartered in San Francisco, Calif., the corporation includes a variety of subsidiaries. Almost half its net income is derived from financial services, including life insurance, mutual funds, consumer and commercial lending, and property and casualty insurance. Its real estate services divisions range from title insurance to financing and development. Entertainment and travel comprise the leisure time activities of the corporation, which owns United Artists Corp. and Trans International Airlines.

Budget Rent-A-Car Corp., fourth largest car rental organization in the United States, is also part of Transamerica Corp.

Reflects Change in the Mix

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago recently reported on the business loan rates, trust departments and credit to mortgage lenders in the Seventh Federal Reserve District.

Large banks in the Seventh District charged an average of 8.33 per cent on short-term business loans during the first half of November, compared to the 1968 figure of 6.72 per cent.

This probably does not reflect a lowering of the interest rates, but a change in the mix of large and small loans, the bank noted. A higher concentration of large loans, some to national firms, meant a large proportion of loans made at or below the prime rate. The total number of short-term loans was 10 per cent less than in August and 16 per cent less than in November 1968.

THE NUMBER of long-term loans under a revolving credit agreement was up in November compared to a year ago, although fewer loans maturing in a year or longer were written. The average rate on revolving credit loans was 8.79 per cent in November, compared to 6.46 per cent last year. On other long-term loans, the rate rose to 9.12 per cent, up from 6.57 a year ago.

Indiana, Illinois and Iowa rank first, second and third nationally in the number of banks with trust departments. Michigan ranks 15th and Wisconsin 16th. Although 30 per cent of all commercial bank trust departments are located in these five states, they administer only 15 per cent of all bank-held assets. Michigan and Illinois bank trust departments have the largest amount of assets among the five states and exceed the national average of $85 million.

Seventh Federal Reserve District weekly reporting banks indicated a slight increase in their credit advances to real estate mortgage lenders. A survey at the end of October indicated that such credit, mostly short-term, totaled $710 million, exceeding the $648 million in October 1968. Mortgage companies received a large share of the increase from $665 million in February, in addition to casualty insurance companies and philanthropic associations.

Its business services include the Transamerica Computer Co., Transamerica Investment Counselors, and Transamerica Research Corp. Its Foreign Study League sponsors student educational tours. The De Laval Turbine Inc. division produces steam turbines and gears, pumps and hydraulic valves.

Most of the financing of real estate lenders is furnished by some of the larger banks. This credit, extended through loans, mortgage repurchase agreements or both, includes $322 million outstanding at large Chicago banks.

Privacy Keynotes Condominiums

Three interior layouts are available at the Commons in Northbrook, announced by the builder-developer, the C. D. Johnson Co., of Glenview.

Ranch condominium townhouse designs include the "Atrium House," the "Garden House" and the "Patio House." Each layout includes two bedrooms and two full baths. Each has a basement with gas furnace, humidifier, central air-conditioning equipment and storage space. The homes feature an entrance court; a separate patio; and private attached garage with inside entrance.

The homes will be priced from $40,900, with living areas ranging from 1350 to 1900 square feet. Models are scheduled for completion and first public viewing in December.

THE ATRIUM HOUSE features an inner atrium area, located near the center of the home. This modern version of the ancient Roman home has an inner-courtyard area open to sun and sky at the top. The atrium is private, enclosed by insulating window walls and sliding glass doors. This area is approximately 12-foot x 8-foot.

The family room of the Atrium House — largest of the three basic plans — is nearly 19 feet long and over 14 feet wide. A wood-burning fireplace is centered in the far wall, and attractive divider separates family room from dinette-kitchen area.

In all three basic plans, privacy in the room arrangement is featured. The carpeted kitchens are arranged in a modified U-plan. Cabinets are matched, and a broom closet and pantry are found in the kitchen of each home, in addition to appliances.

IN ALL PLANS, the two bedroom suites of the sleeping area are secluded from the living area. Bedrooms measure approximately 14 feet by 12 feet, and each has its own compartmented bath and private dressing room, with walk-in closet.

Garages have automatic door operators and are double-size for the two larger homes, the Garden House and the Atrium House.

The "Commons in Northbrook" ranch-townhouses are now under construction, with homes in the first phase now available for selection at 1900 Shermer Road.

CLASSIC ATRIUM DESIGN is used in the Atrium House, one of three ranch townhouse designs available at the Commons in Northbrook, developed by the C. D. Johnson Co. Priced from $40,900, the homes include two bedrooms and two full baths. Each has an attached garage.

Tunnell To Oversee Beef, Lamb, and Veal

Wallace L. Tunnell of 520 Eastman St., Arlington Heights, former director of marketing for the beef division of Armour Foods, Chicago, has been named general manager of the firm's beef, lamb and veal division, according to A. S. Drain, vice president of fresh meats. He will also direct international sales, leather materials and collagen.

Tunnell joined Armour 21 years ago as a salesman at the former Oklahoma City plant, after a series of marketing assignments.

Association Is Contest Winner

The Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago has been named winner of the first prize in the National Association of Home Builders nationwide membership contest, according to Jack Hoffman, HBAGC president.

Hoffman said HBAGC had an increase of 28.3 per cent over a year ago, with a total of 767 members. The contest closed at the end of November.

The Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago is a newly formed "umbrella organization" for home and apartment builders in the Chicago metropolitan area.

HBAGC's first place award was in the division of associations with 500 or more members.

HBAGC consists of the Home Builders Association of Chicagoland, president, Jack S. Kepler; the Northern Illinois Home Builders Association, president, Robert Faganelli; and the Lake County Home Builders Association, which last week elected Jack Lageschulte president.

Robert K. Widdicombe Jr., executive vice president of HBAGC, said NAHB members are approved builders, developers, sub-contractors and suppliers in the home and apartment field as well as in light commercial, industrial and institutional building.

Hoffman and Widdicombe will accept the award at ceremonies at the NAHB 26th annual convention-exposition Jan. 18 through 22 at Houston, Tex.

Total NAHB membership in 1969 reached 51,460 members in 478 affiliated associations.

Brokers Announce Sale of Complex

The sale of the Coach-Lite Apartments in Belvidere has just been negotiated by Homefinders represented by Robert L. Zaun and Ralph L. Edgar, brokers. The 64-unit complex was built and owned by F & L Construction Corp. of Westchester.

Edgar & Zaun organized a limited partnership to purchase the property. The investors, as limited partners, share no responsibility for management or maintenance and have no personal liability beyond their investment, according to Zaun.

"There are many people," said Zaun, "interested in the big profits available through real estate, but do not have the capital necessary to acquire a project large enough to sustain the professional services and still provide a good profit. A limited partnership is the solution. It also provides the investors most of the advantages of a corporation, especially limited liability, while allowing for all of the profits, capital gains, losses and depreciation to pass directly to the partners. This is important for income tax purposes."

Completes Study

James C. Murray, 7211 Longmeadow, Hanover Park, senior fire claim representative for State Farm Insurance Companies, has returned home after completing three weeks of technical study on fire insurance at the firm's home office at Bloomington, Ill.

Murray works at the firm's claim service office, 330 E. St. Charles Road, in Villa Park.

State Farm maintains the school on a year-round basis so claim representatives may be informed of the latest fire policy contracts, methods and procedures in claim servicing. This year some 175 claim employees will attend classes there.

Mature Woman's Comeback

Today's woman of 35 plus is staging a strong comeback.

Over 40 per cent of all married women over 35 are in the labor force, said Carolyn Bolick, vice president of the Roland Companies, nationwide chain of professional personnel services including an Arlington Heights office. "The women whose children are grown or of an age where they are self sufficient — are flocking back to offices in droves," Miss Bolick stated.

"Most of these women are good job applicants — have had some work experience before marriage, are responsible, emotionally stable and dependable. True, the skills they have may be a little rusty, but usually with a bit of practice, these women find that their typing, shorthand and other skills have not left them," she explained.

Roland Co. has offered hints applicable to the majority of mature women seeking to return to the labor market:

HAVE YOU WEIGHED all the pros and cons, such as how it will affect your children? If they are still coming home for lunch, do you have adequate household help to take care of the situation? Are you prepared for the routine of a work day, not deceived into thinking it's going to be an extension of your volunteer work?

Have you considered the cost of going back to work? Everything has gone up in price in the last few years, including transportation and lunches. You will need a different wardrobe, more tailored, more flexible. You may find yourself going to the beauty salon more frequently, with less time to do your own hair at home. Your income will increase, but so will your taxes.

Have you defined your goals sufficiently? Do you know what kind of work you'd like to do? Are you reasonably sure you can handle it, given the proper encouragement and training? Reassess your high school and college career. Perhaps that one course in accounting which you never thought at the time would be of any value can open a whole new world for you. Seek something that you can do and like.

BE FLEXIBLE. One must have some aptitude or skill for almost any job. However, job requirements may be more flexible than you imagine. It is possible for you to become a secretary without knowing shorthand or dictaphone.

Allow for counsel and guidance. Go to a reputable personnel agency with counselors trained to guide you in the right direction.

Don't be afraid of testing. The results of these tests are used as guides. They are indicators of your performance, not permanent records, and as such they tell you which are your strong areas and which areas you need to improve.

"Working wives now hold one out of every five jobs in this country — signifying a revolution in American family life that shows no indications of decreasing," Miss Bolick concluded. According to a recent study by the Department of Labor, about 16.5 million wives have jobs of some kind outside the home. This means that one in every three American families is touched by this new revolution, Miss Bolick pointed out.

The working wife's contribution to the family income is significant according to Miss Bolick, borne out of this statistic from the Department of Labor: "Since 1960, family incomes in the United States rose 68 per cent, at a time when individual earnings went up only 42 per cent."

Peter Lycett

Lycett Joins DoALL As Sales Engineer

Peter Lycett of 1213 Springdale Lane, Elk Grove Village, has joined DoALL Northern Illinois Co. as a sales engineer, Paul Vande Castle president and district sales manager reports.

This company, at 1886 Des Plaines Ave., Des Plaines, is a major supplier of DoALL machine tools, cutting tools, gauging equipment and supplies used by industry in the manufacture of products.

Lycett has completed extensive training in the application and use of DoALL products. In his capacity as sales engineer he is qualified in the selection and use of DoALL products best suited for the user to obtain highest productivity at lowest cost.

He will serve industrial plants and schools in the area south from Wheeling to Elmhurst, including Elk Grove.

Lycett came to DoALL from Wickman Machine Tools (Overseas) Limited where he was machine specialist.

DoALL Northern Illinois Co. is one of 47 DoALL Sales-Service Stores in the United States and Canada. It is the franchised distributor of DoALL products in the Illinois Counties of Lake and McHenry, and part of Cook, DuPage and Kane counties.

Everyone a V.I.P.

When a company moves from one plant location to another, it transports the employees on move-in day in Cadillac limousines.

At least that is what the Cincinnati-Forte Co. did this week, moving 63 people in 10 black Cadillacs from Niles to the new facility in Arlington Industrial & Research Center, Arlington Heights.

The Cincinnati-Forte Co. is a leading producer of coil processing equipment for metals distributors and product manufacturers. Rudolph Toczyl, vice president and general manager said, "We just wanted to show our people how much we appreciate their efforts toward making a new, expanded plant possible for us."

The company was formed in 1962, and since that time occupied separate leased facilities in Niles for offices and plant. Cincinnati-Forte's sales growth made the building of a larger plant essential.

The company's new home includes a pair of buildings attached by an enclosed walkway — a 42,000-square-foot manufacturing plant just completed, and a 16,000-square-foot office structure to be ready in the spring. They more than double the size of the company's facilities in Niles, and also double Cincinnati-Forte's production capacity.

THE PLANT STRUCTURE is built almost entirely of stainless steel (the first such industrial building in the Midwest), and a two-story office structure featuring tinted glass walls and stainless trim.

Inside the plant, an area was set aside for a showcase of Cincinnati-Forte products, including slitting and precision blanking lines, and peripheral equipment such as coil loading cars, scrap winder/ballers, coil loaders and unloaders and transfer horns.

The company's three major production functions — fabricating, machining and assembly — are organized into separate areas of the building.

"The construction of our new offices and plant," said Toczyl, "represents the first phase in our plan for building the largest, most modern facilities in our industry."

Donald F. DeLong

DeLong Advances To Repair Foreman

Donald F. DeLong, 701 Lincolnwood Drive, Woodland Heights, Elgin, has been promoted by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. from communications serviceman to exchange repair foreman in Elk Grove Village.

Upon completion of four years with the Navy in the Mediterranean, DeLong joined the company in 1955 as a frameman in the Chicago Plant Department.

Builders Receive Favorable Ruling

Illinois home builders have for the present received permission from the Illinois Commerce Commission to continue to use the electrical meter fittings (related to underground wiring) already in use.

The Sustaining Builders Council (SBC) of the Home Builders Association of Chicago (HBAC), according to Robert K. Widdicombe, Jr., HBAC executive vice president, has been informed that the ICC has granted the motion of SBC attorneys, Chapman and Cutler, to suspend the Commonwealth Edison rule change requiring home builders to use a more costly, new meter fitting until all matters regarding underground wiring brought before the ICC by the Sustaining Builders are settled.

THE SUSTAINING Builders' complaint to the ICC asked for the elimination of all charges to builders for underground wiring, elimination of the requirement to use the new, more costly meter fitting and a request for refund of the charges made in the past year by Commonwealth Edison for the new meter fitting and underground wiring.

Widdicombe said that HBAC supports the adoption of state-wide performance type building codes and the use of new materials, systems and methods of home building to make it possible for home builders to meet the needs of the American public for good homes at the lowest possible cost.

COVERED PORTICO ENTRY leading to a reception foyer is featured in the Chelsea model, one of five now available at Winston Knolls, a development by the Winston Development Corp. in Hoffman Estates. To the left of the foyer is a multipurpose room, suitable for use as a library, music room or guest room. The main-floor family room has sliding glass doors leading to the rear terrace, and offers direct access to the kitchen.

Opens Third Unit

The Winston Development Corp. has announced the opening of unit three in its Winston Knolls community located at Elm and Algonquin Roads in Hoffman Estates.

The new unit will have 471 homes and is valued at $15.5 million. The community was opened in January 1969. More than 110 families are living at Winston Knolls which will eventually provide homes for 770 families.

Over four acres of property within unit three have been set aside for a park and an additional 15 1/2 acres will be given to the community for a combined park and grammar school site. Within the 350-acre community, the Winston Development Corp. has provided more than 45 acres of parks and school sites.

Unit three has been designed with winding streets and cul-de-sac patterns to provide Winston Knolls residents with protection against speeding cars.

FIVE MODEL homes... the Avon, the Bristol, the Chelsea, the Dover, and the Eden... ranging in price from $30,900 to $39,400 are available in unit three. The homes are open daily from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

The Avon is a four-bedroom, two and a half bath mid-level home with more than 1,900 square feet of living area; the Bristol is a three-bedroom ranch with 2 baths and over 1,600 square feet of living space; the Chelsea is an eight-room, two and a half bath split-level that offers 1,900 square feet of liveable area; the Dover is a two-story colonial featuring 10 rooms, two and a half baths, and 2,400 square feet of living space; the Eden is an eight-room mid-level with three baths and 2,400 square feet of living area.

All homes in Winston Knolls feature family rooms and attached two-car garages. The kitchens are fully equipped with Westinghouse appliances — free standing double oven and range, dishwasher, disposal unit and two-way power exhaust system. Cabinets are available in a choice of furniture finishes. Central air conditioning, a fireplace in the family room, carpeting, and water softeners are available as option features.

HOMES IN Winston Knolls are built on minimum 9,200 square foot homesites. There are 15 elevations to choose from. The community has underground utilities, paved streets and sidewalks.

The firm's other current projects include: Hunting Ridge, Palatine; and Willow Creek, a development of high-rise apartments, office building and commercial rentals in Palatine.

Hamburger Grad

Thomas Spitzka of 915 Holly Way, Palatine recently graduated from the world's most unusual university — Hamburger University — in suburban Chicago. Spitzka is assistant marketing research manager with the McDonald's restaurant chain's corporate headquarters staff in Chicago.

He received his B.H. (Bachelor of Hamburgerology) degree in formal commencement exercises at the unique university — where everybody majors in hamburgerology with a minor in French Fries. Hamburger U., which boasts the meatiest courses of any university, is operated by the McDonald's chain of restaurants as a training school for the men who run its outlets. The local McDonald's is part of the big nationwide chain which now numbers over 1,200 restaurants across the country.

Indicators Are Slumping

For the first time in nine years, the economy is likely to turn downward in the next few months, possibly turning into a serious recession if the present restrictive monetary policy continues, according to the Barometer of Business, a monthly publication of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago.

Production is down in most industries, according to the report. Durable goods output slipped this month, and the production of nondurable goods has fallen to its lowest point in six months. Production of consumer goods is 2 per cent lower than the July high. Automobile assemblies and the production of television sets have also dropped.

WEAKNESS HAS been shown in nearly half the so-called leading business indicators during the past six months. Building permits are off 25 per cent since last April. Other slumping indicators are average hours worked, industrial material prices, corporate profits and stock prices. The report notes a weakness in consumer spending since mid-year. Sales of domestically produced cars are off 8.5 per cent from last year, except in September when new models were introduced. Furniture and household expenditures decreased by one billion dollars in the third quarter.

The growth rate in the money supply has also been affected, declining from 7 per cent in the last half of 1968 to 4 1/2 per cent in the first half of 1969 to zero in the last six months. The report predicted that the effects of the money squeeze will be felt in early 1970. Price advances will probably abate as labor demand and production ease.

WICKER, IN COMBINATION with a yellow, black and white color scheme and one bold print, turn a family room into a sunny garden room in one of the three models at 3H Building Corporation's Old Mill Grove development in Lake Zurich. Strong color and pattern are used in all the rooms at Old Mill Grove.

Interior Design Impact

Interior design can be a useful sales tool in today's highly competitive housing market.

Decorating vignettes that supply ideas to a prospective homebuyer, strong color and pattern repeated often enough to create impact are some of the ingredients used for successful model home interiors.

According to Jack Childs of Childs-Dreyfus, interior designer for 3H Building Corporation's new Lake Zurich "Old Mill Grove" community, "Good model home interiors must deliver an almost instantaneous 'idea' message to a prospective home-buyer. She should be able to visualize herself living in that particular house."

"A family room off a kitchen that has been turned into a garden room with wicker and greenery not only gives interior ideas to a homemaker, it shows her how a room can be used in several ways," he said.

Childs also cited a room planned for an infant in one of the Old Mill Grove models. "We could have used a conventional crib. But this would have created one of those rooms that people pass by without really seeing. Instead, we hung a blue rattan cradle from the ceiling and went with a strong red, white and blue color scheme," he said.

All six models in the Lake Zurich community make use of bold color and pattern. The garden room goes all the way with yellow, black and white and one striking fabric pattern used throughout.

A small grouping of Danish furniture in a sitting room creates a study area. The wall carving has been hung low to pull the whole grouping together.

"In another house we have created the feel of an old-fashioned country kitchen and family room through the use of a number of widely divergent furniture styles: A bentwood rocker, a Queen Anne style coffee table and Early American furniture for dining all blend for a warm, relaxed mood," Childs said.

Old Mill Grove models are open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday through Friday; from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday. The community is at Rand and Cuba roads in Lake Zurich.

Umbrella Group Elects Stephens

William Stephens

William Stephens, president of Stephens Construction Co., Barrington, has been elected president of the Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago for 1970, according to Robert K. Widdicombe Jr., executive vice president of Home Builders Association of Chicago.

Stephens was vice president of HBAGC (last year), and is a past president of Northern Illinois Home Builders Association, which, with the Home Builders Association of Chicago, founded the HBAGC as a confederation or "umbrella organization" of home builder groups in the Chicago area. It is expected the newly organized Lake County HBA will soon become a member of HBAGC.

Other HBAGC officers include: home builder Bruce Biletz, Deerfield, first vice president; Thomas Greuling of Home Federal Savings & Loan, second vice president; home builder Don Dize of Aurora, treasurer; and home builder Jack Bretsnyder of Lombard, secretary.

STEPHENS SAID the aim of HBAGC in 1970 will be to assist the newly formed Lake County association in its first year; to form one or more new organizations in other counties; to encourage existing home builder organizations to become allied with HBAGC; to encourage those conditions which will make it possible for home builders to build quality homes at the lowest possible price in order to house all the people.

Muriello Opens Appraisal Firm

Frank J. Muriello

A new real estate appraisal firm, Frank Muriello & Associates, is located at 200 E. Higgins Road, Elk Grove Village.

Frank Muriello of Oak Park has been active in the real estate field since 1949. Sales Center Planned Bennett and Kahnweiler Associates has announced the sale of 31,000 square feet of land at the southwest corner of Higgins and Crossen in Centex Industrial Park, Elk Grove Village, to the Electronic Business Machines Corp., now at 61 Oakbrook Center Mall, Oakbrook.

The firm plans to construct a 7,000 square foot office and service center to be used for the sales and service of office equipment machinery.

Howard G. Krafur and Robert A. Stone, both of Bennett and Kahnweiler, acted as co-brokers on the transaction.

A spring groundbreaking is planned.

STATE OF ILLINOIS
School Building Commission
JOHN W. MOORE
Executive Director

Published in The Herald Express, Jan. 2, 1970.

Invitation to Bid

The State of Illinois School Building Commission will receive bids for the construction of three new elementary school buildings located in the Schaumburg Elementary School District, Cook County No. 54, Schaumburg, Illinois.

Sealed proposals for the above work will be received by the School Building Commission, Room 224, Marycrest Plaza
Building, 2112 West Jefferson Street, Joliet, Illinois, until 8:00 p.m. Central Standard Time on January 6, 1970, and will be publicly opened at that time.

Proposals shall be submitted under one general contract including general work, plumbing, heating and ventilating and electrical work. Proposals may be submitted for any one or a combination of any two or all three.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish a performance and payment bond acceptable to the Commission in the full amount of the contract price. Cost of said bond will be paid by the contractor.

No bid may be withdrawn after the closing time for receipt of bids or for a period of 30 days thereafter. The School Building Commission reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids, to waive any informality in bidding, and to award a contract in the best interest of the State of Illinois.

Ordinance No. 69-144

AN ORDINANCE PRO-RATING THE COST OF CONSTRUCTION OF A SANITARY SEWERAGE SYSTEM IN DOUGLAS AVENUE, DOROTHY AVENUE, GEORGE STREET, AND BEVERLY LANE.

WHEREAS, CHARLES V. LOCASCIO, of 810 North Dryden Avenue, Arlington Heights, Illinois, has heretofore caused to be constructed, and has paid the cost thereof, of a system of Sanitary Sewers in Douglas Avenue, Dorothy Avenue, George Street, Maude Avenue, Hickory Avenue and Beverly Avenue, and

WHEREAS, the cost of such construction as completed under plans prepared by the Engineer, Applied Engineering Company, dated November 10, 1967, totals $68,200.86 including engineering and inspection; and

WHEREAS, the aforesaid improvement with its appurtenances so constructed can serve other properties adjacent to or within the Village of Arlington Heights, and

WHEREAS, the property being directly benefited therefrom is graphically represented by the accompanying map and described as follows: Area 1, 24.53 acres of property located in the East 1/2 of the NW 1/4 of Section 20-42-11; Area 2, 6.20 acres of property located in the East 1/2 of the NW 1/4 of Section 20-42-11; Area 3, Locascio's Subdivision Units 1, 2, and 3; Area 4, lots 104 through 111 in G. A. Goetz's Arlington Heights Gardens Subdivision; Area 5, lot 68 in G. A. Goetz's Arlington Heights Gardens Subdivision; Area 6, lot 24 in G. A. Goetz's Arlington Heights Gardens Subdivision; Area 7, 8, and 9, parts of lot 114 in G. A. Goetz's Arlington Heights Gardens Subdivision; Area 10, lot 67 in G. A. Goetz's Arlington Heights Gardens Subdivision; Area 11, 7.34 acres of property located in the West 1/2 of the NE 1/4 of Section 20-42-11;
Area 12, part of lot 113 in G. A. Goetz's Arlington Heights Gardens Subdivision. This service area is graphically represented by the accompanying map and made a part of this ordinance.

WHEREAS, the said CHARLES V. LOCASCIO was given permission to construct said improvement by private contract with the understanding that an ordinance be passed by the Village of Arlington Heights, after completion of said improvement, requiring that the owners of any property benefiting therefrom desiring to make use thereof, pay the proportionate share of the cost of said improvement, to be used in reimbursement of CHARLES V.
LOCASCIO or his successors or assigns for the proportionate cost of the construction thereof; and Link Jr.

E. R. Link Jr., 519 Cedar St., Arlington Heights, has been appointed by Pres. Richard M. Nixon to the President's committee on employment of the handicapped.

Link serves as executive director of the American Osteopathic Hospital Association, 930 Busse Hwy., Park Ridge. The association is the official body representing some 300 osteopathic hospitals nationally. The 35-year-old organization has been based in Park Ridge since 1962, after relocating from Davenport, Ia.

The President's Committee, headquartered in Washington, D.C., is devoted to the advancement and useful employment of America's handicapped citizens.

Link also serves as executive secretary of the American College of Osteopathic Hospital Administrators, Park Ridge, composed of approximately 150 hospital executives dedicated to the elevation of professional standards. Ultimate goal is the betterment of health care available to the American public in osteopathic hospitals.

Link is a consultant on the Federal Health Council of the American Osteopathic Association, Chicago, the group representing osteopathic physicians, and a member of the American Public Health Association and the International Platform Association of public speakers.

He recently was elected to the International Registry of Who's Who, Geneva, Switzerland.

Edward L.
Thomas

Two area vice presidents, Edward L. Thomas of 1714 N. Drury, Arlington Heights, and Les Davis of Niles, have been appointed to the recently established distributor division of the Nightingale-Conant Corp., in Lincolnwood, according to chairman Earl Nightingale.

Thomas, formerly national account executive, was national training director of the Lindsay Co., Minneapolis/St. Paul, Minn., before coming to Nightingale-Conant in 1963.

Davis was formerly director of corporate consulting. Before joining the corporation three years ago, he headed Motivation Services, Inc. of Dallas, Texas.

In addition to Earl Nightingale's "Our Changing World" and other broadcast syndications, the Nightingale-Conant Corp. produces motivation programs for businesses and individuals. Thomas and Davis will direct distributor marketing in their respective zones of two current cassette tape series, "Lead the Field" and "Great Ideas in Selling."

Sewage Dumping Attacked

DENNIS LEMPICKI, an Itasca Shell Station dealer, is protesting the oil company's coin games. His "reward" for refusing to participate may be a cancellation of his lease. He claims the company's "Mr. President" and "Man In Space" games give over a million-to-one odds for customers against winning the big prize. Customers have supported Lempicki's protest with letters. The station owner has joined others in picketing the Chicago Shell offices.

The Village of Bloomingdale was served with a lawsuit from the office of State Atty. Gen. William Scott Tuesday, charging the village had "caused untreated human waste, sewage, sludge and scum to be drained into Springbrook Creek."

The village has 21 days to answer. As a direct result of Scott's law suit, residents of the Suncrest Highland area, in the northeast section of the village will be ordered to disconnect any sump pump drain tile and downspouts which are infiltrating into the sanitary sewer system, and tenants in the flats on Lake Street may be evicted.

The suit, filed in the DuPage County Circuit Court in Wheaton, by the state attorney general's office asked for an order restraining "any person, firm or corporation from connecting any household apartment or other building sewer system to any main, lateral or interceptor line of the defendant's sanitary sewer."

BLOOMINGDALE Village Atty. Jack Wagborne explained Wednesday at the board meeting, "The suit is not directed at the treatment of the effluent at the plant but the by-pass sewage which is diverted from the plant at times of heavy flow."

According to Wagborne, many villages in the county divert sewage when excess storm sewage infiltrating into the system makes it impossible to treat everything that would flow through their plants.

Bloomingdale was singled out, he said, because the attorney general is beginning a campaign to enforce water pollution in areas where the State Sanitary Water Board has been lenient with generous time limits.

Having the authority to overrule the sanitary water board, the attorney general will "revoke all prior commitments or drastically reduce timetables," Wagborne said.

THE SANITARY water board ruled the treatment of the effluent at the plant was inadequate in 1966 and the village was put on notice to phase it out.

Several months ago the village introduced polymers into the treatment process and brought the quality of the effluent within acceptable standards. The board still expects, however that the plant will be phased out by June 1970.

"Scott isn't going to wait any more. He's not going to listen to problems—he wants answers and solutions," Wagborne said.

Village Engineer Ralph Gross explained, "Except for North Pleasant Street, every home in the Suncrest area has perimeter drain tiles and a deep basement or lower level with a sump pump or sewers which flows into the sanitary sewer system."

THESE WILL HAVE to be disconnected and any other new connections into the sanitary system will be prevented.

Tenants at the Victor Smigel development of 22 flats on Lake Street west of Glen Ellyn Road may also be evicted because of pressure from the attorney general's suit. Smigel had permission from the Sanitary Water Board to install a new line from his apartments to the plant across Lake Street but not to use the line until the village showed satisfactory improvement in the facilities.

An earlier court order allowed Smigel to tap-on to existing lines at Lake Street if his buildings had 15 persons or less living in them.

Smigel built the new line and connected it to another existing line along Glen Ellyn Road which violated the sanitary water board ruling.

About six families are living in three of the flats, according to Building Inspector August Fessler. Eviction, if it was ordered, would be done through the courts and not the water board, Wagborne said.

Say Krass Mining Can Be Regulated

Bloomingdale has the legal authority to regulate and eventually stop the mining and landfill operations being conducted at the Ajax Sand and Gravel Co., according to a report done by the law firm of Ancel, Stonesifer, Glink and Levin.

The report, completed last October was made public at Wednesday's village board meeting. It had been withheld by the villages of Roselle and Bloomingdale, which commissioned the investigation, because officials did not want to reveal any basis of future plans.

Residents of Roselle, who live on Foster Avenue, directly behind the property owned by Joseph Krass which is being mined and allegedly used for an illegal landfill operation, have been trying to get copies of the report from the villages.

The report was placed in committee for further discussion by the Bloomingdale trustees. The village will request the County Health Dept. to deputize a person for the specific purpose of observing the traffic going into the landfill area of the property.

ROSELLE RESIDENTS have testified Krass is allowing raw garbage to be dumped in the landfill, violating an earlier court order to restrict the landfill to rubbish and building materials.

Residents contend the villages have suppressed the report to hide the fact direct action can be taken regarding the gravel pit.

"As far as I'm concerned there are certain members on both village boards who are opposed to any action that would result in closing down Krass," John Shanley, 133 Foster Ave., told the Register.

Shanley said "the report spells out specifically what Bloomingdale should do to shut the man down, but it has been placed in committee."

The report, read last night, indicated the village of Bloomingdale could pass ordinances regulating the mining operations of the gravel pit and the landfill operation, which is currently under the jurisdiction of the county.

MINING AND landfill operations at the property do not conform with the R-1 (residential) zoning of the area. This is a valid non-conformity (use of the land not agreeing with zoning but which was begun before the zoning was established.)

Krass is legally in accordance with the village ordinance concerning the non-conforming use which allows continuance of such use on any portion of the original site without violation.

The report notes the village has other ordinances, passed last April, which set a time limit on non-conforming uses.

Any building or use not conforming to zoning of the area must be terminated five years from the passage of the ordinance. Non-conforming uses in areas zoned R-1 can have their time limit cut by 50 percent.

SHANLEY TOLD the trustees at Wednesday night's meeting it was "up to the village of Bloomingdale to do something."

Both Shanley and other residents have addressed the board, repeatedly urging it to put pressure on the county to set a definite date for its suit against Krass's landfill operation.

There has been nothing done regarding a court suit against Krass's landfill operation, which residents claim is illegal. Last October several homeowners from Foster Avenue appeared at a preliminary hearing to show cause for a suit.

Because of the devaluation of their property, which is adjacent to the mining and landfill operations, residents on Foster Avenue say they are seriously considering filing for readjustments in their real estate taxes.

Russell E. Schert, 225 E. Foster Ave., has obtained a form filing for a reassessment of his property. Mrs. Schert said "a real estate person came to look at my home and told me because of the property behind me, the market value of the home would be at least $3,000 less than normal."

$340 Reported Stolen

An Addison couple reported Tuesday that $340 in cash was stolen from a dresser drawer in the bedroom of their apartment.

Daniel Peters, of 415 Stevens Street, told Addison that three $100 bills and two $20 bills were taken from the top drawer of the dresser between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Police said the front door of the apartment was pryed open between the time Mrs. Peters left the house in the morning and when she arrived home in the late afternoon.

No Coins But Many Headaches

by KEN HARDWICKE

The sign above the station door read "Service Is Our Business." Inside mechanic Dennis Lempicki sat stolidly behind a desk full of letters wondering if he would lose both within a year.

It wasn't always like this for the Itasca Shell station operator. Over two months ago, his stalls were filled with cars seeking repair and Lempicki was busier than the Christmas shopping rush. Shell Oil Company honored him with a plaque for five years of valued business association.

Lempicki could boast that he deserved the honor because he had doubled the volume of gas sold since taking over operation of the Itasca Shell Service Center.

But that was over two months ago and fortunes of men change regularly like dirty oil after 2,000 miles. The five-year plaque for achievement now hangs atop a bulletin board clustered with customer letters protesting Shell's recent actions against Lempicki and praising the mechanic for refusal to participate in Shell's coin games.

IT ALL started in September when Lempicki refused to distribute Shell's "Mr. President" coin game. Lempicki's refusal stemmed from exorbitant costs of promotion for himself and other dealers ($400-

$1,800 a month), coin thievery and a belief that the coin games were "unfair" to the public and station operators.

"I would like to see the service station turned back into a station, not a gambling casino," said the 29-year-old Lempicki.

Gambling may be all right for "Jimmy the Greek" of Las Vegas, but according to Lempicki's recent tabulations a customer's chance of winning the top $5,000 prize is 1,133,000 to one. When both the house and patron is losing, Lempicki feels something is definitely wrong.

Lempicki's accusations against Shell's

Awards Delayed

Awarding of received bids for renovation of Highland School in Wood Dale Dist. 7 was deferred this week until the two apparent low bidders have been contacted by Alexander, Borkin, Westphal and DeYoung, school architectural firm.

School officials, meeting in an adjourned meeting Tuesday night, found seven contracting firms bidding on the renovation work for the school district's oldest facility located on North Wood Dale Road.

coin games are not unfounded and he is prepared to show anyone who asks to see the figures.

"Only 10 to 25 per cent of the dealer's cost of promotion is returned to the general public," he said. "The customer expects something for nothing and his chances of winning are very, very slim."

SHELL SALESMEN guarantee boxes with $200 in winners but the figures never coincide.

Besides 35 customer letters lauding the Itasca dealer for his stand against Shell, Lempicki has received other assorted support. The Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago (GRA) which has a membership of over 440 stations has supported him.

A GRA attorney said 99 per cent of the dealers don't want to participate in the games and if a dealer refuses to participate in the games, his lease is threatened.

Lempicki is more than aware of the lease cancellation policy by Shell since company officials have informed him that unless he complies with the coin games such as "Man in Space," his lease will be terminated shortly.

Lempicki has one year before his lease can be renewed and he seriously doubts whether he will be a permanent fixture at the corner of Irving and Walnut Street.

Besides GRA, Lempicki took a personal poll of 32 Shell dealers in the surrounding area and 29 supported or sympathized with his objections. Even his closest competitor in town, Pat Bartuch, who operates the Standard station down the road, agrees with his game denial.

Residents Blamed for Loss

The defeat of Bloomingdale Elementary School Dist. 13's referendum Tuesday, proposing a 49 cent tax rate increase, was "part of the whole taxpayer rebellion," Leon Knickrehm, chairman of the district's Citizens' Advisory Council (CAC), said after the votes were counted.

Final official results out of a total 720 votes cast were 242 in favor, 469 opposed and nine ballots were spoiled.

Although there was a last minute campaign opposing the referendum, Knickrehm and school board members agreed it did not play a significant role in the failure of the proposal.

"I WOULDN'T GIVE too much credit to the distribution of anti-referendum pamphlets," Knickrehm said. "The no votes were there already. People are just rejecting tax increases."

Although the turnout for the referendum was less than the last one held in March, the margin of defeat was greater. Knickrehm pointed out many people expected the state income tax, passed this summer, to solve financial problems of the school districts, through increased state aid.

Besides reliance on the state income tax, Knickrehm said, many people rejected the proposed increase in the educational fund rate because they are waiting for the state Constitutional Convention to provide some sort of solution to local school district financial crises.

KNICKREHM SAID the CAC would hold a meeting soon to determine its next move. He said the group would maintain existence "because of the long-term needs of the district," recalling the group had also advised the district it would need a new junior high building in the near future.

"I don't know just what we will do. Maybe the referendum defeat will serve to strengthen our initiative and group us closer," he said.

Lake Park Modifies Code

Lake Park High School Dist. 108 modified its policy statement Monday pertaining to student attire and personal grooming for 1970.

School officials studied a recommendation from a faculty senate, executive and student councils to revise the current policy which appears in the student handbook.

Following considerable debate on the proposed recommendation, the board of education adopted the modified statement unanimously. The board's action this week stemmed from recent court decisions relating to student rights.

THE PRESENT POLICY now in effect states:

"There is considerable evidence to indicate a definite correlation between one's attire and personal grooming and his state of mind, attitudes, and behavior. In light of this fact, a board of education regulation prohibits any type of bizarre attire or personal grooming. Students are expected to choose school attire and personal grooming in a perspective of reasonable standards and good taste."

The adopted and revised policy which will become effective next school year now reads:

"We affirm the right of students to express their individual preferences in their attire and grooming so long as such does not interfere with health, safety or learning. We are proud of Lake Park High School, and we are proud of the students who make Lake Park what it is. We hope that our students will take pride in their grooming and will choose school attire in a prospective of reasonable standards and good taste."

THE REVISED POLICY prompted by the faculty senate, followed an apparent trend by girl students in wearing slacks to classes. It was reported that 158 girl students of the total female enrollment of 946, attended class recently wearing slacks.

Discretion as to what constitutes attire which "does not duly interfere with health, safety or learning," will be the controlling factor when the new policy is instituted.

Supt. Carl Forrester told school board members that adoption of the revised policy statement "isn't going to change in practice what we are doing. It is placing emphasis back where it lays . . . to the student's and their pride in the school."

Some board members felt the modification "didn't change anything" and questioned whether the policy statement currently in effect should be amended in favor of the recommendation offered by the faculty senate in conjunction with the executive and student councils.

ONE DELATION IN the senate's proposal was evident — this was the omission of "Bizarre" attire . . . a wording in the current policy.

Under present regulations the board of education "prohibits any type of bizarre attire or personal grooming."

Forrester said "bizarre" was a "very general statement" and adoption of the revised policy makes the wording "more specific."

Itasca to Seek Sewer Bids

The Itasca Village Board, acting in the capacity of the Board of Local Improvements, resolved a long-standing sewer problem Wednesday night by officially allowing for open bids on a storm sewer project.

The action came after a marathon debate developed between protesting village residents and various board members during a two hour "talkathon."

Village President Wilbert Nottke opened the discussion by reading a legal decision released by Judge William J. Guilt of the 18th Judicial Circuit Court of DuPage County.

He denied a protesters' petition and agreed with the village assessment of $40-$45 per year (approximately $450 over a 10 year period) for the installation of storm sewers in a controversial basin area in the southeast portion of Itasca.

MOST OF NOTTKE'S words fell on deaf ears and a debate soon emerged between opposing residents of the project, headed by Gene Phillips, and proponents of the plan backed by Nottke and Village Attorney Lawrence Traeger Jr.

Emotions and embarrassment were further heightened when two former village presidents, Paul Baehne and James Clayson, who Nottke said would be available to inform the residents of past proceedings on the sewer issue, failed to appear. One of the absentee spokesmen resigned his post as village president because of the same sewer controversy.

Phillips requested that the board take some kind of action because his group of 118 known objectors had only to Jan. 2 to file an appeal.

The objecting group of homeowners contends that the sewer installation is inequitable because it will benefit primarily that land which is improved. The dissenters believe the entire project only benefits those people who have property directly involved.

"LEGALLY YOU have won the battle but morally you have not," Phillips said. "The majority (65 per cent) of the people in the area still object to the assessment." After Trustee Roy Petherbridge informed citizens the board represented the "silent majority," the purported "vocal minority" indicated that from 85-90 per cent of the people concerned are in opposition to the sewer assessment.

Petherbridge suggested that Phillips and his dissident group conduct a poll or circulate a petition that showed the number of residents who oppose the project.

"If you come up with 90 per cent or a big majority of the people who are against the sewer, I would certainly have to agree with it," Nottke said.

NOTTKE AGREED that if a tie among the board members arose on the sewer issue, he would cast his deciding vote against the project.

The Board of Local Improvements, which convened promptly following the adjournment of the village board, designated Feb. 3 as the final day for acceptance of all bids.

Overlooked, but almost as important was the annexation by the board of 74 acres of land from Commonwealth Edison and the Central Manufacturing District (CMD).

Itasca officials had requested that Commonwealth Edison annex its 25 acres of R-1 zoning (single family dwelling) to the village. The power utility did so willingly.

"They are doing us a favor. This annexation is a stepping stone to getting the Granville Subdivision in the village," said Nottke.

THE 25 ACRES is north of the Itasca Country Club and borders 1300 feet west of Prospect Avenue and has Granville Avenue as its northern boundary.

The village trustees then proceeded to double that evening's first annexation with unanimous approval of annexation of 49 acres of CMD property. The second site lies east of Meacham Road and extends north to the DuPage County line. The new area lies 2,000 feet west of Route 53 and is approximately 1,000 feet north of Thorndale Road.

The board also accepted the Planning Commission's recommendation that the newly-annexed land be changed from R-1 to M-1 (light manufacturing zoning).

"That's more land than we have annexed in years," said Petherbridge following the formal approval.

Immediately after officially acquiring the new territory, Nottke suggested the board reinstate an annexation fee because it was needed for preservation of the tax base for schools. Itasca had removed the fee to encourage annexation.

DEBATE AROSE among Nottke and board members on whether the village could impose an annexation fee without a legal ordinance to do so. Robert Bremmer, attorney for CMD, said that "certainly you should pass my annexation if you passed Edison's without a fee."

Petherbridge agreed and the other trustees followed his recommendation. Nottke placed the annexation ordinance fee on the agenda for the next board meeting.

Delay Building Report to Jan. 6

The Citizens Advisory Council (CAC) of Lake Park High School Dist. 108 deferred compilation Monday of its final report on recommendations to school officials on future and immediate site and building needs until Jan. 6.

This was the date set by temporary chairman Al Eichsteadt following presentation of reports by key subcommittees.

According to Eichsteadt, the council's steering committee will evaluate the detailed data on educational needs, public opinion, economic factors and population trends offered by the various study groups representing a cross-section of residents within the school district.

ALTHOUGH NO definite indication was given during the evening session there was evidence that communication of the problems facing Dist. 108 and proposed courses of action would receive top priority by school officials.

The council was noncommittal about whether or not a referendum election would be recommended to members of the board of education. The seriousness of the problems facing the school district in 1970 could trigger implementation of split or double shifts.

Possible curtailment of band and chorus may be made as a temporary measure until adequate plant facilities are available.

The emergency measures may be necessary to meet the anticipated increase in student enrollment in 1970 sparked by current residential developments until solutions are finalized.

LAKE PARK High School is busting at the seams and it is not unlikely that Dist. 108 will find any solace from developers in easing its current crisis, according to officials.

The citizens advisory council could recommend to school officials that a referendum election is a must to provide facilities for at least another 1,000 students.

Land availability for additional sites is now at a premium and 50 acres is not easy to come by.

It has been estimated that a new facility would cost around $7 million if lucky, but this could go higher each year.

Sewage Dumping Attacked

DENNIS LEMPICKI, an Itasca Shell Station dealer, is protesting the oil company's coin games. His "reward" for refusing to participate may be a cancellation of his lease. He claims the company's "Mr. President" and "Man in Space" games give over a million-to-one odds for customers against winning the big prize. Customers have supported Lempicki's protest with letters. The station owner has joined others in picketing the Chicago Shell offices.

The Village of Bloomingdale was served with a lawsuit from the office of State Atty. Gen. William Scott Tuesday, charging the village had "caused untreated human waste; sewage, sludge and scum to be drained into Springbrook Creek."

The village has 21 days to answer. As a direct result of Scott's law suit, residents of the Suncrest Highland area, in the northeast section of the village will be ordered to disconnect any sump pump drain tile and downspouts which are infiltrating into the sanitary sewer system, and tenants in the flats on Lake Street may be evicted.

The suit, filed in the DuPage County Circuit Court in Wheaton, by the state attorney general's office asked for an order restraining "any person, firm or corporations from connecting any household apartment or other building sewer system to any main, lateral or interceptor line of the defendant's sanitary sewer."

BLOOMINGDALE Village Atty. Jack Waghorne explained Wednesday at the board meeting, "The suit is not directed at the treatment of the effluent at the plant but the by-pass sewage which is diverted from the plant at times of heavy flow."

According to Waghorne, many villages in the county divert sewage when excess storm sewage infiltrating into the system makes it impossible to treat everything that would flow through their plants.

Bloomingdale was singled out, he said, because the attorney general is beginning a campaign to enforce water pollution in areas where the State Sanitary Water Board has been lenient with generous time limits.

Having the authority to overrule the sanitary water board, the attorney general will "revoke all prior commitments or drastically reduce timetables," Waghorne said.

THE SANITARY water board ruled the treatment of the effluent at the plant was inadequate in 1966 and the village was put on notice to phase it out.

Several months ago the village introduced polymers into the treatment process and brought the quality of the effluent within acceptable standards. The board still expects, however that the plant will be phased out by June 1970.

"Scott isn't going to wait any more. He's not going to listen to problems-he wants answers and solutions," Waghorne said.

Village Engineer Ralph Gross explained, "Except for North Pleasant Street, every home in the Suncrest-area has perimeter drain tiles and a deep basement or lower level with a sump pump or sewers which flows into the sanitary sewer system."

THESE WILL HAVE to be disconnected and any other new connections into the sanitary system will be prevented.

Tenants at the Victor Smigel development of 22 flats on Lake Street west of Glen Ellyn Road may also be evicted because of pressure from the attorney general's suit. Smigel had permission from the Sanitary Water Board to install a new line from his apartments to the plant across Lake Street but not to use the line until the village showed satisfactory improvement in the facilities.

An earlier court order allowed Smigel to tap-on to existing lines at Lake Street if his buildings had 15 persons or less living in them.

Smigel built the new line and connected it to another existing line along Glen Ellyn Road which violated the sanitary water board ruling.

About six families are living in three of the flats, according to Building Inspector August Fessler. Eviction, if it was ordered, would be done through the courts and not the water board, Waghorne said.

Say Krass Mining Can Be Regulated

Bloomingdale has the legal authority to regulate and eventually stop the mining and landfill operations being conducted at the Ajax Sand and Gravel Co., according to a report done by the law firm of Ancel, Stonesifer, Glink and Levin.

The report, completed last October was made public at Wednesday's village board meeting. It had been withheld by the villages of Roselle and Bloomingdale, which commissioned the investigation, because officials did not want to reveal any basis of future plans.

Residents of Roselle, who live on Foster Avenue, directly behind the property owned by Joseph Krass which is being mined and allegedly used for an illegal landfill operation, have been trying to get copies of the report from the villages.

The report was placed in committee for further discussion by the Bloomingdale trustees. The village will request the County Health Dept. to deputize a person for the specific purpose of observing the traffic going into the landfill area of the property.

ROSELLE RESIDENTS have testified Krass is allowing raw garbage to be dumped in the landfill, violating an earlier court order to restrict the landfill to rubbish and building materials.

Residents contend the villages have suppressed the report to hide the fact direct action can be taken regarding the gravel pit.

"As far as I'm concerned there are certain members on both village boards who are opposed to any action that would result in closing down Krass," John Shanley, 133 Foster Ave. told the Register.

Shanley said "the report spells out specifically what Bloomingdale should do to shut the man down, but it has been placed in committee."

The report, read last night, indicated the village of Bloomingdale could pass ordinances regulating the mining operations of the gravel pit and the landfill operation, which is currently under the jurisdiction of the county.

MINING AND landfill operations at the property do not conform with the R-1 (residential) zoning of the area. This is a valid non-conformity (use of the land not agreeing with zoning but which was begun before the zoning was established.)

Krass is legally in accordance with the village ordinance concerning the non-conforming use which allows continuance of such use on any portion of the original site without violation.

The report notes the village has other ordinances, passed last April, which set a time limit on non-conforming uses.

Any building or use not conforming to zoning of the area must be terminated five years from the passage of the ordinance. Non-conforming uses in areas zoned R-1 can have their time limit cut by 50 percent.

SHANLEY TOLD the trustees at Wednesday night's meeting it was "up to the village of Bloomingdale to do something."

Both Shanley and other residents have addressed the board, repeatedly urging it to put pressure on the county to set a definite date for its suit against Krass's landfill operation.

There has been nothing done regarding a court suit against Krass's landfill operation, which residents claim is illegal. Last October several homeowners from Foster Avenue appeared at a preliminary hearing to show cause for a suit.

Because of the devaluation of their property, which is adjacent to the mining and landfill operations, residents on Foster Avenue say they are seriously considering filing for readjustments in their real estate taxes.

Russell E. Schert, 225 E. Foster Ave. has obtained a form filing for a reassessment of his property. Mrs. Schert said "a real estate person came to look at my home and told me because of the property behind me, the market value of the home would be at least $3,000 less than normal."

$340 Reported Stolen

An Addison couple reported Tuesday that $340 in cash was stolen from a dresser drawer in the bedroom of their apartment.

Daniel Peters, of 415 Stevens Street, told Addison that three $100 bills and two $20 bills were taken from the top drawer of the dresser between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Police said the front door of the apartment was pryed open between the time Mrs. Peters left the house in the morning and when she arrived home in the late afternoon.

No Coins But Many Headaches

by KEN HARDWICKE

The sign above the station door read "Service Is Our Business." Inside mechanic Dennis Lempicki sat stolidly behind a desk full of letters wondering if he would lose both within a year.

It wasn't always like this for the Itasca Shell station operator. Over two months ago, his stalls were filled with cars seeking repair and Lempicki was busier than the Christmas shopping rush. Shell Oil Company honored him with a plaque for five years of valued business association.

Lempicki could boast that he deserved the honor because he had doubled the volume of gas sold since taking over operation of the Itasca Shell Service Center.

But that was over two months ago and fortunes of men change regularly like dirty oil after 2,000 miles. The five-year plaque for achievement now hangs atop a bulletin board clustered with customer letters protesting Shell's recent actions against Lempicki and praising the mechanic for refusal to participate in Shell's coin games.

IT ALL started in September when Lempicki refused to distribute Shell's "Mr. President" coin game. Lempicki's refusal stemmed from exorbitant costs of promotion for himself and other dealers ($400-

$1,800 a month), coin thievery and a belief that the coin games were "unfair" to the public and station operators.

"I would like to see the service station turned back into a station, not a gambling casino," said the 29-year-old Lempicki.

Gambling may be all right for "Jimmy the Greek" of Las Vegas, but according to Lempicki's recent tabulations a customer's chance of winning the top $5,000 prize is 1,133,000 to one. When both the house and patron is losing, Lempicki feels something is definitely wrong.

Lempicki's accusations against Shell's

Awards Delayed

Awarding of received bids for renovation of Highland School in Wood Dale Dist. 7 was deferred this week until the two apparent low bidders have been contacted by Alexander, Borkin, Westphal and DeYoung, school architectural firm.

School officials, meeting in an adjourned meeting Tuesday night, found seven contracting firms bidding on the renovation work for the school district's oldest facility located on North Wood Dale Road.

coin games are not unfounded and he is prepared to show anyone who asks to see the figures.

"Only 10 to 25 per cent of the dealer's cost of promotion is returned to the general public," he said. "The customer expects something for nothing and his chances of winning are very, very slim."

SHELL SALESMEN guarantee boxes with $200 in winners but the figures never coincide.

Besides 35 customer letters landing the Itasca dealer for his stand against Shell, Lempicki has received other assorted support. The Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago (GRA) which has a membership of over 440 stations has supported him.

A GRA attorney said 99 per cent of the dealers don't want to participate in the games and if a dealer refuses to participate in the games, his lease is threatened.

Lempicki is more than aware of the lease cancellation policy by Shell since company officials have informed him that unless he complies with the coin games such as "Man in Space," his lease will be terminated shortly.

Lempicki has one year before his lease can be renewed and he seriously doubts whether he will be a permanent fixture at the corner of Irving and Walnut Street.

Besides GRA, Lempicki took a personal poll of 32 Shell dealers in the surrounding area and 29 supported or sympathized with his objections. Even his closest competitor in town, Pat Bartuch, who operates the Standard station down the road, agrees with his game denial.

"The games are not fair to the public because of the percentage of winning to losing," Bartuch said.

SOME STATION dealers have supported their vocal dissent with picketing. Lempicki was among 60 protesting dealers who marched around Shell's main office in the Chicago Loop earlier last month.

The Itasca dealer claims he has been offered a large sum of money to just "leave quietly" within 30 days but Lempicki finds leaving the village and his station hard because he has been a town resident for over 14 years. The mechanic said, "I call most of my customers by their first name. The station is part of the community, not just another gas station."

Lempicki's attachment to the town and its people is reciprocal in customer support. It is this response that apparently forced Shell to renew his lease late last month.

"Shell dealers want to be known for their products and service not their games," affirms the dealer. Lempicki is hoping that other dealers who agree with him will do so with an active protest.

Residents Blamed for Loss

The defeat of Bloomingdale Elementary School Dist. 13's referendum Tuesday, proposing a 40 cent tax rate increase, was "part of the whole taxpayer rebellion," Leon Knickrehm, chairman of the district's Citizens' Advisory Council (CAC), said after the votes were counted.

Final official results out of a total 720 votes cast were 242 in favor, 469 opposed and nine ballots were spoiled.

Although there was a last minute campaign opposing the referendum, Knickrehm and school board members agreed it did not play a significant role in the failure of the proposal.

"I WOULDN'T GIVE too much credit to the distribution of anti-referendum pamphlets," Knickrehm said. "The no votes were there already. People are just rejecting tax increases."

Although the turnout for the referendum was less than the last one held in March, the margin of defeat was greater. Knickrehm pointed out many people expected the state income tax, passed this summer, to solve financial problems of the school districts, through increased state aid.

Besides reliance on the state income tax, Knickrehm said, many people rejected the proposed increase in the educational fund rate because they are waiting for the state Constitutional Convention to provide some sort of solution to local school district financial crises.

KNICKREHM SAID the CAC would hold a meeting soon to determine its next move. He said the group would maintain existence "because of the long-term needs of the district," recalling the group had also advised the district it would need a new junior high building in the near future.

"I don't know just what we will do. Maybe the referendum defeat will serve to strengthen our initiative and group us closer," he said.

Lake Park Modifies Code

Lake Park High School Dist. 108 modified its policy statement Monday pertaining to student attire and personal grooming for 1970.

School officials studied a recommendation from a faculty senate, executive and student councils to revise the current policy which appears in the student handbook.

Following considerable debate on the proposed recommendation, the board of education adopted the modified statement unanimously. The board's action this week stemmed from recent court decisions relating to student rights.

THE PRESENT POLICY now in effect states:

"There is considerable evidence to indicate a definite correlation between one's attire and personal grooming and his state of mind, attitudes, and behavior. In light of this fact, a board of education regulation prohibits any type of bizarre attire or personal grooming. Students are expected to choose school attire and personal grooming in a perspective of reasonable standards and good taste."

The adopted and revised policy which will become effective next school year now reads:

"We affirm the right of students to express their individual preferences in their attire and grooming so long as such does not interfere with health, safety or learning. We are proud of Lake Park High School, and we are proud of the students who make Lake Park what it is. We hope that our students will take pride in their grooming and will choose school attire in a perspective of reasonable standards and good taste."

THE REVISED POLICY prompted by the faculty senate, followed an apparent trend by girl students in wearing slacks to classes. It was reported that 150 girl students of the total female enrollment of 846 attended class recently wearing slacks.

Discretion as to what constitutes attire which "does not duly interfere with health, safety or learning," will be the controlling factor when the new policy is instituted. Supt. Carl Forrester told school board members that adoption of the revised policy statement "isn't going to change in practice what we are doing. It is placing emphasis back where it lays . . . to the student's and their pride in the school."

Some board members felt the modification "didn't change anything" and questioned whether the policy statement currently in effect should be amended in favor of the recommendation offered by the faculty senate in conjunction with the executive and student councils.

ONE DELATION in the senate's proposal was evident — this was the omission of "Bizarre" attire . . . a wording in the current policy.

Under present regulations the board of education "prohibits any type of bizarre attire or personal grooming."

Forrester said "bizarre" was a "very general statement" and adoption of the revised policy makes the wording "more specific."

Itasca to Seek Sewer Bids

The Itasca Village Board, acting in the capacity of the Board of Local Improvements, resolved a long-standing sewer problem Wednesday night by officially allowing for open bids on a storm sewer project.

The action came after a marathon debate developed between protesting village residents and various board members during a two hour "talkathon."

Village President Wilbert Nottke opened the discussion by reading a legal decision released by Judge William J. Guild of the 18th Judicial Circuit Court of DuPage County.

He denied a protesters' petition and agreed with the village assessment of $40-$45 per year (approximately $450 over a 10 year period) for the installation of storm sewers in a controversial basin area in the southeast portion of Itasca.

MOST OF NOTTKE'S words fell on deaf ears and a debate soon emerged between opposing residents of the project, headed by Gene Phillips, and proponents of the plan backed by Nottke and Village Attorney Lawrence Traeger Jr.

Emotions and embarrassment were further heightened when two former village presidents, Paul Baehne and James Clayson, who Nottke said would be available to inform the residents of past proceedings on the sewer issue, failed to appear. One of the absentee spokesmen resigned his post as spokesman because of the same sewer controversy.

Phillips requested that the board take some kind of action because his group of 118 known objectors had only to Jan. 2 to file an appeal.

The objecting group of homeowners contends that the sewer installation is inequitable because it will benefit primarily that land which is unimproved. The dissenters believe the entire project only benefits those people who have property directly involved.

"LEGALLY YOU have won the battle but morally you have not," Phillips said. "The majority (85 per cent) of the people in the area still object to the assessment." After Trustee Roy Petherbridge informed citizens the board represented the "silent majority," the purported "vocal minority" indicated that from 85-90 per cent of the people concerned are in opposition to the sewer assessment.

Petherbridge suggested that Phillips and his dissident group conduct a poll or circulate a petition that showed the number of residents who oppose the project.

"If you come up with 99 per cent or a big majority of the people who are against the sewer, I would certainly have to agree with it," Nottke said.

NOTTKE AGREED that if a tie among the board members arose on the sewer issue, he would cast his deciding vote against the project.

The Board of Local Improvements, which convened promptly following the adjournment of the village board, designated Feb. 3 as the final day for acceptance of all bids.

Overlooked, but almost as important was the annexation by the board of 74 acres of land from Commonwealth Edison and the Central Manufacturing District (CMD).

Itasca officials had requested that Commonwealth Edison annex its 25 acres of R-1 zoning (single family dwelling) to the village. The power utility did so willingly.

"They are doing us a favor. This annexation is a stepping stone to getting the Granville Subdivision in the village," said Nottke.

THE 25 ACRES is north of the Itasca Country Club and borders 1300 feet west of Prospect Avenue and has Granville Avenue as its northern boundary.

The village trustees then proceeded to double that evening's first annexation with unanimous approval of annexation of 49 acres of CMD property. The second site lies east of Meacham Road and extends north to the DuPage County line. The new area lies 2,000 feet west of Route 53 and is approximately 1,000 feet north of Thorndale Road.

The board also accepted the Planning Commission's recommendation that the newly-annexed land be changed from R-1 to M-1 (light manufacturing zoning).

"That's more land than we have annexed in years," said Petherbridge following the formal approval.

Immediately after officially acquiring the new territory, Nottke suggested the board reinstate an annexation fee because it was needed for preservation of the tax base for schools Itasca had removed the fee to encourage annexation.

DEBATE AROSE among Nottke and board members on whether the village could impose an annexation fee without a legal ordinance to do so. Robert Bremmer, attorney for CMD, said that "certainly you should pass my annexation if you passed Edison's without a fee."

Petherbridge agreed and the other trustees followed his recommendation. Nottke placed the annexation ordinance fee on the agenda for the next board meeting.

Delay Building Report to Jan. 6

The Citizens Advisory Council (CAC) of Lake Park High School Dist. 108 deferred completion Monday of its final report on recommendations to school officials on future and immediate site and building needs until Jan. 6.

This was the date set by temporary chairman Al Eichsteadt following presentation of reports by key subcommittees.

According to Eichsteadt, the council's steering committee will evaluate the detailed data on educational needs, public opinion, economic factors and population trends offered by the various study groups representing a cross-section of residents within the school district.

ALTHOUGH NO definite indication was given during the evening session there was evidence that communication of the problems facing Dist. 108 and proposed courses of action would receive top priority by school officials.

The council was noncommittal about whether or not a referendum election would be recommended to members of the board of education. The seriousness of the problems facing the school district in 1970 could trigger implementation of split or double shifts.

Possible curtailment of band and chorus may be made as a temporary measure until adequate plant facilities are available.

The emergency measures may be necessary to meet the anticipated increase in student enrollment in 1970 sparked by current residential developments until solutions are finalized.

LAKE PARK High School is bursting at the seams and it is not unlikely that Dist. 108 will find any solace from developers in easing its current crisis, according to officials.

The citizens advisory council could recommend to school officials that a referendum election is a must to provide facilities for at least another 1,000 students.

Land availability for additional sites is now at a premium and 50 acres is not easy to come by.

It has been estimated that a new facility would cost around $7 million if lucky, but this could go higher each year.

Another Dist. 100 Vote!

DENNIS LEMPICKI, an Itasca Shell Station dealer, is protesting the oil company's coin games. His "reward" for refusing to participate may be a cancellation of his lease. He claims the company's "Mr. President" and "Man In Space" games give over a million-to-one odds for customers against winning the big prize. Customers have supported Lempicki's protest with letters. The station owner has joined others in picketing the Chicago Shell offices.

Voters in Fenton High School Dist. 100 will be asked to vote again on a 25-cent educational tax rate increase.

The Dist. 100 board of education voted Tuesday to schedule the referendum for Feb. 7.

"We have no alternative," Morton Wright, board member, said. Other members present agreed with his opinion. This will be the fourth attempt since January to pass the educational fund rate increase.

Supt. Martin Zuckerman told the board that unless a tax hike is approved by the voters in early February, no additional tax revenue will be available for the fall of 1970. By law any rate increase after the beginning of February will not be reflected in the budget until a year from the following fall, or September 1971.

BOARD MEMBER Jesse Parrish expressed his regret over the early date but echoed Wright's saying, "What else can we do?"

Fenton is currently operating on a curtailed program. Last spring, faced with a large and growing deficit in the educational fund, the board directed the various departments to cut back their programs for a total curtailment of $140,000.

The board's most recent attempt to pass a referendum was Dec. 2 when the proposal was voted down almost 3 to 2 by district residents. The campaign to pass that referendum was described as "low key."

Board members discussed the approach to be used during this campaign. Martin Romme said he felt the board should spend the time between now and February "looking at the school program."

Board president James DiOrio said he will spend the next month addressing various local civic and homeowners groups in order to "tell them our story."

IN OTHER business the board heard music department chairman Fred Lewis present a report on what curtailments have meant for his department. Lewis told the board many students were unable to take music this year because of the elimination of one period in the day. Lewis also pointed out that part of the music department's cut-backs was the elimination of a marching band whose absence, he said,

"has been criticized by many members of our community."

In his report Lewis said, "It is most difficult to build organizations and then, of your own volition, begin to hack at them without any regard or feeling for them. In my present position, I feel I have had to do just this."

title was approved by a vote of 3 to 2. Two board members were absent from the meeting.

The board also voted to go ahead with an organizational study in a combined effort with the Bensenville Elementary School Dist. 2 board. The purpose of the study will be to determine if a unit district, which shares administrators between two districts, is the most efficient method of management. The Dist. 100 board will pay the cost of the study in proportion to their percentage of students in the combined districts — approximately one third.

'Beeline' Founder Dies in Inverness

H. Edison Birginal, founder and chairman of the board of directors of Beeline Fashions in Bensenville, died Wednesday in his home of unknown causes. Birginal, 60, of Inverness, was formerly of Arlington Heights.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Lauterburg and Oehler Funeral Home, 2000 E. Northwest Highway, Arlington Heights.

Beeline Fashions is a nation-wide distributor of women's apparel through the In-Home Party Plan. Birginal and his wife, Beatrice, for whom Beeline was named, founded the company in 1945 on a $2,000 GI loan. Acting as his own salesman, Birginal went door-to-door in Illinois and Wisconsin selling hosiery and building up his business.

BY THE START of the sixties, the company had achieved national distribution and evolved its unique network of home stylists that was to make Beeline the largest seller of clothing through the home party plan.

Sample merchandise is brought into the hostess' home and displayed in a relaxed, party-type atmosphere. The woman acting as hostess invites the guests present to act as models for the fashions. She then receives the purchase price from her guests and when the fashions are delivered, the guests may pick them up from their hostesses.

Today, Birginal's company is generating more than $50 million in annual sales and is represented by more than 20,000 stylists in the United States and Canada. The plant and offices located in Bensenville employ 250 persons, making Beeline the single largest employer in the community.

BIRGINAL, in addition to being chairman of the board at Beeline, was also on the board of directors of Holy Family Hospital in Des Plaines and served in the past as director of the Direct Selling Association located in Washington, D. C.

Surviving are his wife, Beatrice; a daughter Shirley; two sons, Gary and Kirk; three brothers, Lauerier, William and Sylvester; and eight grandchildren.

Highland Bid Awards Delayed

Awarding of received bids for renovation of Highland School in Wood Dale Dist. 7 was deferred this week until the two apparent low bidders have been contacted by Alexander, Borkin, Westphal and DeYoung, school architectural firm.

School officials, meeting in an adjourned meeting Tuesday night, found seven contracting firms bidding on the renovation work for the school district's oldest facility located on North Wood Dale Road.

Delay in awarding the contract which will bring Highland School up to standards of the state life safety code, was prompted by the apparent low bids falling in excess of the architect's estimate of $154,000.

Less than $300 separated the two low bidders W. F. Fitzsimmons & Co., Hoffman Estates, with a bid of $165,420 and C. W. Gaasrud, Inc., Park Ridge with $165,717.

No Coins But Many Headaches

by KEN HARDWICKE

The sign above the station door read "Service Is Our Business." Inside mechanic Dennis Lempicki sat stoically behind a desk full of letters wondering if he would lose both within a year.

It wasn't always like this for the Itasca Shell station operator. Over two months ago, his stalls were filled with cars seeking repair and Lempicki was busier than the Christmas shopping rush. Shell Oil Company honored him with a plaque for five years of valued business association.

Lempicki could boast that he deserved the honor because he had doubled the volume of gas sold since taking over operation of the Itasca Shell Service Center.

But that was over two months ago and fortunes of men change regularly like dirty oil after 2,000 miles. The five-year plaque for achievement now hangs atop a bulletin board clustered with customer letters protesting Shell's recent actions against Lempicki and praising the mechanic for refusal to participate in Shell's coin games.

IT ALL started in September when Lempicki refused to distribute Shell's "Mr. $1,000 a month" coin thievery and a belief that the coin games were "unfair" to the public and station operators.

"I would like to see the service station turned back into a station, not a gambling casino," said the 29-year-old Lempicki.

Gambling may be all right for "Jimmy the Greek" of Las Vegas, but according to Lempicki's recent tabulations a customer's chance of winning the top $5,000 prize is 1,133,000 to one. When both the house President" coin game, Lempicki's refusal stemmed from exorbitant costs of promotion for himself and other dealers ($400-and patron is losing, Lempicki feels something is definitely wrong.

Lempicki's accusations against Shell's coin games are not unfounded and he is prepared to show anyone who asks to see the figures.

"Only 10 to 25 per cent of the dealer's cost of promotion is returned to the general public," he said. "The customer expects something for nothing and his chances of winning are very, very slim."

SHELL SALESMEN guarantee boxes with $200 in winners but the figures never coincide.

Besides 35 customer letters lauding the Itasca dealer for his stand against Shell, Lempicki has received other assorted support. The Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago (GRA) which has a membership of over 440 stations has supported him.

A GRA attorney said 99 per cent of the dealers don't want to participate in the games and if a dealer refuses to participate in the games, his lease is threatened.

Lempicki is more than aware of the lease cancellation policy by Shell since company officials have informed him that unless he complies with the coin games such as "Man in Space," his lease will be terminated shortly.

Lempicki has one year before his lease can be renewed and he seriously doubts whether he will be a permanent fixture at the corner of Irving and Walnut Street.

Besides GRA, Lempicki took a personal poll of 32 Shell dealers in the surrounding area and 29 supported or sympathized with his objections. Even his closest competitor in town, Pat Bartuch, who operates the Standard station down the road, agrees with his game denial.

"The games are not fair to the public because of the percentage of winning to losing," Bartuch said.

SOME STATION dealers have supported their vocal dissent with picketing. Lempicki was among 60 protesting dealers who marched around Shell's main office in the Chicago Loop earlier last month.

The Itasca dealer claims he has been offered a large sum of money to just "leave quietly" within 30 days but Lempicki finds leaving the village and his station hard because he has been a town resident for over 14 years. The mechanic said, "I call most of my customers by their first name. The station is part of the community, not just another gas station."

Lempicki's attachment to the town and its people is reciprocal in customer support. It is this response that apparently forced Shell to renew his lease late last month.

"Shell dealers want to be known for their products and service not their games," affirms the dealer. Lempicki is hoping that other dealers who agree with him will do so with an active protest.

Hegebarth in State Race

Bensenville Trustee William Hegebarth has thrown his hat into the ring as a candidate for state representative from the 37th District.

Hegebarth will oppose incumbent William Redmond in the Democratic primary in March. The winner of that contest will go on to run in the election next November.

Hegebarth has been a trustee for three years. He was elected in 1967 on the Economy Party slate of former Village Pres. Fred Steging. Before that, Hegebarth served on the plan commission for four years, having been appointed by former Village Pres. Richard Thomas in 1963.

THE CANDIDATE for the state house said he has "a profound interest in municipal and all forms of government." Before serving as trustee, he was active on several citizens committees for school referenda.

In speaking of his political program, Hegebarth said, "My basic platform will be simple honesty, integrity and service to the community." He said his active campaign began as soon as he filed his petition in Springfield on Monday.

Facing an incumbent is never an easy job, and Hegebarth said he recognizes that fact.

"It'll be a tough battle, but I'm not adverse to hard work," he said.

Hegebarth has been a Bensenville resident for 20 years. He has been a member of the Lions Club for 12 years and has served on its board of directors. He has also served as an elder in his church, Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church. He has been employed by Acton Bearing Co. of Chicago for 33 years as an engineer.

THE CANDIDATE said he wants to "get all over the district to speak to as many groups and individuals as possible." He plans to speak to civic groups, women's clubs and "any group that's interested in hearing me."

When asked where he thought his major backing would come from Hegebarth answered "Disheartened Democrats and independents."

Hegebarth and his wife, Ann, are the parents of three children. Their son, Donald, is chairman of the Bensenville Plan Commission and a member of the zoning board of appeals. Another son, Dennis, lives in Schaumburg, and their youngest son, Douglas, resides in California. The Hegebarths have three grandchildren.

When contacted by the Register, Redmond said of his opponent Hegebarth, "Welcome aboard, the more the merrier." Redmond added, "I know the practical problems of filling as a Democratic candidate in this county. It's a big job, I would think insurmountable."

REDMOND SAID he is "not unhappy at all with Hegebarth's candidacy. I wish him good luck and if he wins I will support him."

Redmond has been a member of the Illinois House since 1959.

Hegebarth said he is in the process of forming a platform on issues. He said he is studying the platform of the Democratic Party and will add his own ideas to it.

"I think the people in this district deserve a truly representative member in the Illinois Legislature," he said. "I think I can give this kind of representation to them."

WILLIAM HEGBARTH has filed as a candidate for state representative of the 37th district. He will run in the democratic primary, opposing incumbent William Redmond. Hegebarth has been a Bensenville trustee for three years and before that served on the plan and zoning boards.

Itasca to Seek Sewer Bids

The Itasca Village Board, acting in the capacity of the Board of Local Improvements, resolved a long-standing sewer problem Wednesday night by officially allowing for open bids on a storm sewer project.

The action came after a marathon debate developed between protesting village residents and various board members during a two hour "talkathon."

Village President Wilbert Nottke opened the discussion by reading a legal decision released by Judge William J. Guld of the 18th Judicial Circuit Court of DuPage County.

He denied a protesters' petition and agreed with the village assessment of $40-$45 per year (approximately $450 over a 10 year period) for the installation of storm sewers in a controversial basin area in the southeast portion of Itasca.

MOST OF NOTTKE'S words fell on deaf ears and a debate soon emerged between opposing residents of the project, headed by Gene Phillips, and proponents of the plan backed by Nottke and Village Attorney Lawrence Traeger Jr.

Emotions and embarrassment were further heightened when two former village presidents, Paul Baehne and James Clayson, who Nottke said would be available to inform the residents of past proceedings on the sewer issue, failed to appear. One of the absentee spokesmen resigned his post as village president because of the same sewer controversy.

Phillips requested that the board take some kind of action because his group of 118 known objectors had only to Jan. 2 to file an appeal.

The objecting group of homeowners contends that the sewer installation is inequitable because it will benefit primarily that land which is unimproved. The dissenters believe the entire project only benefits those people who have property directly involved.

"LEGALLY YOU have won the battle but morally you have not," Phillips said. "The majority (68 per cent) of the people in the area still object to the assessment." After Trustee Roy Petherbridge informed citizens the board represented the "silent majority," the purported "vocal minority" indicated that from 85-90 per cent of the people concerned are in opposition to the sewer assessment.

Petherbridge suggested that Phillips and his dissident group conduct a poll or circulate a petition that showed the number of residents who oppose the project.

"If you come up with 99 per cent or a big majority of the people who are against the sewer, I would certainly have to agree with it," Nottke said.

NOTTKE AGREED that if a tie among the board members arose on the sewer issue, he would cast his deciding vote against the project.

The Board of Local Improvements, which convened promptly following the adjournment of the village board, designated Feb. 3 as the final day for acceptance of all bids.

Overlooked, but almost as important was the annexation by the board of 74 acres of land from Commonwealth Edison and the Central Manufacturing District (CMD).

Itasca officials had requested that Commonwealth Edison annex its 25 acres of R-1 zoning (single family dwelling) to the village. The power utility did so willingly.

"They are doing us a favor. This annexation is a stepping stone to getting the Granville Subdivision in the village," said Nottke.

THE 25 ACRES is north of the Itasca Country Club and borders 1300 feet west of Prospect Avenue and has Granville Avenue as its northern boundary.

The village trustees then proceeded to double that evening's first annexation with unanimous approval of annexation of 49 acres of CMD property. The second site lies east of Meacham Road and extends north to the DuPage County line. The new area lies 2,000 feet west of Route 53 and is approximately 1,000 feet north of Thorndale Road.

The board also accepted the Planning Commission's recommendation that the newly-annexed land be changed from R-1 to M-1 (light manufacturing zoning).

"That's more land than we have annexed in years," said Petherbridge following the formal approval.

Immediately after officially acquiring the new territory, Nottke suggested the board reinstate an annexation fee because it was needed for preservation of the tax base for schools. Itasca had removed the fee to encourage annexation.

DEBATE AROSE among Nottke and board members on whether the village could impose an annexation fee without a legal ordinance to do so. Robert Bremmer, attorney for CMD, said that "certainly you should pass my annexation if you passed Edison's without a fee."

Petherbridge agreed and the other trustees followed his recommendation. Nottke placed the annexation ordinance fee on the agenda for the next board meeting.

Delay Building Report to Jan. 6

The Citizens Advisory Council (CAC) of Lake Park High School Dist. 108 deferred compilation Monday of its final report on recommendations to school officials on future and immediate site and building needs until Jan. 6.

This was the date set by temporary chairman Al Eichsteadt following presentation of reports by key subcommittees.

According to Eichsteadt, the council's steering committee will evaluate the detailed data on educational needs, public opinion, economic factors and population trends offered by the various study groups representing a cross-section of residents within the school district.

ALTHOUGH NO definite indication was given during the evening session there was evidence that communication of the problems facing Dist. 108 and proposed courses of action would receive top priority by school officials.

The council was noncommittal about whether or not a referendum election would be recommended to members of the board of education. The seriousness of the problems facing the school district in 1970 could trigger implementation of split or double shifts.

Possible curtailment of band and chorus may be made as a temporary measure until adequate plant facilities are available.

The emergency measures may be necessary to meet the anticipated increase in student enrollment in 1970 sparked by current residential developments until solutions are finalized.

LAKE PARK High School is bustling at the seams and it is not unlikely that Dist. 108 will find any solace from developers in easing its current crisis, according to officials.

The citizens advisory council could recommend to school officials that a referendum election is a must to provide facilities for at least another 1,000 students.

Land availability for additional sites is now at a premium and 50 acres is not easy to come by.

It has been estimated that a new facility would cost around $7 million if lucky, but this could go higher each year.

Path Cleared for Signals

DENNIS LEMPICKI, an Itasca Shell Station dealer, is protesting the oil company's coin games. His "reward" for refusing to participate may be a cancellation of his lease. He claims the company's "Mr. President" and "Man In Space" games give over a million-to-one odds for customers against winning the big prize. Customers have supported Lempicki's protest with letters. The station owner has joined others in picketing the Chicago Shell offices.

Officials of the DuPage County Division of Highways said Thursday they have no objections to the installation of a temporary stop light near Army Trail School as long as the mechanism meets state requirements.

Addison village officials and a traffic engineer from the highway department will meet at 2 p.m. today to iron out a plan to install the light at Army Trail Road and Lincoln Avenue.

The intersection is crossed several times each day by over 600 children and has been the object of controversy since 1966 because motorists pass by without being required to stop for pedestrians.

Mort Landreth, county traffic engineer, said he hasn't seen the village's plans for the new light but said if it meets the necessary requirements he would be unopposed to its installation.

"THE COUNTY refused a village request earlier in the month to install temporary stop signs until the permanent lights were put in," said Ronald Dold, superintendent of highways, "because it would create an extra hazard."

"The sign would stop traffic for 24 hours and there isn't that much traffic and it would only lead to more confusion."

Dold said the county has no objections to the stop and go temporary light if they meet the correct requirements. He said this would be discussed at today's meeting.

William Drury, village manager, said yesterday the meeting would include himself, county officials and officials of W. S. Darley and Co., of Melrose Park, who does work in constructing stop lights.

He said they would discuss the feasibility of putting in a temporary stop light and that if approved by all those concerned they would then have to decide how many units would be needed, where to put the poles, cables, wires and control post and in how many directions the installation would need to face.

"I HOPE BY Monday night we'll have a decision to report to the village board," Drury said. "It may involve a request for an expenditure outside of the budget. We may even have to amend our appropriation ordinance in the final analysis."

Drury explained that the project could cost about $2,500 and that if there is agreement at today's meeting that sum might be a reasonable one.

"Because of the delay in motor fuel tax funds," he said, "we might just have to go ahead with the installation of temporary lights. It may be a misnomer, but these lights would work perfectly well."

Drury said he didn't know how long the temporary light would be kept but that it wouldn't be fair to the taxpayer to take it down after four or six months. He said the lights could be left there for several years because they could serve the purpose but, he added, he will know more about the future of a stop light at that corner after today's meeting.

TWO CROSSING guards at the school cited police records which show that there have been no mishaps at the intersection since the school was built.

They suggested that the parents are the ones who need to be educated on how to drive in the area and what procedures to take while parking in front of the school. They said motorists are creating a hazard by not using necessary safety precautions.

Also, they felt that patrol boys should be trained by a professional policeman in stopping traffic and administering stop and go signals to oncoming traffic.

Woman Charged

An Addison woman charged with the attempted murder of her husband Saturday will have a preliminary hearing in Wheaton Circuit Court today.

Mrs. Ruth E. Glover, 46, of 4N105 Niles Street, was charged by DuPage County police with the shooting of her husband, Arthur, 39, during an apparent family quarrel.

Glover was wounded in the arm and was listed in good condition yesterday at Elmhurst Memorial Hospital.

POLICE SAID THE incident apparently occurred in the upstairs area of the house and that the wound was inflicted by a bullet from a 22-caliber revolver at the scene.

Mrs. Glover is being held without bond in county jail until her court appearance.

According to police reports Sheriff's deputy Vic Gabreans and Sgt. Robert Kirby went to the Glover home after receiving a call from the Addison police department that a shooting had taken place.

Mrs. Glover reportedly notified Addison police.

Murder charges automatically eliminate the possibility of release on bond, according to Undersheriff Richard Doria. In this case of alleged attempted murder, he said, the court judge determined to hold her without bond.

Itasca to Seek Sewer Bids

The Itasca Village Board, acting in the capacity of the Board of Local Improvements, resolved a long-standing sewer problem Wednesday night by officially allowing for open bids on a storm sewer project.

The action came after a marathon debate developed between protesting village residents and various board members during a two hour "talkathon."

Village President Wilbert Nottke opened the discussion by reading a legal decision released by Judge William J. Guild of the 18th Judicial Circuit Court of DuPage County.

He denied a protesters' petition and agreed with the village assessment of $40-$45 per year (approximately $450 over a 10 year period) for the installation of storm sewers in a controversial basin area in the southeast portion of Itasca.

MOST OF NOTTKE'S words fell on deaf ears and a debate soon emerged between opposing residents of the project, headed by Gene Phillips, and proponents of the plan backed by Nottke and Village Attorney Lawrence Traeger Jr.

Emotions and embarrassment were further heightened when two former village presidents, Paul Baehne and James Clayson, who Nottke said would be available to inform the residents of past proceedings on the sewer issue, failed to appear. One of the absentee spokesmen resigned his post as village president because of the same sewer controversy.

Phillips requested that the board take some kind of action because his group of 118 known objectors had only to Jan. 2 to file an appeal.

The objecting group of homeowners contends that the sewer installation is inequitable because it will benefit primarily that land which is unimproved. The dissenters believe the entire project only benefits those people who have property directly involved.

"LEGALLY YOU have won the battle but morally you have not," Phillips said. "The majority (66 per cent) of the people in the area still object to the assessment."

After Trustee Roy Petherbridge informed citizens the board represented the "silent majority," the purported "vocal minority" indicated that from 85-90 per cent of the people concerned are in opposition to the sewer assessment.

Petherbridge suggested that Phillips and his dissident group conduct a poll or circulate a petition that showed the number of residents who oppose the project.

"If you come up with 99 per cent or a big majority of the people who are against the sewer, I would certainly have to agree with it," Nottke said.

NOTTKE AGREED that if a tie among the board members arose on the sewer issue, he would cast his deciding vote against the project.

The Board of Local Improvements, which convened promptly following the adjournment of the village board, designated Feb. 3 as the final day for acceptance of all bids.

Overlooked, but almost as important was the annexation by the board of 74 acres of land from Commonwealth Edison and the Central Manufacturing District (CMD).

Itasca officials had requested that Commonwealth Edison annex its 25 acres of R-1 zoning (single family dwelling) to the village. The power utility did so willingly.

"They are doing us a favor. This annexation is a stepping stone to getting the Granville Subdivision in the village," said Nottke.

THE 25 ACRES is north of the Itasca Country Club and borders 1300 feet west of Prospect Avenue and has Granville Avenue as its northern boundary.

The village trustees then proceeded to double that evening's first annexation with unanimous approval of annexation of 49 acres of CMD property. The second site lies east of Meacham Road and extends north to the DuPage County line. The new area lies 2,000 feet west of Route 53 and is approximately 1,000 feet north of Thorn-dale Road.

The board also accepted the Planning Commission's recommendation that the newly-annexed land be changed from R-1 to M-1 (light manufacturing zoning).

"That's more land than we have annexed in years," said Petherbridge following the formal approval.

Immediately after officially acquiring the new territory, Nottke suggested the board reinstate an annexation fee because it was needed for preservation of the tax base for schools. Itasca had removed the fee to encourage annexation.

DEBATE AROSE among Nottke and board members on whether the village could impose an annexation fee without a legal ordinance to do so. Robert Bremmer, attorney for CMD, said that "certainly you should pass my annexation if you passed Edison's without a fee."

Petherbridge agreed and the other trustees followed his recommendation. Nottke placed the annexation ordinance fee on the agenda for the next board meeting.

Delay Building Report to Jan. 6

The Citizens Advisory Council (CAC) of Lake Park High School Dist. 108 deferred compilation Monday of its final report on recommendations to school officials on future and immediate site and building needs until Jan. 6.

This was the date set by temporary chairman Al Eichstadt following presentation of reports by key subcommittees.

According to Eichstadt, the council's steering committee will evaluate the detailed data on educational needs, public opinion, economic factors and population trends offered by the various study groups representing a cross-section of residents within the school district.

ALTHOUGH NO definite indication was given during the evening session there was evidence that communication of the problems facing Dist. 108 and proposed courses of action would receive top priority by school officials.

The council was noncommittal about whether or not a referendum election would be recommended to members of the board of education. The seriousness of the problems facing the school district in 1970 could trigger implementation of split or double shifts.

Possible curtailment of band and chorus may be made as a temporary measure until adequate plant facilities are available.

The emergency measures may be necessary to meet the anticipated increase in student enrollment in 1970 sparked by current residential developments until solutions are finalized.

LAKE PARK High School is busting at the seams and it is not unlikely that Dist. 108 will find any solace from developers in easing its current crisis, according to officials.

The citizens advisory council could recommend to school officials that a referendum election is a must to provide facilities for at least another 1,000 students.

Land availability for additional sites is now at a premium and 50 acres is not easy to come by.

It has been estimated that a new facility would cost around $7 million if lucky, but this could go higher each year.

House Changes Course

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing itself, yesterday affirmed school desegregation efforts on the Health Education and Welfare Department. On a 216-180 vote it accepted Senate-passed language upsetting an earlier vote to curb the desegregation drive.

Hoffman Bars Lawyer

CHICAGO — Judge Julius Hoffman yesterday refused to readmit Stuart Ball, attorney for the "Chicago Conspiracy 7," into court on the grounds that he was a "disgrace to this court." Ball is bearded and long-haired, and Hoffman objected to his manner of dress.

Barry: Bomb North

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Nixon to resume bombing of North Vietnam and to destroy Haiphong harbor and rail lines from China. The former Presidential candidate said there was no other alternative to a "never-ending war."

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

LATIN AMERICANS Guillermo Barrio, left, and Carlos Vargas are planning to make the United States their home.

They formerly were members of the Latin American Peace Corps and now live in Palatine.

Two Peace Corps 'Students' Here

by TOM JACHIMIEC

Two former members of the Latin American Peace Corps are making their home in the Northwest suburbs.

They are Carlos Vargas, 26, of Costa Rica, and Guillermo Barrio, 30, of Chile. Both men live at 208 Benton in Palatine.

Several months ago Carlos and Guillermo completed a two-year term in the peace corps in the Dominican Republic under a program financed by the Dominican Development Foundation and the Inter-American Bank.

Their job was to work with youths from 13 to 21 years of age in organizing a farm and community development program similar to our 4-H clubs.

The program has been successful, said Guillermo. "The agricultural production has been increased by 50 per cent," he said.

Following the completion of their work with the peace corps, both men came to the United States to live.

They have some difficulty with English but are determined to improve themselves by enrolling in a basic adult education class taught at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights and sponsored by the Illinois Migrant Council.

Guillermo, who attended the University of Concepcion in Chile for two years, wants to become a social worker. He says he first must understand the language in order to get a job.

Carlos is currently employed as a welder and mechanic at Power Tools Inc., Palatine. He attended a vocational college for one year.

Both said they came to the United States because they want to know what it is really like after hearing so much about it for many years.

"I want to know what the reality of the United States is like," said Carlos. "Your manner of thinking, I've heard so much about."

Carlos said it too soon for him to form opinions about the United States.

However, he said he likes the idea that in our country all people have the opportunity to live well. This is not so, he explained, in his country where "even if you work hard in Latin America you cannot rise as high as in the United States."

Guillermo said the United States is completely different from Latin America.

Along with a higher economy in the United States, he said the dollar is "more important than other human beings."

In Latin America, he said it is possible to live without money by relying on friends and relatives. Here, he said he does not think it is possible to live without money.

Guillermo, who studied sociology in college, said "mechanization in the United States has led to de-humanization."

There is no time for meditating and relating with other people," he said. "Here man is a slave of time."

Council Asks Study Funds

Northwest Municipal Conference communities will be asked to appropriate $2,000 each in 1970 to hire a person or firm to conduct a transportation study.

The action would bring in a total $34,000 if each of the 17-member communities participate.

The decision to request transportation study funds in 1970 municipal budgets was made without a conference quorum Wednesday and will be recommended only to member communities.

A BUDGET appropriation does not commit a municipality to spend money, but provides for the spending purpose at a board's decision.

The action to hire a transportation study was taken in absence of Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl, the conference's one-man transportation committee. Pahl has stressed that the study should be conducted free to the conference, using donated personnel or retired business executives.

Representatives from six communities limited discussion to the obvious need of transporting people to railroad stations. According to the conference transportation policy adopted last March, the study should embrace a total movement of goods and people, tying in all forms of transportation, including O'Hare Airport.

Between snipes at Pahl for encouraging spending $200 for a defunct transportation study two years ago, Buffalo Grove Village Pres. Don Thompson said he could not ask his board for another transportation contribution unless he states exactly what the study is intended to achieve.

NAW: 15 Families Urgently Need Aid

A general appeal for help for 15 Spanish American families is being sought by the Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization in Elk Grove Village.

The NAW says the families have been living in substandard housing in Elk Grove Township and need help immediately. Many of them are still living in shacks which have been cited with numerous building code violations by county inspectors earlier this week.

NAW has called a press conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove Township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, at which time an appeal will be made.

Louis Archbold, of NAW, said yesterday he plans to have the families out of the shacks and into motels by Christmas Day. If motel rooms are not available the NAW has indicated it will take the people into their homes.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the motel, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archbold.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1031 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E. Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Touhy Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said. "In case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families' needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexis Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Wellman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

But, according to a statement by the building commissioner last Sunday, they need help in finding the housing. Persons with information should call his office at 321-7922.

In another development, a fire Wednesday in the farmhouse where Armando Gomez and his wife and child had been living at 1031 W. Higgins Road, destroyed some of his possessions.

"I don't know why the whole building didn't go up in flames," a NAW member said.

Lt. Donald Kuhn of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, said the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate.

No District 59 Cuts This Year

District 59 budget cuts will not be effective until after the 1969-70 school year according to Al Waltman, acting superintendent.

Due to the Nov. 22 referendum loss, approximately $1,600,000 must be cut from the tentative 1970-71 budget, according to the school board.

A comment made by Board Member Harold Harvey at the Dec. 1 board meeting, preceded Waltman's statement yesterday.

Harvey said that in his opinion it would be easier on the district if budget cutting was spread over three semesters, beginning this school year, rather than the two semesters next school year.

Waltman said that as far as he knew, no one but Harvey had indicated that that idea in budget cutting would be used. "I haven't recommended a cut over three semesters to the board at all."

The question arose at a budget committee meeting.

Waltman explained that the purpose of the meeting was not to begin making plans for budget cuts, but to review the present budget.

"We have a very tight budget this year and have to constantly make sure it's OK," he said. "This year I think the budget is in good shape," he added.

The procedure for revising next year's budget is apparently long and involved.

"There is no big press for time," Waltman said. "I would rather take a lot of time and explore many alternatives."

He explained that action in budget cutting was not begun immediately to reassure the people that belt-tightening wouldn't take place this year.

"Many people were upset at the loss of the referendum and thought that we'd take it out on them," he said.

Months of planning went into the original tentative budget for the 1970-71 school year, according to Richard Hess, budget committee chairman. At the time the tentative budget was presented, the board said that it had been restricted as much as possible while still retaining the quality of education that the district has been providing.

Now the budget committee, board, and administrators must begin again.

Waltman said that the first thing to do is to talk to people in the district and get their ideas. He said that he has begun this already. A principal's meeting scheduled Thursday was another phase of this operation.

He added that Louis Auch, finance director, has worked out a new revenue section of the budget which will be utilized in determining budget cuts.

A survey to discover what district parents and taxpayers want was suggested by the communications committee last week. A request that the survey be formed and distributed was directed to the administration.

Thomas Warden, newly appointed administrative assistant, has been directed by Waltman to analyze information from the survey for use in budget cutting.

In reference to budget cutting Waltman said, "I don't know how we can do it, but we'll have to."

Library Has Back Issues

Articles from back issues of magazines may be requested at the Elk Grove Public Library and provided through a new service initiated by the North Suburban Library System.

The article requests are forwarded to a centralized pool of microfilm housed in the system center, the Morton Grove Public Library. The library cooperative serves 28 member libraries in the northern suburbs.

Once the request is received in Morton Grove, a copying machine prints an enlarged image on standard paper and the article is then mailed directly to the patron.

CENTRAL SERIALS Service, as the operation is called, has concentrated on obtaining the back files of magazines indexed in "Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature" and "Poole's Index," which most libraries use extensively in locating magazine articles used for reference and research purposes.

If the Central Serials System does not own a requested title, it refers the request to a network of reference and research centers throughout the state.

These centers, Chicago Public Library, University of Illinois Library, Illinois State Library, and Southern Illinois University Library, have a wide range of resources and are able to supply articles of a more technical and specialized nature.

According to Evelyn Schmidt, Elk Grove librarian, the service should prove to be a great boon to anyone working on a research project.

A PATRON'S AID in receiving articles from back issues of magazines has been installed in the Elk Grove Public Library, 101 Kennedy Blvd. Called the Central Serials Service, it was initiated by the North Suburban Library System. Mrs. Virginia James, Elk Grove Public Library administrative assistant, and Gerald M. Born, North Suburban Library System resources coordinator inspect the machine.

IBHE Defers Action for Year on College Site

by TOM WELLMAN

A study committee of the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE) agreed informally yesterday in Chicago to defer for at least a year a recommendation for a senior college site in Northern Illinois. But at the same time the committee ranked a request from the Northwest suburban area high on its priority list.

The decision, which will be presented in a formal report at the committee's next meeting in January, is based on the group's feeling that not enough statistical data is available now to set a college site. THE COMMITTEE'S action, however, strengthened the Northwest suburban request for a site. The committee placed this area's request at the top of its priority list.

A site near the western nuclear project, considered a strong competitor for a site, was placed in a totally separate category from this area's request.

In other action, the committee informally agreed not to permit the purchase of land for any site until at least 1971.

Discussion for the first 90 minutes of the committee's morning session stressed the lack of college enrollment and capacity projection figures on which to base a decision for additional college sites in the state.

JOSEPH BLOCK, chairman of the committee, which will eventually report back to the IBHE, said the 1970 census (which will provide population figures late in 1970 for Illinois) and phase three of the state's master plan for education (available as early as September, 1970) would help provide a basis for decision.

In the afternoon session, it was agreed that the request for senior college sites in Rockford and the Quad Cities should be placed in a position of lesser priority than the Northwest Suburban bid. Several members of the committee stressed there is an urgent need for a site near Chicago.

Last month, a committee of educators and politicians submitted a detailed request for a site to serve the Northwestern section of Cook County.

THE COMMITTEE, headed by Edward Gilbert, superintendent of High School Dist. 214; Jack Pahl, president of Elk Grove village, and John Woods, former president of Arlington Heights, asked for a site within a five-mile radius of the intersection of Highway 53 and the Northwest tollway.

It appears as though, on the basis of yesterday's action, the Northwest suburban area will have to wait at least a year before getting at least preliminary word on whether it will have a senior college

DENNIS LEMPICKI, an Itasca Shell Station dealer, is protesting the oil company's coin games. His "reward" for refusing to participate may be a cancellation of his lease. He claims the company's "Mr. President" and "Men In Space" games give over a million-to-one odds for customers against winning the big prize. Customers have supported Lempicki's protest with letters. The station owner has joined others in picketing the Chicago Shell offices.

Coin Games Mean Dealer Headaches

by KEN HARDWICKE

The sign above the station door read "Service Is Our Business." Inside mechanic Dennis Lempicki sat stoically behind a desk full of letters wondering if he would lose both within a year.

It wasn't always like this for the Itasca Shell station operator. Over two months ago, his stalls were filled with cars seeking repair and Lempicki was busier than the Christmas shopping rush. Shell Oil Company honored him with a plaque for five years of valued business association.

Lempicki could boast that he deserved the honor because he had doubled the volume of gas sold since taking over operation of the Itasca Shell Service Center.

But that was over two months ago and fortunes of men change regularly like dirty oil after 2,000 miles. The five-year plaque for achievement now hangs atop a bulletin board clustered with customer letters protesting Shell's recent actions against Lempicki and praising the mechanic for refusal to participate in Shell's coin games.

IT ALL started in September when Lempicki refused to distribute Shell's "Mr. $1,000 a month," coin thievery and a belief that the coin games were "unfair" to the public and station operators.

"I would like to see the service station turned back into a station, not a gambling casino," said the 29-year-old Lempicki.

Gambling may be all right for "Jimmy the Greek" of Las Vegas, but according to Lempicki's recent tabulations a customer's chance of winning the top $5,000 prize is 1,333,000 to one. When both the house "President" coin game. Lempicki's refusal stemmed from exorbitant costs of promotion for himself and other dealers ($400 and patron is losing, Lempicki feels something is definitely wrong.

Lempicki's accusations against Shell's coin games are not unfounded and he is prepared to show anyone who asks to see the figures.

"Only 10 to 25 per cent of the dealer's cost of promotion is returned to the general public," he said. "The customer expects something for nothing and his chances of winning are very, very slim."

SHELL SALESMEN guarantee boxes with $200 in winners but the figures never coincide.

Besides 35 customer letters lauding the Itasca dealer for his stand against Shell, Lempicki has received other assorted support. The Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago (GRA) which has a membership of over 440 stations has supported him.

A GRA attorney said 99 per cent of the dealers don't want to participate in the games and if a dealer refuses to participate in the games, his lease is threatened.

Lempicki is more than aware of the lease cancellation policy by Shell since company officials have informed him that unless he complies with the coin games such as "Man in Space," his lease will be terminated shortly.

Lempicki has one year before his lease can be renewed and he seriously doubts whether he will be a permanent fixture at the corner of Irving and Walnut Street.

Besides GRA, Lempicki took a personal poll of 32 Shell dealers in the surrounding area and 29 supported or sympathized with his objections. Even his closest competitor in town, Pat Bartuch, who operates the Standard station down the road, agrees with his game denial.

"The games are not fair to the public because of the percentage of winning to losing," Bartuch said.

SOME STATION dealers have supported their vocal dissent with picketing. Lempicki was among 60 protesting dealers who marched around Shell's main office in the Chicago Loop earlier last month.

The Itasca dealer claims he has been offered a large sum of money to just "leave quietly" within 30 days but Lempicki finds leaving the village and his station hard because he has been a town resident for over 14 years. The mechanic said, "I call most of my customers by their first name. The station is part of the community, not just another gas station."

Chief Warns Residents of 'Bank Swindlers'

Wheeling Police Chief M. O. Horcher has issued a warning to alert local residents to swindlers who have victimized several area persons in the past year.

Horcher said yesterday that five or six occurrences of what is called the "bank examiner swindle" have been reported to police in North Shore suburbs in the past year. The chief explained that one such swindle of a Wheeling resident in October had been reported within the last week.

Swindlers have succeeded in taking between $2,000 and $7,000 from each of the victims, the chief said.

Police are hoping to prevent further occurrences of the swindle by warning residents and instructing employees in area banks.

HORCHER TOLD THE Herald yesterday that the bank-examiner swindle is usually pulled on elderly widows, but that some cases have also included elderly men.

The names of the victims are taken from a phone book or from a city directory, the chief explained.

The basic idea behind the swindle is that a man phones the victim and explains that he is a bank examiner for either the state or federal government.

During the conversation the caller attempts to find out the amount of money the victim has in the bank and the bank where the money is deposited.

The caller then tells the victim that he suspects bank employees of embezzling funds and asks the victim's help in catching the employees.

HORCHER SAID THAT the swindlers sometimes identify themselves as FBI men to gain confidence of their victims.

The victim is then told to draw out a substantial amount of cash from her account. The man tells her not to contact the police or discuss the plan with anyone at the bank.

Sometimes, Horcher said, the person is even offered a monetary reward of from $25 to $500 for cooperating.

The victim is then either given a ride to the bank by the man who claims to be the bank examiner, or is sent there in a taxicab. When she returns home with the money, another man either meets her outside or arrives shortly after she does. The swindler phones to tell her to give the money to the man who has just arrived. While the victim is on the phone, the man at her home leaves with the money. The entire operation usually takes no more than three hours Horcher said.

The victim never hears from either man again.

HORCHER STRESSED the absurdity of the situation saying law officials would never enlist the help of a citizen in such a case.

The chief explained that most of the people who have been swindled believed they were helping law enforcement authorities. The chief said that the swindlers are so convincing that people will even lie about the reason they are taking the money from the bank.

Although banks may question a sudden large withdrawal of half, three-fourths, or all of a person's funds, they cannot refuse the money, Horcher said.

THE CHIEF EXPLAINED that persons cannot be insured against that kind of a loss.

A similar swindle at the Mount Prospect State Bank was foiled by Mount Prospect Police in August, 1968, but police were unable to charge the suspected swindler because the exchange of money had not taken place.

He points out that a study by the Wisconsin Department of Justice reveals that no one has yet been successfully convicted for the crime.

"The amazing fact is that not only can a person be convinced not to trust the police or bank officers, but that many do not even report the swindle to police after it occurs," he said.

THE CHIEF SAID area bank employees are being cautioned to watch for unusually large withdrawals. Because one of the swindlers often follows a victim to the bank, bank officials have also been instructed to take a person who is making such a withdrawal into a private office and to warn him about the possibility of such a swindle.

The chief asked residents who are contacted by a swindler to notify police. If the person thinks an offer may be legitimate, he should check the offer with the law enforcement agency the person claims to represent, Horcher said.

Huge Development OK'd by Planners

Buffalo Grove's plan commission has put its stamp of approval on plans for a $16 million condominium development planned for an area on Dundee Road adjacent to the Cambridge portion of the village.

However, an interpretation of the village's zoning ordinance by Village Atty. Richard Raysa, may result in the need for public hearings on the development.

The action came at a plan commission meeting Wednesday at which approximately 35 Cambridge residents, most of whom opposed the development, attended. Also there was James Mitchell, an attorney hired by a group of about 20 Cambridge residents fighting the development.

THE DEVELOPMENT, planned by Richard Brown who built Cambridge, would include a pair of six-story buildings and 5 four-story buildings. A total of 512 condominium units would be included in the seven buildings. Prices for the units would range from $26,000 to $41,000.

The proximity of the 2 six-story buildings to the Cambridge homes has caused much of the controversy. Brown has agreed to substitute a four-story building for one of the offending six-story structures, but has refused to move the other one.

Currently Brown holds village board approval for apartments and townhouses to be built on the site. However, Brown has decided he wants to build condominiums instead, and needs village approval for the change.

Brown first outlined his plans for the condominiums at the Dec. 3 plan commission meeting. However, plan commissioners postponed the matter until the Wednesday meeting.

PRIOR TO making a decision on the change Wednesday, the plan commissioners spent almost two hours hearing comments from residents; legal questions from the residents' attorney; and a pair of surprise zoning ordinance interpretations from Raysa.

Wallace Berth, plan commission chairman, opened the condominium matter by outlining Raysa's interpretation of provisions in the village zoning ordinance which he said limited the height of Brown's proposed condominiums.

That interpretation went thus: According to Buffalo Grove's zoning ordinance, Brown's condominiums are classified as "attached dwellings."

Under the residential district provisions of the ordinance, the building height limits for single-family residences, including attached dwellings, cannot exceed 2½ stories or 35 feet, whichever is lower.

ON HEARING this, some plan commissioners indicated they had no choice but to follow Raysa's interpretation and recommend that the village board refuse to allow the condominiums.

Also during the meeting James Schrader of 467 Forest Way Drive questioned whether or not the village could make a decision on the proposed change. To that Raysa answered that no public hearings were necessary. Raysa said Brown's request was only for a change in the plan.

But later in the meeting, Raysa apparently changed his mind, decided the proposed changes were more extensive than he first thought, and concluded that public hearings were in fact necessary before the change could be allowed.

FOLLOWING THE meeting, Raysa said he changed his mind concerning the need for public hearings after learning that Brown's revisions included a height change on the buildings and a change from apartments to condominiums. According to Raysa he was unaware of these factors until after the meeting started.

After Raysa's comments, the plan commission, voted 5 to 1 to recommend that the village board amend the zoning ordinance concerning Brown's development so as to allow the condominiums. The one commissioner voting against the recommendation was Stanley Haar.

Raysa indicated that it would be up to Brown to make a formal application for the zoning change. But, after the meeting, Brown said he wasn't sure of his plans at that point. Brown said he hadn't expected Raysa's ruling.

LEO ANDERSON, a spokesman for the group of Cambridge residents fighting the development, admitted he was surprised at Raysa's statement. He said his group, too, was unsure of its next step other than to meet at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

After the meeting Berth indicated he would attempt to have the results of the meeting placed on Monday's village board agenda.

Join Forces in Fight for Tourists' Dollars

By MURRAY J. BROWN

UPI Travel Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Airline and steamship companies have long been engaged in fierce competition for the American travelers' dollars. But recently some have been joining forces to capture even bigger shares of the lucrative tourist trade.

One major factor has been the increased popularity of combined air-sea vacations, particularly among Americans who have limited holiday time.

A number of air and sea carries have been offering such combinations to Europe and elsewhere from the United States for several years. Passengers can sail to their destinations and return by plane, or vice versa.

But the big boom has come in short-term vacations with former rivals teaming up to offer Americans an even wider variety of air-sea-air cruises.

More vacationists have been flying from cities throughout the United States to the warm water ports in Florida, California and the Caribbean to board their cruise ships. Flights are scheduled to coincide with ship departures and arrivals and ground transportation between airport and pier can be arranged when the package is purchased.

The jet flight generally takes hours, compared with days of sailing from and to northern ports. In addition to the saving in time — and sometimes in money — it could also eliminate long voyages through rough watery waters.

Indicative of the trend is the massive air-sea program launched this winter by Eastern Airlines in cooperation with five cruise lines. EAL had one air-sea winter package last year — it has scheduled 125 Wings-and-Water cruises for the 1969-70 season.

They range from two-night trips between Miami and the Bahamas to eight-day cruises through the Caribbean.

Included are seven-day cruises from San Juan, Puerto Rico, aboard the French Lines 19,828-ton Antilles (from $271 per person) and the Costa Line's 17,000-ton Fulvia (from $232).

From Florida, EAL and Norwegian Caribbean Lines offer three and four-day cruises to Nassau aboard the 15,000-ton Skyward (from $115) and eight-day cruises to Jamaica (from $215) and to San Juan and St. Thomas (from $260) on its sister-ship Starward.

Similar packages are being promoted by National Airlines from Miami.

Air France also has expanded its air-sea cruise program from New York. It is cooperating with the Yugoslav shipowners on 36 one-week cruises from Guadeloupe on the Dalmatia and Istra. Both are 5,500-ton liners.

The Dalmatia's ports of call include Curacao, La Guaira, Trinidad, Barbados, St. Lucia and Martinique. The Istra stops at Aruba, La Guaira, Grenada, Martinique, Dominica, St. Kitts and Antigua (rates from $135).

Eight-day air-sea packages are offered by KLM Royal Dutch Airlines from Curacao and Aruba aboard the Chandris Cruise Line 10,000-ton Regina and 4,000-ton Romantica. KLM Flies to the islands in the Netherlands Antilles from New York and Miami.

The Panamanian-registered Regina has 20 sailings from Curacao with two different itineraries: Antigua, Guadeloupe, St. Lucia, Grenada, La Guaira and Trinidad, Barbados, Martinique, St. Vincent and La Guaira. The Romantica, of Greek registry, will make 15 cruises from Aruba (cruise rates for both ships start at $129). All rates quoted are exclusive of air fares. Round trip tourist fare from New York is about $152 to Miami and $142 to San Juan. Air France's fare from New York to Guadeloupe and return is $173 while KLM's roundtrip fares are $165 from New York to Curacao or Aruba and $135 from Miami.

Air-sea packages also are available from West Coast Ports.

P/O Lines has a series of 31-day combinations, southbound by air and northbound by sea, from San Francisco (from $1721 tourist class). There also are air-sea packages to the Caribbean islands and Bermuda.

American President Lines also is cooperating with several major airlines in combined air-sea packages from San Francisco.

From Los Angeles, the Princess Cruise Line has scheduled a series of 15 and 17-day combinations to Miami-Fort Lauderdale (from $674). Passengers can fly one way and sail the other.

Instability Spreads to Chile

by PHIL NEWSOM

UPI Foreign News Analyst

Chile, with an unbroken record of political stability over 130 years, is experiencing some of the same discontent which already has led to military takeovers among its three nearest neighbors, Argentina, Bolivia and Peru.

"The presidential candidates would do well to ask themselves 'Will there be a presidential election in 1970?' "remarked Chile's foremost political analyst, Luis Hernandez Parker, on a recent television forum.

Chile's presidential elections are scheduled for next September, with seven candidates in the field.

Five of those are on the political left which generally believes that President Eduardo Frei Montalva's reforms, notably land and Chileanization of the copper mines, have not gone far or fast enough.

A sixth is former President Jorge Alessandri, running under the banner of a new center grouping called the National party.

The seventh is the nominee of Frei's own Christian Democratic party, former ambassador to Washington, Radomiro Tomic.

The fragmented left is not given much chance and most of the voters are expected to lean toward either Alessandri or Tomic. That is, if the elections are held.

Doubts began to arise with the Oct. 21 revolt of the Tacna regiment stationed in Santiago, fourteen civilians were killed in the 22-hour uprising which its leader, Gen. Roberto Vial, declared was not an uprising against the government but a demand for higher pay and a change in the high command.

Although Vial won on both counts and has become a hero of the army, Frei took the occasion to proclaim that "Chile has given the world a lesson in democracy. The world knows that in Chile the people do not tolerate coups d'etat."

Since then the government has displayed its own nervousness by declaring a state of siege and early this month by ordering new internal security measures after rumors of secret meetings among army officers.

Among Chile's civilian population there are rightwing forces which frankly favor a military coup.

Less Work, More Leisure in '70s

EDITOR'S NOTE: The workweek has been shrinking steadily in the lifetimes of most of us. The 40-hour, five-day week has become standard. The 36-hour week is not unusual. There now are businesses geared to four-day weeks. Leisure time has climbed steadily. Will the 1970s bring even more shrinkages in working time, dramatic expansion of leisure hours? This dispatch, another in a series by United Press International senior editors "Sting up the '70s," examines the possibilities.

"You ought to be interested in tomorrow — that's where we're going."

—Charles F. Kettering

By H. D. QUIGG
UPI Senior Editor

No one could prophesy what the '70s might hold for mankind in America. And so it came as a shocker to the paymasters of Europe when the news arrived by sail from the Colonies in the 1670s that wages for skilled workers had soared to around 50 cents a day.

The chief reason was the scarcity of workers, especially skilled ones. History does not record that anyone gave heavy thought to leisure in a workday that lasted from sunrise to sunset.

Exactly 300 years later, the 1970s will end with society standing only 20 years away from the 3rd millennium of the Christian era. The prospect is that the average American worker will be phasing into a four-day week, will be depending more on brains and knowledge than muscle.

And Americans, who now are spending nearly $150 billion a year in the pursuit of leisure, will have boomed the over-all leisure market to $250 billion by mid-decade. Fishing will be the big gainer in outdoor sports.

Hunting is expected to level off, not keep pace with the population. A lot of people can fish 10 acres over a year; one hunter will hunt out 10 acres in half a day.

In summer time activities, more people will be swimming than anything else; it will replace walking, which as of now is the most popular exercise.

At decade's end, according to the current estimate of some scientists, we will be able to produce all and more of the goods and services we need by using only 10 per cent or 25 per cent (depending on which forecaster you listen to) of our work force.

One savant has called the computer the greatest invention in history—brusquely telling the wheel to move over. Even computer people might argue about this. But the facts of life are that right now there are 56,000 computers at work, whereas they were new-fangled contraptions 15 years ago.

Says John Diebold, the prominent management consultant: "The projections of my firm are that by 1972 there will be 100,000 computers installed in the United States alone. Yet we are using this technology in only an elementary manner."

Diebold envisions the computer process as spawning entirely new major industries. Just the building of them is now a $6 billion-plus industry.

And what about jobs? We've had 150,000 or so computer programmers to date. The country needs around a million of them between now and 1975. That is the projection in the recent book "The Age of Discontinuity" of Peter F. Drucker, the economist and management consultant.

"The information industry will create tremendous employment opportunities," he says. "The programmer is to that industry what the assembly line worker was to the mass production industry of yesterday: Semiskilled but highly paid and productive."

Among other skilled and demanding jobs, the information technology also will need up to half a million systems engineers during the decade — "yet there are only beginnings." The "knowledge industries" (the term was coined by an economist) will need, Drucker says, two million health care professions: Nurses, dietitians, medical and X-ray technologists, social and psychiatric case workers and so on.

In the late 1970s, Drucker projects, the knowledge sector will account for half the total national product: "Every other dollar earned and spent" will be earned by producing and distributing ideas and information and spent on procuring them. By 1975, or 1980 at latest, the majority of the American labor force will be professional, managerial, and technical—or knowledge workers.

John R. Pierce, executive director of research at Bell Telephone Laboratories, agrees that some work is going to be terribly boring and monotonous but hopes these jobs can be turned over to automation.

"Unless we find a way to increase the productivity of labor," Pierce says, "we'll be in a sad state even one or two years from now because of the competition from Japan, West Germany and Italy. Most of the American economy just isn't competing. Unless our industry gets out of unprofitable fields or gets better productivity, we'll all be relatively worse off in 10 years."

Air Force Offers Nurses Education and Commissioning

U. S Air Force recruiting has announced a new program open for active duty members of the Women in the Air Force.

The Nurse Airman Education and Commissioning Program is a 4-year program in nursing science. An applicant who is selected will complete her last two years of degree work at a certified college or university and upon graduation will be commissioned in the Air Force Nurse Corps.

Requirements for eligibility include 60 semester-hours or 45 quarter-hours of transferable credits with a C grade or higher. Six semester hours in sciences are desired but not mandatory. A good distribution of various academic areas is recommended for academic qualification. Entries into colleges in this program are scheduled for February, June, and September.

Information concerning this program and the other 450 jobs available to girls with the Air Force can be obtained by phoning Sgt. Ann Cleve or Sgt. Ron Lee at 353-5748.

"AREN'T WE DONE YET?" Rick Traub and Staff Writer Murray Dubin unload garbage in Berkley Square. Rick complained of people who overfill their cans so much that he can't lift them. A typical

Wednesday in Berkley Square will fill the truck nearly three times. "Berkley Square has more garbage than anywhere else in Arlington Heights," Rick insists. Rick lives in Arlington Heights and another Laseke truck collects his garbage. "I usually get good service, but if I didn't, I'd bring it all in to work."

Collecting Trash—No Thanks Job

by MURRAY DUBIN

The statues of Joseph and Mary didn't notice the three visiting men in Berkley Square. No shining star lit their way and no angels heralded their presence.

Truck 56 crept along unnoticed on Hintz Road at 7 a.m. Wednesday morning. The truck and its three passengers would bring nothing into the Arlington Heights subdivision.

They would only take its garbage. The three employees of the Laseke Disposal Co., began their job of picking up a little after seven.

Rick Traub, the 21-year-old driver of the truck, told me that Berkley Square has more garbage than anywhere else in Arlington Heights. While we were talking, Bob and Nick were hurrying to the garages where cans await them.

SOME HOPE didn't have their cans out.

There have been a lot of complaints about the garbage pickup in Berkley Square. Rick and Bob had a few of their own.

"In the summer, people fill plastic bags as big as I am with grass and they expect us to carry them without breaking the bag," Rick said.

"I swear they all cut their grass on the same day," he added.

Bob Stewart, who lives in Streamwood, complained of some people who have six or seven cans outside their garage.

RICK AND BOB agreed that an excess of cans slows them down. Rick suggested, "I'd like to see a three-can limit."

"The worst times are Christmas and Halloween — those damn pumpkins get pretty heavy," Rick admitted.

No one greeted the garbage men except one sheepish looking woman who clutched at her housecoat as she opened the garage door. One businessman emptied his own cans into the truck and smiled embarrassedly as he put them back into the trunk of his Cadillac and drove off.

Dressed in Army fatigue shirts and Army caps, Rick and Bob moved too fast to get cold. Bob, who is 30 and has a five-year-old daughter, said, "One thing you don't have to worry about on this job is getting cold."

Rick and Bob have been working the same truck together for two months and Bob was proud of the job they do.

"Me and Rick can do this whole area in four or five hours."

Select Susan Summers Lauf Appointed To State Post

Named in this year's national listing of America's most outstanding university and college students is Susan Summers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Summers of 204 Lanford Lane, Prospect Heights.

Her name is included in the 1969 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges," a listing of the campus leaders from more than 1,000 of the nation's institutions of higher learning.

Miss Summers is currently a senior in the college of fine arts of Drake University, majoring in speech.

Assigned at Tinker

U.S. Air Force Sgt. Clifton O. Erkkila, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford O. Erkkila of 144 S. Patton Ave., Arlington Heights, has arrived for duty at Tinker AFB, Okla.

Sgt. Erkkila, a radio repairman, is assigned to the 3rd Mobile Communications Group, a unit of the Air Force Communications Service.

The sergeant, who previously served at Clark AB, Philippines, is a 1961 graduate of Arlington Heights High School and attended Kendall College, Evanston.

William J. Lauf has been appointed deputy director for management services in the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

Lauf, 41, of Mount Prospect, has been affiliated with the management consulting department of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., Chicago, since 1966.

The new deputy director will have responsibility for the department's division of systems and data processing and the division of financial management.

Lauf obtained a bachelor's degree in commerce at DePaul University in 1955 and a master of business administration degree in accounting at DePaul in 1957. He taught various courses in accounting at DePaul from 1957 to 1969.

From 1959 until joining Peat, Marwick, Mitchell, and Co., Lauf held executive posts with Amphenol Electronics Corp. and the Norge Division of Borg-Warner Corp.

He obtained a certificate in data processing from the Data Processing Management Association in 1965, and has conducted executive seminars and review sessions on electronic data processing for candidates for the professional certification examination.

Smog Becomes Silent Killer

By JOHN M. LEIGHTY

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)— Smog has become a silent killer in the forests of California. More than a million trees are dead or dying from polluted air.

Barring dramatic new pollution controls, the only solution seems to be the development of a smog resistant strain of trees, and despite the obvious difficulties, the U.S. Forest Service is hard at work on the task.

An aerial survey conducted by the forest service in November showed 161,000 acres of conifers in various stages of decay in the southern California range.

In northern California, monitoring devices at Watsonville near Santa Cruz have verified that smog levels are sufficient to damage Monterey pine.

There also is suspected damage to the famous trees at Torrey Pines State Park near Riverside in southern California.

Residents around the San Bernardino and Angeles National Forests first began noticing pine trees turning yellow in 1965. But it wasn't until 1962 that Dr. Robert V. Bega, director of forest disease research in Berkeley, discovered the cause to be smog.

Bega exposed a sample of trees to heavy doses of ozone, which produces the same effects as smog. The trees underwent the same type of "chlorotic decline" as the pines in the forests. During chlorotic decline trees gradually lose their vigor and the needles turn yellow and fall. The chlorophyll in the leaf tissue is destroyed, speeding up the aging process and weakening the trees, making them prey to forest insects, particularly bark beetles.

Chlorotic decline is progressive. In five years, trees now beginning to show symptoms of light damage will turn yellow—in a few more years they will be dead.

In San Bernardino forest, 46,000 acres of pine are nearly dead, 52,000 acres are in a moderate stage of decline and 61,000 acres have begun to show symptoms.

Although other species of trees may be damaged by the present levels of smog, the pine trees, particularly the ponderosa pine, are the most susceptible.

"The trouble is being able to read symptoms," Bega said. "We have studied the pines enough to know the damage. We have to be able to learn the symptoms of other trees better before we can really say it's smog or another type of disease damaging them."

The forest service has an emergency program of tree removal to make room for the dying trees are cut to make room for the more tolerant species.

In Riverside, 23 varieties of conifers are being exposed to ozone in a tightly controlled experiment to find out which species are least susceptible to smog.

"Hopefully through a genetics approach a strain of tree can be developed which is more resistant to smog," Bega said. "If we can determine the genetics, perhaps there's a way to resist the smog. But the way it looks now, there's no relief in sight."

Smog damage in the forests is not limited to trees or to California. All sections of the country face the pollution problem.

Industrial emissions of sulfur dioxide gas have been found to be detrimental to the health and vigor of forest trees in the southeastern and eastern United States. And even in remoter areas of the country, trees and vegetation are endangered where factories spew poison uncontrollably into the air.

Vegetation is also in danger, Bega said. In the Los Angeles basin, where the smog level is often acute, it is no longer profitable to grow lettuce and spinach. Yields of citrus fruits have been cut in half. Flower growers have been forced to move.

Bega said smog is moving further and further into the mountains and tree damage has been recorded as far as the Palm Springs area, 114 miles east of Los Angeles.

The forest service research program has the following goals:

—Find the genetic line of conifers most susceptible to smog and replace them with more tolerant species.

—Monitor forest environments to determine the levels of air pollution. In northern California, beginning surveys are already showing danger signals.

"We know we're picking up concentrations that are damaging (in northern California) and know trees are damaged," Bega said.

—Study the impact of smog on the growth of pines. Researchers want to find out if injured trees can recover if placed in a clean air environment.

—Use aerial photo surveys to determine the extent and severity of damaged forests. Accurate surveys can be made quickly through new photographic techniques. A federal grant has enabled the foresters to extend the aerial survey technique nationwide.

The research will continue but in the meantime the forest service says the severity and extent of damage in the forests shows "there is little time left for application of effective air pollution controls."

Kickin' It Around

by BOB FRISK
Sports Editor

ON SATURDAY morning you wake up to the thunderous waves falling on the beach, sliding quietly up the sand, and receding in ripples. The sun is bright, the air invigorating.

On Sunday morning you wake up to a bleak December day in the Midwest. Where's the heavy coat? Will the car start?

In a matter of hours you're taken from the Gold Coast along the eastern tip of Florida, an area seemingly awash in a sea of orange juice, and dropped down on a dreary strip of runway at O'Hare International Airport.

And so, sadly, a vacation ends, and you're brought back by the wonders of air travel to the place you so eagerly wanted to leave just two weeks earlier. You're brought back to reality.

Summer vacations are fine; winter vacations are great.

Everybody needs to take some time off during any year but to take it in the winter, when the fall colors have faded and the temperatures have plummeted, is an exhilarating experience we had never before enjoyed.

The Gold Coast of Florida adds to the winter of discontent of snowbound citizens in the Northern states.

From Palm Beach, a favorite winter retreat for wealthy socialites, to Pompano Beach and Fort Lauderdale, a sandbox for the college set, and south to Miami Beach, this stretch in southeast Florida has boomed fantastically in the past 10 years.

For the golfer, this area is paradise.

Everywhere there are signs such as, "Golf Here," or "We're teeing off — North Lauderdale, the Country Club City."

Miles of fairway now accompany the motorist all along the Sunshine Parkway between Palm Beach and Miami, and land west of the Parkway, where cattle grazed three years ago, is being swiftly converted into more golf courses surrounded by apartments, single family homes, condominiums, villas and resort hotels.

The growth of real estate developments around golf courses is nowhere more dramatic than along this southeastern coast of Florida. Golf-related projects and towns of up to 60,000 residents are springing up at an astounding pace.

Resort hotels are building second and third courses while land developers are rushing construction of golf residential communities to meet an almost insatiable demand for retirement and vacation homes.

Between Vero Beach and Miami, more than 55 new courses have started construction or opened since early 1960. By the end of 1970, there will be 125 clubs and 155 courses open for play here.

The golf community's rise in Florida has churned up a multi-billion dollar business in the state. Golf, of course, is one of the prime reasons visitors flock there every year, but now golf living is the "in" thing. There is hardly a community development in the planning stages that doesn't include a golf course somewhere in the picture.

Prospective home buyers, whether golfers or not, are looking to the golf community. They realize the prudence of sound investment when purchasing a home reaches upward from $40,000, and the dictates of Florida's economy today says the golf community is as much an investment as stocks and bonds, probably more so. The end is nowhere in sight. Though Florida's golf communities have grown by leaps and bounds in the past decade, where there are now better than 60 full-grown golf cities in action, the 10-year span of the 1970s will in all probability see that number 60 jump closer to 600.

That's how much golf means to this state.

LESS THAN A YEAR ago we wrote a column, after talking with officials of the Miami Floridians' club of the American Basketball Association, on the impressive job Jim Pollard was doing as the head coach.

They were enthusiastic in their praise of Pollard and his work, and the franchise appeared on solid ground.

There was interest in the Paddock area in Pollard because he had lived in Mount Prospect and his son had sparked as a distance runner at Prospect.

Today, Pollard is out of a job.

The day we arrived in Florida for the start of our vacation we read that Jim had been fired as head man of the pro basketball team.

And Hal Blitman, the new Miami coach, didn't waste any time taking a slap at Pollard. "There's no question but that this team is in terrible condition," Blitman said after his first game.

Blitman had been coach at Cheney State in Pennsylvania since 1962 where he compiled a 127-24 record.

Pollard was coach of the team two years ago when it was in Minneapolis and coached it last season after they moved to Miami. He was a six-time all-pro for the original Minneapolis Lakers and had coached at LaSalle College, the Minneapolis Lakers and the Chicago Packers before coming to the ABA in its opening season.

Pollard left the Miami team with a 5-15 record, certainly nothing to brag about but certainly not disastrous in a season that stretches for months and features so many games.

Isn't it amazing how a coach can be praised so highly at the end of one season and fired after just a few games of the next campaign.

Such is the life of a coach in professional sports. Could there be a more insecure way of making a buck?

THEY HELD THE $125,000 Danny Thomas-Diplomat Golf Open in Hollywood, Fla., just a few miles south of where we were staying, and the charge of Arnold Palmer to the championship pumped some life into an otherwise ho-hum event.

The attendance was disappointing with less than 30,000 people attending the four days of play. If you've fought the galleries at the Western Open each summer in the Chicago area, you know that 30,000 for four days is a poor showing.

Palmer usually has more than 10,000 in his gallery alone when he walks the fairways of the Chicago-based clubs in a prestigious tournament.

Pro Gardner Dickinson had one explanation.

"This is an area of doers, not watchers," he said. "These people want to play golf. They don't want to watch somebody else play."

Sparse galleries or not, Danny Thomas is moving ahead with plans to build his second invitational in Hollywood, Fla., again next year.

IN THE PRO-AMATEUR event at the Thomas Classic, Jackie Gleason and Bob Hope put on quite a show. They had, among other things, a round of golf. Mostly, they had fun.

Hope, with a 38 on the back nine, came in with an 80 over the challenging par 72 Diplomat course. Gleason had a 90. Both know their way around a golf course.

Actor James Garner just may be the best celebrity golfer in the world. Warning the gallery that he hadn't held a club for 11 months, Garner blasted his first drive 276 yards down the fairway and birdied the par five hole.

So much for Florida. A vacation ends. And those thunderous waves falling on the beach become giant snow banks trapping your car, and the balmy days are just pleasant memories.

Tuesday a card arrived in the mail from the resort motel we stayed at for two weeks.

"Dear Friends, We miss you already. Hope you don't find it too cold up there and if you do, hurry on back here."

Now, that's vicious.

Fremd, Palatine Tangle

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

There are two high schools in the Village of Palatine.

To the dismay and disgust of the students of Fremd, one school is called Palatine High School. As one member of the Viking Booster Club once said, "We ought to break away from the Union and call our part of Palatine 'Fremdsville.'"

Fremd is the newer school in the village and Palatine High students like to believe, and they do say, "There is no Fremd."

The Palatine-Fremd rivalry has not been around a long time but it is as intense and bitter as any.

The two schools have met in only one athletic event so far this school year and it was Fremd beating Palatine in cross country. The Vikings and the Pirates did not meet in football and the arguments still rage over who would have beaten whom on the gridiron.

Well, in basketball there will be no arguments. Tonight when the Pirates and the Vikings meet in the Palatine High gym at 8:15 p.m., somebody is going to be a winner and somebody a loser. And as Fremd basketball fans like to remind their neighbors, the Vikings won the last basketball game between the two schools by an embarrassing 82-50 score. During the last few minutes of that game the Fremd fans were chanting, "This is our town," and Pirate rooters certainly have not forgotten. Palatine fans and players are bitter over last year's hoop game and are out for revenge.

"This is the game we want to win" says Palatine coach Norm Jones, "and I guess it always will be."

Speaking of Palatine a year ago, Fremd coach Leon Kasuboske remarked, "This is THE one we've been looking forward to."

The coaches, like the players and fans, sort of get caught up in the emotions of a rivalry game just like anybody else.

Palatine goes into tonight's game with a 2-4 record and the Pirates are 0-2 and in last place in the Mid-Suburban League. Palatine will play a non-conference game at home with Elgin Larkin Saturday.

"We lost two of our games because we had trouble with the press," Jones said, "but we did much better against the press when we played Ridgewood (whom the Pirates beat)."

"We know we're going to see the press against Fremd," he added, "and the outcome of the game will depend on how well we handle it."

The players Jones will be counting on to break Fremd's press are 6-3 forward Jeff Algaier, 6-2 Dave Hasbach, 6-2 center Charles Phillips, 5-11 guard Bob Carr and 5-9 Chris Andriano.

"Fremd uses both man-to-man and zone

T-J-M-B-E-R! As Fremd's Steve Wickum pulls down a rebound Wheeling's lofty center, 6-foot-10 Roger Wood seems to have his legs knocked out from under him. Watching the rangy sophomore fall are teammate Gary Kawell (33) and Vikings' Rich Gaare (50) and Mike Kolze presses," Jones said "Kaz is doing the right thing with his material. They're small and they have to get the basketball."

(12). The inexperienced 'Cat pivot man demonstrated that he'll be dangerous in the weeks ahead by pouring in 19 points. Gaare matched that total as the hosting Vikings posted their first Mid-Suburban League win, 66-62.

"A press can get you the ball a few ways," Jones continued. "They can get the ball on a steal at their own end of the court and they can force bad passes. They double team the ball and they try to trap the guy who has the ball."

"A lot of people think that if a team gets the ball over the half court line that the press is beaten. But that is not true. High school kids tend to take a quick shot once they get over the half court line and they lose the ball because their rebounders are all spread out all over the court."

"We'll take our layups if we get them after beating the press," Jones added, "but if they have a guy back covering on defense, we'll slow the ball up and run our pattern offense. That's the kind of offense we know how to run best."

Kasuboske's squad leads the Mid-Suburban League in forcing turnovers with the press. The Viking guards tonight will be 5-6 Bob Moloznik, 5-10 Mike Kolze, the forwards will be 6-1 Dave Wickersham and either 6-1 Steve Wickum or 5-7 Bob Loughlin and the center will be 6-0 Rick Gaare.

The Fremd coach, whose squad has a 4-2 record, says that his squad will have a disadvantage in the rebounding department but will have an edge in speed. Therefore he says, "I think it's going to be pretty much of a tossup. We both beat Ridgewood by four points and just judging from that, I don't think there can be any favorite in Friday's game."

Kasuboske's main concern was finding a way to stop Palatine's Algaier and Has-bach while in the meantime not letting the other Pirates go on a wild scoring spree. "Algaier's a real good shooter and he can really hurt you," Kaz said. "And somebody's going to have to do a good job on Hasbach."

Hasbach is Palatine's leading scorer with 17 points per game and Algaier is averaging 16 points per contest. Kolze and Gaare share Fremd's scoring lead with 12.5 points per game.

What this game boils down to is how well Palatine can handle Fremd's speed and how well Fremd can handle Palatine's advantage in the rebounding department.

Of course, to Palatine and Fremd fans all this doesn't matter. Just as long as their own team wins and they get to shout "This is our town," who cares about anything else.

Wheeling Hosts Hersey; Big Rog, Big Andy Meet

by KEITH REINHARD

It isn't very often in any league that an agile ball player of towering proportions comes along.

So when 6-6 and growing, Andy Pancratz made his appearance on the scene in a Hersey uniform as a freshman late last season, Mid-Suburban league cage fans just naturally expected him to eventually emerge as the dominating force.

It didn't take long for this situation to be altered. Came the advent of the 1968-70 campaign and Pancratz was back, up to 6-8 and still growing. But all of a sudden there was also sophomore Roger Wood sporting a Wheeling uniform and tipping the yardstick at 6-10... and still growing.

Tonight, at Wheeling, for the first time in what could prove to be a long, arduous and interesting battle for loop scoring and rebounding preponderance, big Rog and big Andy collide.

Unfortunately, when the two skyrapers lead their respective Wildcat and Huskie ballclubs into conference battle at around 8 p.m., the circumstances are such that neither team carries with it an aura of awesomeness. In fact, neither Hersey mentor Roger Steingraber or 'Cat pilot Ted Eckler is exactly overwhelmed with the showing thus far of his own charges.

But the fact that these two contingents could meet as many as four times this season and the fact that either Pancratz or Wood could establish a dominance over the other extending through as many as a dozen contests during the next three years, has to lend added excitement to a rivalry already well spaced with spirit.

The Huskies enter tonight's clash with a 3-3 overall mark in tow, a 1-1 loop slate and an anything but resounding set of statistics after being rated preseason as one of the stronger threats in Northwest suburbs. Pancratz in the meantime, while not bursting out as an explosive scoring threat over this five-game span, has displayed outstanding aggressiveness, nifty rebounding ability and all the poise of a well-seasoned veteran.

Wheeling's opening has been even less inspiring than that of their imminent foe. Launching the campaign as defending MSL champs, the Wildcats are still in quest of victory number one after dropping four straight including a pair of conference encounters. Wood at the same time, after an extremely weak start, has improved markedly over the short span to a point where last week against Fremd he had to be rated the most influential eager on the court.

This would seemingly place the two lanky potential stars at a point pretty much even in potential for their showdown tonight. And while as a team the 'Cats would appear to be yielding the edge, their own respectable statistics coupled with the home court advantage put them at just about equal terms with the Huskies for the confrontation.

Steingraber feels the key to the game could lie in his own squad's ability to regain their shooting eye. With what he considers a strong defensive front the Huskies have already proven they can win even without an overly effective offensive game.

In two league games for example Hersey has accumulated the poorest shooting percentages both in the field and at the free throw line. But they have also yielded the least amount of points and possess an even circuit record for their foils.

Wheeling on the other hand seems awfully close to finding the winning combination and figures to have their own 0-2 MSL mark. Having dropped their last three meetings by a total of seven points, the 'Cats rank in the upper half of the league as rebounders and field throw shooters as well as in both offensive and defensive shooting departments from the floor.

A winning precedent established in this game would be of more than casual importance. Later this month both teams are entered in the same bracket of the Danville holiday tourney and could conceivably meet for either a berth in the meet title bout or a crack as the consolation championship.

Again later in the conference season Wheeling and Hersey tangle with one another for sure. And in a league hinting of a wide open race for title kudos, their next meeting could be of crucial importance.

Finally, in reference to last season when Wheeling nudged an upstart Huskie band in opening regional play, the two could possibly be pitted against one another again in the playoffs this coming February.

There is Hope For Retarded

Too often the retardate lives a world he vaguely understands, in a world where people reject him for reasons he doesn't understand. For a look at what can and is being done to successfully bring the retardate back into society, Mark Cohen, Paddock staff writer, spent several days at the Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows. Here is the last of his three-part series.

Text by Mark Cohen

To suppress the alleged criminal propensities of the retardate, society once placed them behind the steel-doored rooms of an institution. Today, many states still have laws that provide for the confinement of individuals with IQ's below 70.

But the growth of psychology has led to new attitudes towards the mentally deficient. Physicians and social workers have realized that the retardate, with proper training, can someday enter the world as a productive individual.

Residential and day care centers have sprung up to answer the needs of the mentally subnormal. Industry has begun to realize the value of these individuals in the routine tasks of manual labor.

"THE RETARDATE is not bored by the drudgery of construction line jobs. For the average person, the mental strain of ritual performance destroys their interest in their jobs. But the retardate gains a personal satisfaction from often uncreative factory work," Clearbrook Director of Vocational Training Bob Gillespie stated.

Clearbrook provides for the retarded and an escape from the ignominy of institutional life.

Richard was 16 when entered Clearbrook. He was educable and showed promise.

He sat in the center's offices. His hair was cropped short and his eyes projected a vacuous puzzled personality.

"Psychologists tested and interviewed him to determine where he would best fit in the workshop and to discover if someday he could be placed in the outside world.

HE TOOK THE San Francisco Vocational Competency examinations and his performance projected his ability to respond to orders and his mechanical aptitude.

He was initially placed in the sheltered workshop where he put fuse holders together. The staff thought Richard could work well with machinery.

Society had already made him acutely aware of his limitations and he suffered from a severe sense of inferiority.

But the staff felt that with the right training he could overcome his emotional problems and develop his potential.

Most of Clearbrook's young adults work on projects in the center's sheltered workshop. Here, in a large hall, they perform their individual tasks.

THE CLEARBROOK workshop, like most sheltered workshops throughout the nation, has a special license from the Department of Labor's Division of Wages and Hours that permits it to employ individuals for less than the minimum wage. Here individuals, 16 and older, work on industrial projects.

Most work 45-50 hours a week and make approximately 52 cents an hour.

When the jobs are finished the staff packages the materials made to each industry with which they have a contract. The companies are billed for the work performed and produce completed, and Clearbrook's retarded workers are paid from the money received.

Clearbrook: A Way Back To The World

Currently the center has contracts with such companies as Motorola, Littelfuse, and Western Craft.

The retardates work, putting fuse holders and battery terminals together in a supervised environment. Machines buzz with the sounds of productivity and metal pans on floors and tables are filled with the results of their efforts.

A DISABLED BOY works from a wheelchair, his hands struggling and shaking as they attempt to piece together the parts of a fuse holder. Completed battery terminals emerge from busy fingers to fall over-flowing on workshop tables.

At Clearbrook the retardate is taught about the world of work. He takes tours of factories, learns about life in industry, and the basics of filling out application forms.

The staff studies each individual with the hope of securing the right job for each person.

"John lacked tool sense. If we placed him on a mechanical job he might crush his fingers in the jaws of a wrench or catch them under the head of a stapler. We would avoid placing him on a job that would involve machinery," Gillespie remarked.

THE CENTER found John a job collating: separating the various colored or numbered papers into the proper order.

There was the young girl, Paula, whose sweet gentle disposition, the staff felt, could never survive the cold ritual existence of factory life. She was placed in an area home for the aged, where today, she serves as a maid making beds and cleaning rooms.

"She has a smile for everyone. She is truly an asset to the place," Gillespie stated.

The retardate, once placed, is not forgotten by Clearbrook. He returns for bi-weekly discussions of his problems, attends social functions, and makes dates with old friends.

THE CENTER'S staff wants to know how each individual is progressing. They want to be aware of the treatment he is receiving at work and what adjustment problems he is having.

Clearbrook: A way into the world as a productive individual.

Arthur returned to Clearbrook to discuss his progress and problems since his employment. The staff discovered that his supervisor was paying him off with cigarettes and feeding him pornography. He was placed at Motorola for twice the salary plus fringe benefits.

The naivete of the retardate is often his biggest deficit. He can be led into acts of crime or robbed by an unscrupulous employer. It is Clearbrook's job to prepare him for the hardships of industrial life and to prevent degrading deceptions. And so, they keep a constant check on each individual.

According to Director Gillespie, Arthur is a friendly, hard worker, whose main fault is his own guilelessness.

For the mentally subnormal, the abstracts such as love, liberty and God are difficult to understand. Thus training focuses on the simple realities of life.

THE RETARDATE learns the proper social skills and how to deal with physical entities, such as clothing or tools.

Each individual has a different problem and no one is forced into a category from which he can never escape.

The center deals with the blind, the physically handicapped, and those who due to emotional problems, are functioning at a retarded level.

Despite their efforts, life for the profoundly retarded (35 IQ and below) often seems hopeless.

"The school district considers anyone with an IQ lower than 30 a non-entity. It is as if he doesn't exist," the Director remarked.

IN CLEARBROOK'S activities center the severely retarded are trained to develop necessary social skills. They learn how to brush their teeth and comb their hair and what the red and green lights on a traffic signal mean.

"When Jane came to the center she had four cavities in each tooth, her hair was uncombed, and her clothes unkempt," Gillespie recalled.

At Clearbrook she learned to dress properly and to care for herself. All of her teeth had to be pulled and replaced with a new set of dentures.

For Jane and other profoundly retarded individuals the world is a maze of mysteries. Its complexities perplex them and they will always need the protection of a sheltered environment.

"Some," Gillespie stated, "will go from one relative to the next; others will end up in an institution. It is very difficult to explain to the parent of a severely retarded individual what will happen to her child when she dies. Of course, as long as there is financial support, a person could spend their life in the activity center of Clearbrook."

FOR MOST RETARDATES, however, there is hope. United States Labor reports indicate that approximately 85 per cent of all retardates can, with proper training, acquire job skills and lead productive lives.

Carmine is looking forward to his new job at a local factory. A borderline retardate, he at first thought he didn't belong at Clearbrook. After some time, however, he learned to accept the necessary counseling that would help him adjust to the working world.

HE WAS EXCITED as he talked of his work and his beliefs: "I hope they will end the Vietnam war soon. I don't know why people hate each other. I think everyone should love one another."

Soon Carmine will be leaving to find the place in society Clearbrook has helped make for him.

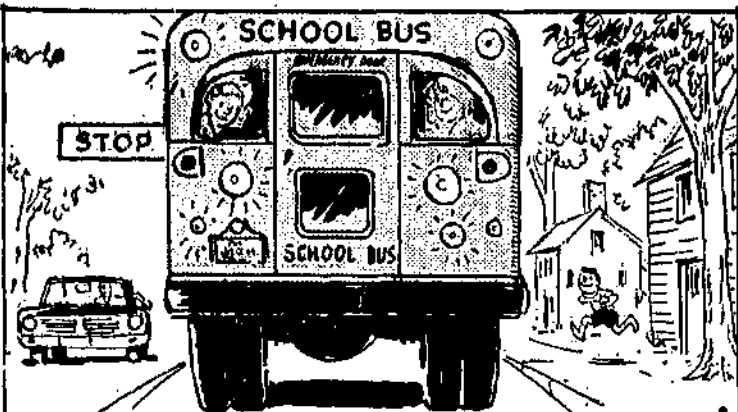

Bob Gillespie: Securing the right job for the right person.

Training: An escape from the ignominy of institutional life.

Lunch Break: Developing necessary social skills.

'Black' Is Even More Than 'Beautiful' Now

by LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A generation ago, "black" was regarded as an ugly word.

If you wanted to commit verbal assault on a Negro, you called him a black bastard. You felt—and he probably did too—that the adjective was more demeaning than the noun.

If you wanted to be polite, you referred to Negroes as "colored people."

Few people seemed to realize then that this euphemism was both a reflection and to some degree a cause of the assumption held by many members of both races that to be black was something to be ashamed of, a badge of inferiority.

One of the striking manifestations of the revolution in racial attitudes now under way in America is the emergence of "black" as a preferred designation for Negroes.

"Black is Beautiful" is more than a slogan. It is a therapeutic formula, by which today's young Negroes are purging themselves of the psychological imprint left by generations of self-scorn.

By insisting on their rights to be called "blacks," "black people" or "black Americans," they are asserting their conviction that blackness is not a disgrace or an embarrassment, but something to be proud of.

Even from a purely grammatical point of view, there is much to be said for the tendency, now increasingly evident in the news media, to substitute "black" for "Negro."

If we are going to describe members of America's largest ethnic minority as Negroes—a formal term dating from the period when anthropology tried to classify human beings by race—consistency would require us to refer to the ethnic majority as "caucasians."

But if we use approximate skin color as the criterion for describing the majority, it logically should be used for the minority as well.

The point is that Negro and Caucasian are opposite terms. So are black and white. Negro and white is a mongrel phrase.

"Honky" is a term used by some black people when they are trying to express the same contempt for white people that whites mean to convey when they call blacks "niggers."

Both the etymology and pronunciation of "honky" are in dispute. What is not in doubt is the fact that it completes the symmetry of paired racial designations.

We now have black and white, Negro and Caucasian, nigger and honky. Each person is therefore free to choose the level at which he wishes to conduct racial discourse.

Christmas Still Alive in Romania

By ALINE MOSBY

BUCHAREST (UPI)—Signs in the state-owned shop windows of Bucharest proclaim December the "Month of Presents." But to Romanians it's the same old Christmas.

Traditions, including religion, died hard under communism. Romanians vigorously support their churches and their Christmas and, although Dec. 25 is another working day, Christmas manages to be observed anyway.

This Christmas even more celebrations are planned for Dec. 24, the day presents are piled up and trees decorated with balls and tinsel, because university students won a Dec. 25 holiday for the first time in the history of the Communist regime.

The students campaigned for it last December by parading through the streets and singing Christmas carols.

Christmas cards usually say "La Multi Ani," or Happy New Year. But this year some of the unusually beautiful cards on display say "Craciun Fericit," or Merry Christmas.

Shop windows have sparkled with colored metallic balls and paper gentlemen in white whiskers since mid-November in honor of the "Month of Presents," a Socialist innovation. One Romanian sniffed that, "the Month of Present," a Socialist tradition, just a commercial gimmick.

The first round of gift giving comes Dec. 6, St. Nicholas Day, an old religious fete when everybody puts his shoes outside his door, to find them stuffed with gifts from Saint Nick in the morning.

The plump fellows in red suits in the shop windows and tiny newspaper ads are labeled "Mos Cerila," or Grandfather Frost, a Soviet Russian invention. But Romanians assure visitors that everybody nonetheless calls him "Mos Craciun," Grandfather Christmas.

Just as they have for centuries, most Romanians will sit down to the traditional Christmas Eve dinner of beef salad, pig's feet in gelatin and sarmale (stuffed cabbage), washed down with tuica, the national drink, and followed by a special nut cake called cozonac.

In Moscow, mainly aged people go to the neglected, decaying churches. But here persons of all ages fill the well kept churches with their carefully restored frescoes and priceless icons, or religious paintings.

Registrars Elect Oliver

A former Arlington High School principal was elected president of the Illinois Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers at the conclusion of its recent annual meeting in Chicago.

He is E. E. Oliver, director of the University of Illinois Office of School and College Relations.

Oliver, who came to the U. of I. as assistant dean of admissions and records in 1962, has served as president-elect of the state association for the past year, and was chairman of the program for the Chicago meeting.

In addition to his duties as state president, Oliver is serving a three-year term as vice president for admissions and financial aids of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers. In this capacity, he directs the work of seven national committees which deal with various aspects of admission to college and financial aid to students.

His career at the U. of I. has included the positions of assistant and associate dean of admissions and records, and director of admissions and records for the Urbana-Champaign campus.

He completed his bachelor's and master's degrees at Indiana University, and his Ph.D. in educational administration at Northwestern University.

Viet Advisor School

Second Lt. Joseph R. Tatar, 25, whose wife Susan lives at 396 Bode Road, Hoffman Estates, has completed a nine-day course at the U. S. Army-Vietnam Advisor School near Di An, Vietnam.

The school prepares "teacher-soldiers" to help step up the "Vietnamization" of the war. These hand-picked soldiers, designated as Mobile Advisory Teams (MAT), are prepared by the school to go into the field to teach their combat skills to the Vietnamese forces that provide security to village hamlets.

Japan To Vote On Asian Pact

By ROBERT CRABBE

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's 69.6 million registered voters will decide Dec. 27 whether their nation is to join the United States as a full partner in the defense of Asia.

The decision was forced by Prime Minister Eisaku Sato, a conservative politician with a knack for winning the confidence of Washington and Wall Street.

On Sato's orders, Emperor Hirohito dissolved the 486-seat lower house of the Japanese Parliament earlier this month and called a general election. Sato asked the Japanese people to return his Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) to power for four more years. In a final speech before the diet, Sato said he wants to renew the U.S.-Japan security treaty next year. He also made it plain that he is edging Japan toward closer cooperation with American policies in Asia.

Although the U.S. State Department would be the first to deny that America is trying to play a role in a Japanese election, U. S. interest in Sato's welfare is clear.

'60s See Extinction of Some Species

by ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Among those present at the dawn of the 1960s was the Mexican grizzly bear. He will not join the greeting to the 1970s.

After countless eons on earth the Mexican grizzly is probably extinct. "There have been no recent sightings," the World Wildlife Fund said in a formula that has become the obituary notice of a species.

According to some conservationists one or more birds or animals has disappeared from the wild every year since the beginning of this century. It is a continuing process.

Man has been exterminating his neighbors on this planet ever since he learned to set a trap, throw a spear, draw bow. Much of the slaughter has been for food or clothing, but man has eliminated some species simply because he wanted their living room—forest or plains—for himself. As the dominant mammal on earth man's will has always prevailed.

The passenger pigeon darkened the skies of the United States in millions before the last one shuddered and died in a zoo in 1914. The horselike quagga was slaughtered by early settlers in Africa to provide food for the natives.

Conservationists hope the 1970s will see a slowing down of this process and the rescue of some species from oblivion—as the American buffalo was saved at the last moment and the Arabian oryx has been rescued from the machineguns of gallant sportsmen in jeeps in recent years.

After long and persistent campaigns by the World Wildlife Fund, the Fauna Preservation Society and others, the mighty blue whale, largest of all creatures who ever lived, is beginning to gain in numbers after being overfished. The beautiful whooping crane is up to a population of 55, the most since 1941 when it was discovered only 15 were still alive in the United States and Canada.

The white rhinoceros has just been taken off the threatened list as a result of conservation measures. But only 20 Javan rhinoceros are still alive, and as long as the myth persists that the horn of the rhino is an aphrodisiac, its continued existence will be precarious.

The International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources lists nearly 40 species as now threatened or in danger of extinction. Among them is the California condor; the giant otter of South America, a casualty of the fur trade; the western giant elk found to be down to 180 in Senegal.

The tiger is threatened in Russia, Java, China, Borneo and Sumatra. Hunters, including "sportsmen" who track the great beast down by planes, have seriously reduced the population of polar bears. There are so few giant pandas that it must be feared the solitary beasts will not find mates during the rutting season.

Area Churches Tell Christmas Schedules

Arlington Heights

Candlelight services, midnight masses and special children's programs will highlight Christmas week celebrations in Arlington Heights churches.

The Sunday School Christmas program at Cross and Crown Lutheran Church, 1122 Rand Road, will take place at 4 p.m. Sunday. Children will bring articles of food for an inner-city mission.

The Christmas Eve service is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in a setting of candlelight. Children attending the service may be dressed for bed. A New Year's Eve progressive dinner is planned from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. The last course of the dinner will follow an 11 p.m. church service. Reservations may be arranged by calling Helene McPenke, 259-2937 or Shirley Ehrenberg, 392-2562.

The arts and crafts committee of the church has provided large advent candles which are suspended from the ceiling in the chancel area. One is lighted during each week of the advent season; a fifth candle will be hung above the altar on Christmas day.

THE NURSERY and kindergarten classes of Faith Lutheran Church, 431 S. Arlington Heights Road, will present a Christmas program at 9:30 a.m. Sunday. The primary department service will take place at 4 p.m.

At 6:30 p.m. Christmas Eve, the Children's service is scheduled and at 8:30 p.m. the Youth choir will sing at a family Holy Communion service. The Senior choir will be featured at a festival Communion at 10 a.m. Christmas Day. On Dec. 28 at 9:30 a.m. the church will hold a youth service with contemporary liturgy and music.

"The Abiding Inwardness of Christmas Joy" will be the theme of the 9:30 and 11 a.m. Sunday services at First Presbyterian Church, 302 N. Dunton Ave. On Christmas Eve, the congregation may attend services at 7, 9 and 11 p.m. A special children's service will take place in the chapel at 7 p.m.

At Southminster United Presbyterian Church, East Central Road and South Dryden Place, Christmas Eve services are scheduled for 7:30 and 11 p.m.

THE ADULT CHOIR of St. Edna Catholic Church, 2525 N. Arlington Heights Road, will sing at the Christmas midnight mass. Other Christmas Day masses are at 7:30, 9 and 10:30 a.m. and noon. The adult choir will present a program of Christmas carols at 9 and the youth guitar group will sing at the 10:30 a.m. mass.

The children attending the Evangelical Free Church will present their Christmas program Sunday. The nursery and primary departments will entertain at 4:30 p.m. and the junior and junior high groups at 7 p.m.

The Christmas Day worship service will be held at 10:30 a.m. On Dec. 28 the youth of the church will present "Our Heritage and Future," a dramatic production of the history of the Free Church.

A New Year's Eve Watchnight service will take place from 9 p.m. to midnight, Dec. 31. The Free Church, presently located at Dunton Ave. and St. James St., may move to its new facilities at 1331 N. Belmont Ave. by Christmas. For information on the exact location of services, residents may call 392-4940 or 255-0794.

A FESTIVAL of Christmas Music will take place at Lutheran Church of the Cross, 2025 Goebbert Road at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. The festival will feature the two church choirs, soloists and a quintet with guitars. Traditional Christmas carols will be sung during the evening.

On Christmas Eve a candlelight worship service written by the congregation will be held at 7:30 and 11 p.m. Theme of the service is "The World Tonight." Ann Teichert of Arlington Heights will be soloist at both programs. At 10 a.m. on Christmas Day, a celebration of Holy Communion for families is scheduled.

Christmas carols at 11:30 p.m. will precede midnight mass at Our Lady of the Wayside Catholic Church, 431 S. Mitchell Ave. Low masses will follow at 1:10 and 1:40 a.m. Other Christmas Day masses in the church are at 6, 7:15, 8:30, 9:45 and 11 a.m. and at 12:15 and 5 p.m. Auditorium masses are at 8:30 a.m. for children and 11 a.m. for adults.

At 8 p.m. Sunday the new choral group at St. James Catholic Church, 841 N. Arlington Heights Road, will present a Sacred Concert. The program will include Handel, Mozart and Bach works. A communal celebration of the sacrament of penance will take place in the parish center at 8 p.m. Monday.

GOOD MORNING!

TODAY FROM UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

House Changes Course

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing itself, yesterday affirmed school desegregation efforts on the Health Education and Welfare Department. On a 216-180 vote it accepted Senate-passed language upsetting an earlier vote to curb the desegregation drive.

Hoffman Bars Lawyer

CHICAGO — Judge Julius Hoffman yesterday refused to readmit Stuart Ball, attorney for the "Chicago Conspiracy 7," into court on the grounds that he was a "disgrace to this court." Ball is bearded and long-haired, and Hoffman objected to his manner of dress.

Barry: Bomb North

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Nixon to resume bombing of North Vietnam and to destroy Haiphong harbor and rail lines from China. The former Presidential-candidate said there was no other alternative to a "never-ending war."

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

Sharing of Tax Rebates Queried

by DON BRANNAN

The question of whether the Village of Hoffman Estates should share its revenue from the state income tax with other local taxing bodies was raised Wednesday at a joint meeting of the Hoffman Estates Village Board and the Dist. 54 school board.

Village Pres. Frederick Downey said the village has been receiving approximately $11,000 each month as the municipality's share of the Illinois state income tax.

Downey said the question of whether the village board would decide to give a share of this money to other bodies would eventually have to be decided by village trustees.

"IF WE WERE TO give Dist. 54 some money, what would they do with it?" he asked school officials.

Dist. 54 Supt. Wayne Schaible replied that any money received from Hoffman Estates would probably go into the district's educational fund. The policy of Dist. 54 has been not to earmark funds received for particular items, Schaible said.

Mrs. Virginia Hayter, trustee, said the village has a need for the income tax money at present. She stated that the village

UPDATED PLANS for development of park sites in Schaumburg will be shown to village fathers next month. During the last several months professional planners, Park Director Paul Derda and park board members have worked on long-range plans to turn the vacant lots into recreation sites. Mayor Robert O. Atcher, left, got a preview this week from Derda, center and Robert Bock, park commissioner.

Updated Park Plan Showing Is Jan. 13

An updated version of Schaumburg Park District's master plan, prepared by McFazdean & Sverly, Ltd., a Winnetka park and recreation planning firm, will be presented to the village board Jan. 13.

According to Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation, the revised master plan has been under preparation by members of the park board and the planning firm since late last summer.

The original master plan was prepared by McFazdean and Sverly about three years ago, Derda said, noting that due to growth in the village since that time, extensive revisions were needed. The plan will be used to assist in future park development plans, he said.

IN OTHER BUSINESS last week, park directors approved equipment purchases totaling more than $1,100.

Expenditures include a $190 snowblower which is being delivered to the park district by V&G Mower and a Play Scape apparatus costing $700 which will be purchased from PCA, Inc., for Civic Park.

Goals and nets, costing $247.84, will also be purchased for use in the park hockey program.

Air Cleared on Building Sites

A summit meeting between Dist. 54 school board members and the Hoffman Estates Village Board Wednesday helped clear the air on positions of the respective board concerning school sites and builder donations. The dialogue took place at the Dist. 54 administration center on Bode Road.

THE BASIC CONCERN of Dist. 54 regarding school sites is to obtain buildable sites — sites adequate for school building construction without caissons or special foundation work. This is particularly important in school building projects financed with Illinois School Building Commission loans, school officials said.

Although the question of who should pay for soil borings to prove that a site is buildable was not resolved completely, members of both boards expressed confidence that school sites given to the school district in the future would be satisfactory to school officials.

The cost of soil borings to determine if a school site is buildable is approximately $1,000.

"We don't want to pay for five sets of soil borings to find a buildable site," Mrs. Eleanor Thorsen, school board member, said.

PREVIOUSLY, THE chairman of the Dist. 54 building and sites committee had written a letter to village boards in Schaumburg township, asking that builders be made to prove a site is buildable. Presumably, this would involve soil borings.

"Aren't you (the school district) willing to spend $1,000 for soil borings?" asked Mayor Frederick Downey of Hoffman Estates. Downey said an eight-acre site donated to Dist. 54 would be presently worth about $60,000 or $7,500 an acre.

"I should think the school district would want to conduct soil borings on a site since they are acting on the opinion of their school architect regarding a school site," Downey said.

"The ultimate decision on school sites is the school district's," Trustee James Kopp, stated.

"We can create the atmosphere in which the school district can obtain satisfactory school sites," he added.

DIST. 54 BOARD MEMBER Elmer Linden, who also serves on the Hoffman Estates Plans Commission, said, "I don't see any problem in the future." Linden acts in a liaison capacity between the two boards.

"In the past we have relied that a site would be buildable when the developer said it was," Dist. 54 Supt. Wayne Schaible, said. "And we haven't had any problems until just recently."

Two of the Dist. 54 school sites designated for ISBC-financed elementary schools to be constructed next year will require extra foundation work and caissons. A school site in Highpoint will require special foundation work on about 75 per cent of the site, according to Dist. 54 architect S. Guy Fishman.

"We want you (the school district) completely satisfied with sites given by developers," Trustee Bruce Lind, said.

MRS. THORSEN TOLD village board members that "if it comes to a decision on whether to accept or reject a site, the school district would pay the cost of soil borings."

Members of both boards expressed confidence that they could work together in the future to obtain satisfactory school sites.

In discussing builder donations promised to Dist. 54, village officials said occupancy permits issued by the village have been withheld for the Intercontinental Apartments, formerly owned by Sam Pancotta, until a pledge of $50 a unit in the amount of $20,800 is received by Dist. 54.

Pancotta pledged the donation of $50 an apartment unit prior to receiving zoning approval for the Intercontinental development.

"The building inspector has been informed of this withholding action," Trustee Mrs. Virginia Hayter, a former school board president, said.

PANCOTTA HAS NOW sold his interest in the Intercontinental Apartments, but he is still acting as general supervisor of the development in Hoffman Estates.

The Hoffman Estates Village Board recently passed the order to stop issuing building permits for the new Intercontinental Apartments until the money promised to Dist. 54 by Pancotta is received by the school district.

The agreement to make the donation to Dist. 54 was stipulated in a written contract.

Developers OK Sidewalks

Developers of the Knightsbridge single family subdivision in Schaumburg expressed willingness to provide a sidewalk on Jones for Hoffman Estates children attending Churchill School.

The 40-acre subdivision is bounded on three sides by Hoffman Estates and by the Churchill development on the south. Knightsbridge developers are currently seeking the use of Hoffman Estates water until Schaumburg lines are available in the area.

Their efforts began at a village board meeting in October immediately following an ordinance passed prohibiting the use of water by parties from outside the village.

Agreement to install the sidewalk was expressed at the Hoffman Estates plans commission meeting Wednesday. The commission will make a recommendation to the village board on the water request.

THE WALK IS needed for children living in the High Point section of Hoffman Estates west of Jones Road.

Approximately one acre of land was also offered for an extension to the Churchill School play ground. However, it drops an estimated 18 feet from the current play area.

Plan Commission Chairman Richard Regan will check with School Dist. 54 officials on the practicality of the land offer.

Knightsbridge will appear before the plans commission again at their Jan. 14 meeting.

At another meeting Wednesday night, Hoffman Estates Mayor Frederick Downey intimated that permission for Knightsbridge to connect to Hoffman Estates water lines would not be granted.

Downey said the village presently has an ordinance prohibiting the granting of use of water lines by parties outside the village.

Moreover, Downey said, the village has a shortage of from 4½ to 6 million gallons in water storage capacity.

The village president said that bondholders would complain vehemently if water rights were extended to a new development outside of Hoffman Estates.

Schaumburg Village is expected to have water lines installed in the Knightsbridge area within a year or two.

Slate Rites For Woman

Funeral arrangements have been made for a young Hanover Park woman who apparently took her life Monday evening.

Mrs. Barbara Ann Hainsel, 28, of 1917 Sycamore will be buried today in her home town, Morris, Ill. Funeral services are at 2 p.m. at Fruland Funeral Home, 121 W. Jefferson.

SHE WAS FOUND by her husband, Richard, in their home Monday evening. Mrs. Hainsel was then rushed by the Ontarioville Fire Department to St. Alexius Hospital where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

In a coroner's inquest Tuesday morning it was determined that she died of a self-inflicted bullet wound in the forehead.

Mrs. Hainsel is survived by her husband, five children, a brother Paul Washburn in Morris, Ill. and a sister, Mrs. JoAnne Johnson of Chicago.

Trades Worker Falls

A construction worker at the new Schaumburg State Bank fell an estimated 10 feet from a landing to the bank's lower level yesterday morning.

Ed Pritchett of Chicago was taken to Northwest Community Hospital following the accident. He was treated for a minor heel injury and dismissed.

New Numbers In Schaumburg

Schaumburg Township headquarters now has two new telephone numbers in the township office at 105 S. Roselle, Schaumburg, in The Buttery.

The new numbers are 894-8130 and 894-8131.

Church Has A New Minister

James E. Gaynor was installed as pastor of Christ the King Evangelical Lutheran Church, Schaumburg, at a special ceremony Sunday.

Rev. Gaynor graduated from Concordia Seminary in 1968 and then served a parish in Houston, Tex., as assistant pastor before coming to Schaumburg.

In addition to holding a degree in divinity, he holds a bachelor of arts degree and has completed a course in clinical pastoral training at the University of Michigan Hospital, Ann Arbor.

He resides at the parsonage, 111 Standish Lane, with his wife Mary Anne and their year-old son Timothy.

NAW Appeal: 15 Families Need Help

general appeal for help for 15 Spanish American families is being sought by the Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization in Elk Grove Village.

The NAW says the families have been living in substandard housing in Elk Grove Village and need help immediately. Many of them are still living in shacks which have been cited with numerous building code violations by county inspectors earlier this week.

NAW has called a press conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove Township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, at which time an appeal will be made.

Louis Archbold, of NAW, said yesterday he plans to have the families out of the shacks and into motels by Christmas Day. If motel rooms are not available the NAW has indicated it will take the people into their homes.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the township, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archbold.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1031 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E. Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Touhy Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said. "In case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexius Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Wellman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School, said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

But, according to a statement by the building commissioner last Sunday, they need help in finding the housing. Persons with information should call his office at 321-7922.

In another development, a fire Wednesday in the farmhouse where Armando Gomez and his wife and child had been living at 1031 W. Higgins Road, destroyed some of his possessions.

"I don't know why the whole building didn't go up in flames," a NAW member said.

Lt. Donald Kuhn of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, said the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate.

New Dist. 59 Supt. Selected

Dist. 59 has selected a new school superintendent although his name will not be released until next month, according to district officials.

After screening over 80 applicants for the job, the school board unanimously agreed on the selection of a candidate to fill that position, Allen Sparks, board president, said yesterday.

"Although details of the appointment cannot be made public until the new superintendent has informed his district of his future plans, it is anticipated that a complete announcement can be made next month," he added.

"We are extremely pleased with the selection and are confident that the broad educational and administrative experience which the new superintendent brings to us will inspire the continuation of the fine education program which has been a tradition in our district."

THE SEARCH FOR a new superintendent began July 1 following the resignation of Dr. Donald Thomas, past superintendent for 2½ years.

Sparks said he would rather not release any detailed information about the new superintendent at this time, but did say that he was not from the immediate area.

It has not been determined when the superintendent will begin work in the district.

"This is something that we can't determine now," Sparks said. "It depends entirely on what the position of his board is on finding a replacement."

However, Sparks added, "It will certainly be no later than July, but we hope it will be much sooner than that."

Until the superintendent officially comes to Dist. 59, Al Walkman, acting superintendent since Thomas' resignation, will remain in administrative charge of district activities.

Council Asks Study Funds

Northwest Municipal Conference communities will be asked to appropriate $2,000 each in 1970 to hire a person or firm to conduct a transportation study.

The action would bring in a total $34,000 if each of the 17-member communities participate.

The decision to request transportation study funds in 1970 municipal budgets was made without a conference quorum Wednesday and will be recommendatory only to member communities.

A BUDGET appropriation does not commit a municipality to spend money, but provides for the spending purpose at a board's decision.

The action to hire a transportation study was taken in absence of Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl, the conference's one-man transportation committee. Pahl has stressed that the study should be conducted free to the conference, using donated personnel or retired business executives.

Representatives from six communities limited discussion to the obvious need of transporting people to railroad stations. According to the conference transportation policy adopted last March, the study should embrace a total movement of goods and people, tying in all forms of transportation, including O'Hare Airport.

Between snipes at Pahl for encouraging spending $200 for a defunct transportation study two years ago, Buffalo Grove Village Pres. Don Thompson said he could not ask his board for another transportation contribution unless he states exactly what the study is intended to achieve.

THREE BUILDINGS with a total of 249 units are planned for the first phase of the Century Tower apartment development. Located next to the Vavrus apartments on Bode Road, Century Towers will have only efficiencies and one and two bedroom units. Total plan for the 40-acre site calls for the construction of 18 buildings built around a lake.

Cub Scout Party Held

The annual Christmas party for Streamwood Cub Scout Pack 50 was held Thursday at Hanover Countryside School. Toys, candy, caroling, a Christmas tree and a visit from Santa were part of the celebration.

Den 5 also presented a Christmas skit at the party. Earlier in the week, the pack attended the Guild Players production of "The Frog, Princess and the Witch" at Tefft Junior High.

Towers Plans Submitted

Final drawings were submitted Wednesday for review to the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission by representatives of the Century Towers apartments.

The planned complex is located on 40 acres southwest of the corner at Bode and designated Jones Roads.

First phase of the development is to include three buildings for a total of 249 units. A breakdown shows that each building will have eight efficiencies, 51 one bedroom and 22 two bedroom apartments.

THE OVER-ALL PLAN calls for 18 buildings to be constructed. Pending issuance of building permits occupancy for the first phase apartments will be in September 1970.

Rental ranges are for persons in the $12,000 to $15,000 income bracket. The project has no three bedroom apartments. All units will have their own balcony.

All buildings have storage basements and will be constructed on concrete and masonry, with gypsum roofs.

Question Rebate Sharing

would not be in a sound financial position for two more fiscal years. A larger population for the village at that time will provide greater revenue from the state income tax and the motor fuel tax.

Mrs. Hayter then suggested that the Hoffman Estates Village Board give a "nominal amount" to taxing bodies that serve Hoffman Estates residents, such as Dist. 54, Dist. 211, Dist. 15 and the Schaumburg Township Library.

The Schaumburg Library Board has written to village boards in Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg requesting a share of income tax funds received by the municipalities.

DIST. 54 SUPT. Wayne Schaible said the school board had not been counting on any money from the village's share of the income tax, but would not turn any gift down.

The next move is presently left to the Hoffman Estates Village Board, and the board has the option of not doing anything. "Until the village has its head above water financially, we should let things ride as they are," said Trustee Bruce Lind.

Downey suggested it would probably be better not to give any money to other taxing bodies rather than give money for a while and then not be able to continue providing contributions.

The village president said the matter would be discussed at a future village board meeting.

Approve Condominium Complex

Buffalo Grove's plan commission has put its stamp of approval on plans for a $16 million condominium development planned for an area on Dundee Road adjacent to the Cambridge portion of the village.

However, an interpretation of the village's zoning ordinance by Village Atty. Richard Raysa, may result in the need for public hearings on the development.

The action came at a plan commission meeting Wednesday at which approximately 35 Cambridge residents, most of whom opposed the development, attended. Also there was James Mitchell, an attorney hired by a group of about 20 Cambridge residents fighting the development.

THE DEVELOPMENT, planned by Richard Brown who built Cambridge, would include a pair of six-story buildings and 5 four-story buildings. A total of 512 condominium units would be included in the seven buildings. Prices for the units would range from $28,000 to $41,000.

The proximity of the 2 six-story buildings to the Cambridge homes has caused much of the controversy. Brown has agreed to substitute a four-story building for one of the offending six-story structures, but has refused to move the other one.

Currently Brown holds village board approval for apartments and townhouses to be built on the site. However, Brown has decided he wants to build condominiums instead, and needs village approval for the change.

Brown first outlined his plans for the condominiums at the Dec. 3 plan commission meeting. However, plan commissioners postponed the matter until the Wednesday meeting.

PRIOR TO making a decision on the change Wednesday, the plan commissioners spent almost two hours hearing comments from residents; legal questions from the residents' attorney; and a pair of surprise zoning ordinance interpretations from Raysa.

Wallace Berth, plan commission chairman, opened the condominium matter by outlining Raysa's interpretation of provisions in the village zoning ordinance which he said limited the height of Brown's proposed condominiums.

That interpretation went thus: According to Buffalo Grove's zoning ordinance, Brown's condominiums are classified as "attached dwellings."

Under the residential district provisions of the ordinance, the building height limits for single-family residences, including attached dwellings, cannot exceed 2½ stories or 35 feet, whichever is lower.

ON HEARING this, some plan commissioners indicated they had no choice but to follow Raysa's interpretation and recommend that the village board refuse to allow the condominiums.

Also during the meeting James Schrader of 487 Forest Way Drive questioned whether or not the village could make a decision on the proposed change. To that Raysa answered that no public hearings were necessary. Raysa said Brown's request was only for a change in the plan.

But later in the meeting, Raysa apparently changed his mind, decided the proposed changes were more extensive than he first thought, and concluded that public hearings were in fact necessary before the change could be allowed.

FOLLOWING THE meeting, Raysa said he changed his mind concerning the need for public hearings after learning that Brown's revisions included a height change on the buildings and a change from apartments to condominiums. According to Raysa he was unaware of these factors until after the meeting started.

After Raysa's comments, the plan commission, voted 5 to 1 to recommend that the village board amend the zoning ordinance concerning Brown's development so as to allow the condominiums. The one commissioner voting against the recommendation was Stanley Haar.

Raysa indicated that it would be up to Brown to make a formal application for the zoning change. But, after the meeting, Brown said he wasn't sure of his plans at that point. Brown said he hadn't expected Raysa's ruling.

LEO ANDERSON, a spokesman for the group of Cambridge residents fighting the development, admitted he was surprised at Raysa's statement. He said his group, too, was unsure of its next step other than to meet at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The plan commission decided at its meeting Wednesday to make the recommendation to the village board. Gamm, who has lived in the village since May, is a field superintendent for the Gamm Construction Co., his father's firm.

gation has been renting facilities for six years at St. Mark's United Church of Christ in Wheeling. The new building can accommodate 150 persons.

First Service in New Church Slated

Members of the St. Hillary Episcopal Church will celebrate their first service in a new church, at the corner of Hintz and Schoenbeck roads, Christmas eve at 11 p.m.

The parish originated six years ago. After obtaining permission from the bishop, they organized a parish and rented facilities at St. Mark's United Church in Wheeling.

Now, six years later, the congregation is under the direction of Rev. R. Bruce Wheeler. After working with drug addicts for six years at St. Leonard's House, in Chicago and with the Department of Mental Health drug abuse program, Rev. Wheeler joined the parish in July of this year.

JULY ALSO MARKED the date construction started on the new church. It is the first of three buildings proposed for a total church complex. According to Rev. Wheeler, "the other two buildings will be added when we outgrow the first and we have enough funds."

The second building will be the main and final church. The third addition will be a parish hall and education wing. Both additions are included in the original plans of architects Harold and Richard Lutz.

Funds for the church were secured from the parish, the archdiocese and a mortgage, says Rev. Wheeler. Approximate cost for the building is between $65,000 and $70,000. The land was purchased 12 years ago.

Zone Hearings Set

Representatives from the villages of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove will attend two public hearings today in Half Day concerning a proposed industrial development and housing complex.

The property where the industry and housing is contemplated lies on the east side of Aptakisic Road just north of the Lake-Cook County line.

The hearings, which will deal with proposed zoning changes on the property, have been requested by the Chicago Title and Trust Co. as trustee for the property owners. The owners have petitioned the Lake County Zoning Board of Appeals for a zoning change on one piece of property from urban residential zoning to a heavy industrial zoning classification.

ON A SECOND PIECE of property they have asked for a zoning change from urban residential to a more dense residential zoning class.

Anticipated use of that parcel is for a planned development housing complex to provide housing for persons employed at firms located on the industrial parcel, according to the rezoning petition.

No specific use for the industrial portion has been revealed, however, in the petition to the Lake County zoning board. The petition did say that the industrial portion of the property would "follow the trend of industry along the Soo Line tracks."

Building Commissioner David Ruley and trustee Kenneth Felten are expected to represent Buffalo Grove at the hearings.

Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer, who will also attend today's hearing, reported to the Wheeling Village Board Monday only one other small tract of land in all of Vernon Township now had the heavy industrial zoning being sought for the property.

HAMER EXPLAINED THAT the Lake County ordinance referring to that industrial zoning classification notes "that such a use has an adverse effect on surrounding properties and is not compatible with residential, institutional and retail uses."

He told the board that while the Lake County zoning classification was comparable to Wheeling's 13 heavy industrial zoning classification, it had "less stringent performance standards relative to noise, smoke and vibration" than Wheeling's ordinance.

Hamer also explained that the residential zoning change being sought for the second piece of property would allow the owners to build either single family homes on small lots, duplexes, or townhouses.

Wheeling's board directed the village manager to have a representative at the meeting. The trustees indicated that objections to the heavy industrial uses should be made.

The hearings are being held at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. at the fire station on Milwaukee Avenue one block south of Route 22 in Half Day. The first hearing in the morning is on the residential section and the second hearing is on the industrial portion.

House Changes Course

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing itself, yesterday affirmed school desegregation efforts on the Health Education and Welfare Department. On a 216-180 vote it accepted Senate-passed language upsetting an earlier vote to curb the desegregation drive.

Hoffman Bars Lawyer

CHICAGO — Judge Julius Hoffman yesterday refused to readmit Stuart Ball, attorney for the "Chicago Conspiracy 7," into court on the grounds that he was a "disgrace to this court." Ball is bearded and long-haired, and Hoffman objected to his manner of dress.

Barry: Bomb North

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Nixon to resume bombing of North Vietnam and to destroy Haiphong harbor and rail lines from China. The former Presidential-candidate said there was no other alternative to a "never-ending war."

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

Suggest Gamm For Seat on Plan Board

Larry Gamm of 330 Checker Drive, has been recommended for appointment to the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission.

The plan commission decided at its meeting Wednesday to make the recommendation to the village board. Gamm, who has lived in the village since May, is a field superintendent for the Gamm Construction Co., his father's firm.

Teachers' Salaries Hiked

Teachers' salaries will increase at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View next year.

Monday the Dist. 125 school board approved a higher salary scale for the 1970-71 school year.

Starting teachers with the bachelor's degree will receive $7,500 base pay. The current rate is $6,611.

"We hope this will improve our efforts in hiring teachers," explained Stevenson business manager Ed Ellis. "Currently Stevenson is at the bottom of the list in starting salaries among high schools in the suburban area."

He added that "in the upper brackets, we fare better. We can compete well with other high schools."

FIRST YEAR TEACHERS at Stevenson with a master's degree will earn $8,250, as opposed to this year's rate of $7,235.

After 15 years, a teacher with a master's degree will earn $15,280. The current rate is $13,665.

Stevenson teachers work on a 200-day, 10 month schedule.

Ellis said most high school teachers are on a 185-day schedule. "The remaining 15 days are used for research, in-service training, curriculum development and so forth," he said.

The new salary scale was approved after three months of negotiations by a joint teacher-school board committee.

In other action, the board approved a new schedule for "master teachers."

MASTER TEACHERS are Stevenson instructors who are selected by their peers as outstanding. They will receive an additional $600 each year for three years. Instructors selected as master teachers for a second three-year period will receive an additional $800 a year for three years. Those selected master teachers for a third three-year period will receive an added $1,000 for three years.

Stevenson High School serves Lake County, which includes the northern part of Buffalo Grove.

Transit Study Funds Asked

Northwest Municipal Conference communities will be asked to appropriate $2,000 each in 1970 to hire a person or firm to conduct a transportation study.

The action would bring in a total $34,000 if each of the 17-member communities participate.

The decision to request transportation study funds in 1970 municipal budgets was made without a conference quorum Wednesday and will be recommendatory only to member communities.

Few Mishaps Reported

Streets were icy in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove Thursday morning, but police reported few accidents despite the hazardous driving conditions.

In Chicago, the number of accidents became so great that drivers were asked to report accidents to a police station themselves instead of calling police to the scene.

Buffalo Grove police reported no accidents. In Wheeling there were two minor collisions.

Creek To Move For High School

Salt Creek, on the western edge of the Dist. 214 site for a Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road and Barker Avenue will be moved 50 feet west of its present course to give the district benefit of the western part of the site.

At the Rolling Meadows city council meeting Dec. 9, the aldermen accepted the change in the upper branch of the creek, but directed City Engineer Edgar Fletcher to check on the position of a vehicular bridge over the creek on Dist. 214 property.

With moving the creek, the bridge over the northern branch on Dist. 214 property will be about 100 feet north and 75 feet east of a bridge being constructed by the city over the western branch of Salt Creek across Barker Avenue.

THE BRIDGE on Dist. 214 property also will serve as part of an access road to Georgetown of Willow Bend and will provide a second exit from the apartment complex.

The access road bridge is being built by Arlen Properties, developers of Georgetown of Willow Bend. An access road will run on the southern edge of Dist. 214's site. Willow Bend School, an elementary school being built by Dist. 15, and Georgetown of Willow Bend will be south of the access road.

In a pre-annexation agreement with the City of Rolling Meadows, Arlen Properties agreed to construct the access road bridge on Dist. 214's property. The developer also has agreed to build a footbridge across Salt Creek on the northern end of an artificial lake separating the Dist. 15 property from Georgetown of Willow Bend.

DIST. 15'S PROPERTY is on the corner of Barker and Algonquin Road, Georgetown of Willow Bend is east of it and Dist. 214's site is north along Barker and Central Road.

Neither Dist. 214 or Dist. 15 have begun to build on their sites. Though Barker Avenue will be a major arterial street in Rolling Meadows, construction of the road and the bridge across it will not begin until next year when the city collects its motor fuel tax. A temporary road has been put in to provide access to the Dist. 15 site.

Dist. 214 will have access to the Rolling Meadows High School site from Central Road. Presently, Georgetown of Willow Bend has one exit onto Algonquin Road.

HELP Goal: Establish Teen Center

A description of the "Outreach" project of the Palatine Township Youth Committee was offered to the Wheeling-Georgetown area HELP (Help Eliminate Local Problems) committee Wednesday.

The HELP committee is seeking to set up a program for area parents and youth aimed at helping them cope with mutual concerns. One of the goals of the HELP Committee is to set up a teen center for local youth, which Palatine has started in its "Outreach" program.

"DON'T JUMP in too quick. Work on acceptance and on building a sound organization," was the advice offered by Emerson Thomas, supervisor of the Outreach program in Palatine.

He emphasized that youth of the area would have to be involved in running the program if it is to be successful.

The Rev. Bruce Wheeler of Prospect Heights, HELP chairman, said that "We must sell the idea to the kids. This is an area that needs a lot of work."

Don Day, coordinator of educational and social services for the Community School Services program said "They will come out if we talk their language."

The next meeting of the HELP committee is scheduled for Jan. 21 at Wheeling High School.

First Phase Of Study Submitted

Wheeling's Village Mgr. Matthew Golden submitted the first part of his proposed classification and pay study for the village to the trustees Monday, but the board decided to postpone discussion of any part of the plan until the entire study is completed.

Golden said Monday that the classification part of the study had been completed. He explained that it includes tables of organization for each village department with recommended job titles and levels of authority.

Golden said Monday that he would now give the proposed plan to village department heads for comments and suggestions before it is returned to the board with other parts of the study.

Although board members were given copies of the study, copies were not included in the official reports for the meeting. Golden said Tuesday that until department heads have commented on the report, it will not be made public.

THE TRUSTEES discussed possible repercussions which might come from employees finding out about the proposed classification.

Golden pointed out, however, that because a position is upgraded in the study does not necessarily mean that the same person who now holds that position will be promoted.

The trustees referred specifically to a lieutenant's position in the police department and to one post in the public works department.

"We don't want the public or employees to be unhappy or happy with the study at this point," Trustee Ira Bird pointed out. He said that employees should not feel the plan is anything but tentative. "We don't want any employ saying this is my 'God-given' right because the manager recommended it," Bird said.

District 59 Selects New School Head

Dist. 59 has selected a new school superintendent although his name will not be released until next month, according to district officials.

After screening over 60 applicants for the job, the school board unanimously agreed on the selection of a candidate to fill that position, Allen Sparks, board president, said yesterday.

"Although details of the appointment cannot be made public until the new superintendent has informed his district of his future plans, it is anticipated that a complete announcement can be made next month," he added.

"We are extremely pleased with the selection and are confident that the broad educational and administrative experience which the new superintendent brings to us will inspire the continuation of the fine education program which has been a tradition in our district."

THE SEARCH for a new superintendent began July 1 following the resignation of Dr. Donald Thomas, past superintendent for 2½ years.

Sparks said he would rather not release any detailed information about the new superintendent at this time, but did say that he was not from the immediate area.

It has not been determined when the superintendent will begin work in the district. "This is something that we can't determine now," Sparks said. "It depends entirely on what the position of his board is on finding a replacement."

However, Sparks added, "It will certainly be no later than July, but we hope it will be much sooner than that."

Until the superintendent officially comes to Dist. 59, Al Waltman, acting superintendent since Thomas' resignation, will remain in administrative charge of district activities.

"THESE ARE THE phases of the moon," Billy LeFebvre, left, a pupil at Feshanville School in Prospect Heights, tells his classmates. During a visit recently to the Adler Planetarium in Chicago, Billy took notes and later gave a presentation to his own and three other classes. In his presentation he drew diagrams showing the lunar and solar eclipses and the phases of the moon. Classmates listening to Billy are Mike Schlegel and Annie Garcia.

Bensenville Man Faces 3 Charges

Larry D. Maehlenkamp, Lot 162A, 7500 Elmhurst Road, Bensenville, was charged with driving on a revoked drivers license, driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage in Wheeling Wednesday evening.

Maehlenkamp was charged by Wheeling police at 6:50 p.m. after he was stopped by Patrolman Billy Ralston on Hintz Road near Glenn Avenue.

Ralston reported that he stopped the car after he observed it swerve across the center line, back into its own lane, off the road onto the shoulder, and back across the center line again.

Police reports indicated that Maehlenkamp's drivers license had been permanently revoked in 1967.

Maehlenkamp was released later Wednesday night on $1,000 bond. A Feb. 2 hearing date for the case in Arlington Heights District Court was set.

Carpeting Contract Stands

In spite of certain "misunderstandings on the part of one of the bidders," the carpeting contract for Buffalo Grove's new municipal buildings, awarded last week, will stand.

Trustee Gary Armstrong raised the question about the misunderstanding. He said, "There has been a misunderstanding of the bids by one of the bidders. There has been a difference of opinion on delivery dates and the implied terms of payment."

Armstrong then called for public bidding to take place on the contract. Apparently the misunderstanding mentioned by Armstrong was on the part of the Rose-Lynn firm.

LAST WEEK THE board received the bids. Lowest bidder was a firm called Carpet Brokers of Suburbia, with a bid of $4,785. Second lowest was a Buffalo Grove firm, Rose-Lynn Flooring, with a bid of $4,822. Trustees at that time debated whether to award the contract to the lowest bidder or to Rose-Lynn because it was a local firm and its bid was only about $35 more than the low bid.

At that time Village Mgr. Richard Decker, who secured the bids at the request of the board, told the trustees that the Carpet Broker firm had the carpeting in stock. He also pointed out that the Rose-Lynn bid included a stipulation that payment be made within 10 days.

After some discussion, the board followed Decker's recommendation and chose the Carpet Broker bid.

HOWEVER, at Monday's meeting Decker supported Armstrong's request for public bidding on the contract. Decker said that no delivery dates had been stated on any of the bids; however, one of the bidders promised installation within two weeks after the contract award.

Decker also commented, "Any contract award of this size should be made by sealed bid, opened at a public meeting."

However, the board felt differently. Trustee Robert Gleason said he wanted the carpeting to be laid as soon as possible. "Misunderstandings occur; that's why bids are lost."

And the board in defeating a motion to solicit bids a second time, apparently agreed with Gleason.

NAW Appeal: 15 Families Need Help

A general appeal for help for 15 Spanish American families is being sought by the Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization in Elk Grove Village.

The NAW says the families have been living in substandard housing in Elk Grove Township and need help immediately. Many of them are still living in shacks which have been cited with numerous building code violations by county inspectors earlier this week.

NAW has called a press conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove Township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, at which time an appeal will be made.

Louis Archbold, of NAW, said yesterday he plans to have the families out of the shacks and into motels by Christmas Day. If motel rooms are not available the NAW has indicated it will take the people into their homes.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the motel, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archbold.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1031 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E. Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Touhy Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said. "In case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexius Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Wellman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

Two Peace Corps 'Students' Here

by TOM JACHIMIEC

Two former members of the Latin American Peace Corps are making their home in the Northwest suburbs.

They are Carlos Vargas, 26, of Costa Rica, and Guilmo Barrio, 30, of Chile. Both men live at 208 Benton in Palatine.

Several months ago Carlos and Guilmo completed a two-year term in the peace corps in the Dominican Republic under a program financed by the Dominican Development Foundation and the Inter-American Bank.

Their job was to work with youths from 13 to 21 years of age in organizing a farm and community development program similar to our 4-H clubs.

The program has been successful, said Guilmo. "The agricultural production has been increased by 50 per cent," he said.

Following the completion of their work with the peace corps, both men came to the United States to live.

They have some difficulty with English but are determined to improve themselves by enrolling in a basic adult education class taught at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights and sponsored by the Illinois Migrant Council.

Guilmo, who attended the University of Concepcion in Chile for two years, wants to become a social worker. He says he first must understand the language in order to get a job.

Carlos is currently employed as a welder and mechanic at Power Tools Inc., Palatine. He attended a vocational college for one year.

Both said they came to the United States because they want to know what it is really like after hearing so much about it for many years.

"I want to know what the reality of the United States is like," said Carlos. "Your manner of thinking, I've heard so much about."

Carlos said it too soon for him to form opinions about the United States.

However, he said he likes the idea that in our country all people have the opportunity to live well. This is not so, he explained, in his country where "even if you work hard in Latin America you cannot rise as high as in the United States."

Guilmo said the United States is completely different from Latin America.

Along with a higher economy in the United States, he said the dollar is "more important than other human beings."

In Latin America, he said it is possible to live without money by relying on friends and relatives. Here, he said he does not think it is possible to live without money.

Guilmo, who studied sociology in college, said "mechanization in the United States has led to de-humanization."

There is no time for meditating and relating with other people," he said. "Here man is a slave of time."

LATIN AMERICANS Guilmo Barrio, They formerly were members of the left, and Carlos Vargas are planning to make the United States their home. live in Palatine.

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

Approve Condominium Complex

Buffalo Grove's plan commission has put its stamp of approval on plans for a $16 million condominium development planned for an area on Dundee Road adjacent to the Cambridge portion of the village.

However, an interpretation of the village's zoning ordinance by Village Atty. Richard Raysa, may result in the need for public hearings on the development.

The action came at a plan commission meeting Wednesday at which approximately 35 Cambridge residents, most of whom opposed the development, attended. Also there was James Mitchell, an attorney hired by a group of about 20 Cambridge residents fighting the development.

THE DEVELOPMENT, planned by Richard Brown who built Cambridge, would include a pair of six-story buildings and 5 four-story buildings. A total of 512 condominium units would be included in the seven buildings. Prices for the units would range from $26,000 to $41,000.

The proximity of the 2 six-story buildings to the Cambridge homes has caused much of the controversy. Brown has agreed to substitute a four-story building for one of the offending six-story structures, but has refused to move the other one.

Currently Brown holds village board approval for apartments and townhouses to be built on the site. However, Brown has decided he wants to build condominiums instead, and needs village approval for the change.

Brown first outlined his plans for the condominiums at the Dec. 3 plan commission meeting. However, plan commissioners postponed the matter until the Wednesday meeting.

PRIOR TO making a decision on the change Wednesday, the plan commissioners spent almost two hours hearing comments from residents; legal questions from the residents' attorney; and a pair of surprise zoning ordinance interpretations from Raysa.

Wallace Berth, plan commission chairman, opened the condominium matter by outlining Raysa's interpretation of provisions in the village zoning ordinance which he said limited the height of Brown's proposed condominiums.

That interpretation went thus: According to Buffalo Grove's zoning ordinance, Brown's condominiums are classified as "attached dwellings."

Under the residential district provisions of the ordinance, the building height limits for single-family residences, including attached dwellings, cannot exceed 2½ stories or 35 feet, whichever is lower.

ON HEARING this, some plan commissioners indicated they had no choice but to follow Raysa's interpretation and recommend that the village board refuse to allow the condominiums.

Also during the meeting James Schrader of 467 Forest Way Drive questioned whether or not the village could make a decision on the proposed change. To that Raysa answered that no public hearings were necessary. Raysa said Brown's request was only for a change in the plat.

But later in the meeting, Raysa apparently changed his mind, decided the proposed changes were more extensive than he first thought, and concluded that public hearings were in fact necessary before the change could be allowed.

FOLLOWING THE meeting, Raysa said he changed his mind concerning the need for public hearings after learning that Brown's revisions included a height change on the buildings and a change from apartments to condominiums. According to Raysa he was unaware of these factors until after the meeting started.

After Raysa's comments, the plan commission, voted 5 to 1 to recommend that the village board amend the zoning ordinance concerning Brown's development so as to allow the condominiums. The one commissioner voting against the recommendation was Stanley Haar.

Raysa indicated that it would be up to Brown to make a formal application for the zoning change. But, after the meeting, Brown said he wasn't sure of his plans at that point. Brown said he hadn't expected Raysa's ruling.

LEO ANDERSON, a spokesman for the group of Cambridge residents fighting the development, admitted he was surprised at Raysa's statement. He said his group, too, was unsure of its next step other than to meet at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Suggest Gamm For Seat on Plan Board

Larry Gamm of 330 Checker Drive, has been recommended for appointment to the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission.

The plan commission decided at its meeting Wednesday to make the recommendation to the village board. Gamm, who has lived in the village since May, is a field superintendent for the Gamm Construction Co., his father's firm.

THE SWORD IS QUICKER than the eye, when Dr. Robert Atterbury, whose hobby is magic, is handling it. Atterbury entertained students at Sullivan School in Prospect Heights last week with several feats of magic. Bodies floating in air, rabbits disappearing, and even a sword apparently thrust through one of the pupils who volunteered as an assistant all highlighted the performance. Dr. Atterbury's son, Robert, is a teacher at the Sullivan School.

Child-Psychologist Role Told

by BETSY BROOKER

"When a child exhibits adjustment problems in the classroom, it is not necessarily a reflection on the teacher," according to River Trails School Dist. 26 psychologist Dan Koren.

"We are here to identify the problems and find a solution," Koren told the Dist. 26 school board Tuesday night in a presentation explaining his activities and those of psychologist Rodney Marco.

Koren and Marco use a system under which teachers refer students to them that have been causing trouble in class. With the student goes a written description of the student's behavior.

According to James Ritzlaff, assistant school superintendent, teachers are using the system much more this year than last year. "We have had 102 referrals already this year, while we had only 125 all of last year."

The child who is a problem can be a slow learner or a gifted student; an aggressive child or a withdrawn one.

"We had one case of the first type," said Koren, "with a boy in first grade who was reading at a sixth grade level. The teacher was not equipped to deal with him and the rest of the class so we moved him to a second grade reading class."

"We did not move him any higher up because we didn't want to affect his social maturation."

"THE POOR ACHIEVER usually has problems with reading, although we had some cases with math and spelling," said Koren. "In the first of the year our greatest difficulty in emotional problems is with the aggressive child. But by the middle of the year, the teachers are able to handle them and we look toward the withdrawn child. The quiet child is actually harder to help than the aggressive child."

"Occasionally, we find a child who is neurotic, or living in a fantasy world. By the time the children reach sixth and seventh grade, the problem is likely to be more severe, and we find a few cases of psychotic children. In cases where we find neurosis or psychosis, we refer the children to resources in the community such as psychiatric centers."

"Once we identify the problem," said Marco, "it helps the teacher to accept the child and it helps the parents to look at the problem more objectively. Most parents prefer to overlook the problem or not admit it exists."

How do the psychologists identify the problem? The first step is a battery of testing according to Koren. This includes tests that measure I.Q., perceptive ability, personality, and achievement.

The next step, diagnosis, is more important. The psychologists try to determine what can be done to alleviate the problem.

This process includes conferences with the parents, teacher, principal and whoever else is in close contact with the child. Occasionally the child is placed in special education courses or he might be helped without being moved.

TO BETTER ILLUSTRATE the system, Marco told a story about a boy he had worked with who had an emotional problem. "In the teacher's referral, she said the child couldn't listen for a long length of time, and was nervous. In investigating his records, I discovered the boy had also exhibited a gradual deterioration in his school work. While he had made B's and C's in the lower grades, he was now making D's and F's."

"Testing showed the boy's I.Q. had decreased 12 to 15 points, from high average to below average. During the testing he trembled and his speech was halting, showing depression and anxiety. In his personality test, he revealed he felt rejected by his family."

"In an interview with his parents, they reported he was moody, couldn't eat with the family and couldn't communicate with them."

"For 15 to 20 minutes before the boy left for school, he beat his hands on a table, an action he also used when he was upset. Vomiting and stomach pains also accompanied his feelings of anxiety."

"The problem in this case was that the parents had waited for eight or nine years before seeking help," said Marco. "They thought the boy would grow out of it."

"We sent the parents and the boy to a clinic for family counseling. The psychiatrist's report showed the boy's tensions reflected the situation at home. Both his parents had ulcers, and frequently quarreled. With extensive psychotherapy, the child and the family might be helped." Anticipating the future, Koren urged in-service training for the teachers so that they can administer some of the services of the psychologist. He also suggested hiring residents from the community to come into the school and work with an individual child on a one-to-one basis.

Zone Hearings Set

Representatives from the villages of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove will attend two public hearings today in Half Day concerning a proposed industrial development and housing complex.

The property where the industry and housing is contemplated lies on the east side of Aptakisic Road just north of the Lake-Cook County line.

The hearings, which will deal with proposed zoning changes on the property, have been requested by the Chicago Title and Trust Co. as trustee for the property owners. The owners have petitioned the Lake County Zoning Board of Appeals for a zoning change on one piece of property from urban residential zoning to a heavy industrial zoning classification.

ON A SECOND PIECE of property they have asked for a zoning change from urban residential to a more dense residential zoning class.

Anticipated use of that parcel is for a planned development housing complex to provide housing for persons employed at firms located on the industrial parcel, according to the rezoning petition.

No specific use for the industrial portion has been revealed, however, in the petition to the Lake County zoning board. The petition did say that the industrial portion of the property would "follow the trend of industry along the Soo Line tracks."

Building Commissioner David Ruley and trustee Kenneth Felten are expected to represent Buffalo Grove at the hearings.

Wheeling Village Atty. Paul Hamer, who will also attend today's hearing, reported to the Wheeling Village Board Monday only one other small tract of land in all of Vernon Township now had the heavy industrial zoning being sought for the property.

HAMER EXPLAINED THAT the Lake County ordinance referring to that industrial zoning classification notes "that such a use has an adverse effect on surrounding properties and is not compatible with residential, institutional and retail uses."

He told the board that while the Lake County zoning classification was comparable to Wheeling's I-3 heavy industrial zoning classification, it had "less stringent performance standards relative to noise, smoke and vibration" than Wheeling's ordinance.

Hamer also explained that the residential zoning change being sought for the second piece of property would allow the owners to build either single family homes on small lots, duplexes, or townhouses.

Wheeling's board directed the village manager to have a representative at the meeting. The trustees indicated that objections to the heavy industrial uses should be made.

The hearings are being held at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. at the fire station on Milwaukee Avenue one block south of Route 22 in Half Day. The first hearing in the morning is on the residential section and the second hearing is on the industrial portion.

Few Mishaps Reported

Streets were icy in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove Thursday morning, but police reported few accidents despite the hazardous driving conditions.

In Chicago, the number of accidents became so great that drivers were asked to report accidents to a police station themselves instead of calling police to the scene.

Buffalo Grove police reported no accidents. In Wheeling there were two minor collisions.

Creek To Move For High School

Salt Creek, on the western edge of the Dist. 214 site for a Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road and Barker Avenue will be moved 50 feet west of its present course to give the district benefit of the western part of the site.

At the Rolling Meadows city council meeting Dec. 9, the aldermen accepted the change in the upper branch of the creek, but directed City Engineer Edgar Fletcher to check on the position of a vehicular bridge over the creek on Dist. 214 property.

With moving the creek, the bridge over the northern branch on Dist. 214 property will be about 100 feet north and 75 feet east of a bridge being constructed by the city over the western branch of Salt Creek across Barker Avenue.

THE BRIDGE on Dist. 214 property also will serve as part of an access road to Georgetown of Willow Bend and will provide a second exit from the apartment complex.

The access road bridge is being built by Arlen Properties, developers of Georgetown of Willow Bend. An access road will run on the southern edge of Dist. 214's site. Willow Bend School, an elementary school being built by Dist. 15, and Georgetown of Willow Bend will be south of the access road.

In a pre-annexation agreement with the City of Rolling Meadows, Arlen Properties agreed to construct the access road bridge on Dist. 214's property. The developer also has agreed to build a footbridge across Salt Creek on the northern end of an artificial lake separating the Dist. 15 property from Georgetown of Willow Bend.

DIST. 15'S PROPERTY is on the corner of Barker and Algonquin Road, Georgetown of Willow Bend is east of it and Dist. 214's site is north along Barker and Central Road.

Neither Dist. 214 or Dist. 15 have begun to build on their sites. Though Barker Avenue will be a major arterial street in Rolling Meadows, construction of the road and the bridge across it will not begin until next year when the city collects its motor fuel tax. A temporary road has been put in to provide access to the Dist. 15 site.

Dist. 214 will have access to the Rolling Meadows High School site from Central Road. Presently, Georgetown of Willow Bend has one exit onto Algonquin Road.

HELP Goal: Establish Teen Center

A description of the "Outreach" project of the Palatine Township Youth Committee was offered to the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area HELP (Help Eliminate Local Problems) committee Wednesday.

The HELP committee is seeking to set up a program for area parents and youth aimed at helping them cope with mutual concerns. One of the goals of the HELP Committee is to set up a teen center for local youth, which Palatine has started in its "Outreach" program.

"DON'T JUMP in too quick. Work on acceptance and on building a sound organization," was the advice offered by Emerson Thomas, supervisor of the Outreach program in Palatine.

He emphasized that youth of the area would have to be involved in running the program if it is to be successful.

The Rev. Bruce Wheeler of Prospect Heights, HELP chairman, said that "We must sell the idea to the kids. This is an area that needs a lot of work."

Don Day, coordinator of educational and social services for the Community School Services program said "They will come out if we talk their language."

The next meeting of the HELP committee is scheduled for Jan. 21 at Wheeling High School.

First Phase Of Study Submitted

Wheeling's Village Mgr. Matthew Golden submitted the first part of his proposed classification and pay study for the village to the trustees Monday, but the board decided to postpone discussion of any part of the plan until the entire study is completed.

Golden said Monday that the classification part of the study had been completed. He explained that it includes tables of organization for each village department with recommended job titles and levels of authority.

Golden said Monday that he would now give the proposed plan to village department heads for comments and suggestions before it is returned to the board with other parts of the study.

Although board members were given copies of the study, copies were not included in the official reports for the meeting. Golden said Tuesday that until department heads have commented on the report, it will not be made public.

THE TRUSTEES discussed possible repercussions which might come from employees finding out about the proposed classification.

Golden pointed out, however, that because a position is upgraded in the study does not necessarily mean that the same person who now holds that position will be promoted.

The trustees referred specifically to a lieutenant's position in the police department and to one post in the public works department.

"We don't want the public or employees to be unhappy or happy with the study at this point," Trustee Ira Bird pointed out. He said that employees should not feel the plan is anything but tentative. "We don't want any employ saying this is my 'God-given' right because the manager recommended it," Bird said.

District 59 Selects New School Head

Dist. 59 has selected a new school superintendent although his name will not be released until next month, according to district officials.

After screening over 60 applicants for the job, the school board unanimously agreed on the selection of a candidate to fill that position, Allen Sparks, board president, said yesterday.

"Although details of the appointment cannot be made public until the new superintendent has informed his district of his future plans, it is anticipated that a complete announcement can be made next month, he added.

"We are extremely pleased with the selection and are confident that the broad educational and administrative experience which the new superintendent brings to us will inspire the continuation of the fine education program which has been a tradition in our district."

THE SEARCH for a new superintendent began July 1 following the resignation of Dr. Donald Thomas, past superintendent for 2½ years.

Sparks said he would rather not release any detailed information about the new superintendent at this time, but did say that he was not from the immediate area.

It has not been determined when the superintendent will begin work in the district. "This is something that we can't determine now," Sparks said. "It depends entirely on what the position of his board is on finding a replacement."

However, Sparks added, "It will certainly be no later than July, but we hope it will be much sooner than that."

Until the superintendent officially comes to Dist. 59, Al Waltman, acting superintendent since Thomas' resignation, will remain in administrative charge of district activities.

"THESE ARE THE phases of the moon," Billy LeFebvre, left, a pupil at Feehanville School in Prospect Heights, tells his classmates. During a visit recently to the Adler Planetarium in Chicago, Billy took notes and later gave a presentation to his own and three other classes. In his presentation he drew diagrams showing the lunar and solar eclipses and the phases of the moon. Classmates listening to Billy are Mike Schlegel and Annie Garcia.

Bensenville Man Faces 3 Charges

Larry D. Maehlenkamp, Lot 162A, 7500 Elmhurst Road, Bensenville, was charged with driving on a revoked drivers license, driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage in Wheeling Wednesday evening.

Maehlenkamp was charged by Wheeling police at 6:50 p.m. after he was stopped by Patrolman Billy Ralston on Hintz Road near Glenn Avenue.

Ralston reported that he stopped the car after he observed it swerve across the center line, back into its own lane, off the road onto the shoulder, and back across the center line again.

Police reports indicated that Maehlenkamp's drivers license had been permanently revoked in 1967.

Maehlenkamp was released later Wednesday night on $1,000 bond. A Feb. 2 hearing date for the case in Arlington Heights District Court was set.

Approve Condominium Complex

Buffalo Grove's plan commission has put its stamp of approval on plans for a $16 million condominium development planned for an area on Dundee Road adjacent to the Cambridge portion of the village.

However, an interpretation of the village's zoning ordinance by Village Atty. Richard Raysa, may result in the need for public hearings on the development.

The action came at a plan commission meeting Wednesday at which approximately 35 Cambridge residents, most of whom opposed the development, attended. Also there was James Mitchell, an attorney hired by a group of about 20 Cambridge residents fighting the development.

Suggest Gamm For Seat on Plan Board

Larry Gamm of 330 Checker Drive, has been recommended for appointment to the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission.

WORK ON THE new St. Hillary Episcopal Church nears completion in advance of the congregation's first service in the new building at 11 p.m. Christmas Eve. The church, located at Hintz and Schoenbeck roads serves residents from the Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights areas. The congregation has been renting facilities for six years at St. Mark's United Church of Christ in Wheeling. The new building can accommodate 150 persons.

First Service in New Church Slated

Members of the St. Hillary Episcopal Church will celebrate their first service in a new church, at the corner of Hintz and Schoenbeck roads, Christmas eve at 11 p.m.

The parish originated six years ago. After obtaining permission from the bishop, they organized a parish and rented facilities at St. Mark's United Church in Wheeling.

Now, six years later, the congregation is under the direction of Rev. R. Bruce Wheeler. After working with drug addicts for six years at St. Leonard's House, in Chicago and with the Department of Mental Health drug abuse program, Rev. Wheeler joined the parish in July of this year.

JULY ALSO MARKED the date construction started on the new church. It is the first of three buildings proposed for a total church complex. According to Rev. Wheeler, "the other two buildings will be added when we outgrow the first and we have enough funds."

The second building will be the main and final church. The third addition will be a parish hall and education wing. Both additions are included in the original plans of architects Harold and Richard Lutz.

Funds for the church were secured from the parish, the archdiocese and a mortgage, says Rev. Wheeler. Approximate cost for the building is between $65,000 and $70,000. The land was purchased 12 years ago.

Teachers' Salaries Hiked

Teachers' salaries will increase at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View next year.

Monday the Dist. 125 school board approved a higher salary scale for the 1970-71 school year.

Starting teachers with the bachelor's degree will receive $7,500 base pay. The current rate is $6,611.

"We hope this will improve our efforts in hiring teachers," explained Stevenson business manager Ed Ellis. "Currently Stevenson is at the bottom of the list in starting salaries among high schools in the suburban area."

He added that "in the upper brackets, we fare better. We can compete well with other high schools."

FIRST YEAR TEACHERS at Stevenson with a master's degree will earn $8,250, as opposed to this year's rate of $7,235.

After 15 years, a teacher with a master's degree will earn $15,280. The current rate is $13,665.

Stevenson teachers work on a 200-day, 10 month schedule.

Ellis said most high school teachers are on a 185-day schedule. "The remaining 15 days are used for research, in-service training, curriculum development and so forth," he said.

The new salary scale was approved after three months of negotiations by a joint teacher-school board committee.

In other action, the board approved a new schedule for "master teachers."

MASTER TEACHERS are Stevenson instructors who are selected by their peers as outstanding. They will receive an additional $600 each year for three years. Instructors selected as master teachers for a second three-year period will receive an additional $800 a year for three years. Those selected master teachers for a third three-year period will receive an added $1,000 for three years.

Stevenson High School serves Lake County, which includes the northern part of Buffalo Grove.

Transit Study Funds Asked

Northwest Municipal Conference communities will be asked to appropriate $2,000 each in 1970 to hire a person or firm to conduct a transportation study.

The action would bring in a total $34,000 if each of the 17-member communities participate.

The decision to request transportation study funds in 1970 municipal budgets was made without a conference quorum Wednesday and will be recommended only to member communities.

Few Mishaps Reported

Streets were icy in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove Thursday morning, but police reported few accidents despite the hazardous driving conditions.

In Chicago, the number of accidents became so great that drivers were asked to report accidents to a police station themselves instead of calling police to the scene.

Buffalo Grove police reported no accidents. In Wheeling there were two minor collisions.

A BUDGET appropriation does not commit a municipality to spend money, but provides for the spending purpose at a board's decision.

The action to hire a transportation study was taken in absence of Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl, the conference's one-man transportation committee. Pahl has stressed that the study should be conducted free to the conference, using donated personnel or retired business executives.

Representatives from six communities limited discussion to the obvious need of transporting people to railroad stations. According to the conference transportation policy adopted last March, the study should embrace a total movement of goods and people, tying in all forms of transportation, including O'Hare Airport.

Between snipes at Pahl for encouraging spending $200 for a defunct transportation study two years ago, Buffalo Grove Village Pres. Don Thompson said he could not ask his board for another transportation contribution unless he states exactly what the study is intended to achieve.

Creek To Move For High School

Salt Creek, on the western edge of the Dist. 214 site for a Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road and Barker Avenue will be moved 50 feet west of its present course to give the district benefit of the western part of the site.

At the Rolling Meadows city council meeting Dec. 9, the aldermen accepted the change in the upper branch of the creek, but directed City Engineer Edgar Fletcher to check on the position of a vehicular bridge over the creek on Dist. 214 property.

With moving the creek, the bridge over the northern branch on Dist. 214 property will be about 100 feet north and 75 feet east of a bridge being constructed by the city over the western branch of Salt Creek across Barker Avenue.

THE BRIDGE on Dist. 214 property also will serve as part of an access road to Georgetown of Willow Bend and will provide a second exit from the apartment complex.

The access road bridge is being built by Arlen Properties, developers of Georgetown of Willow Bend. An access road will run on the southern edge of Dist. 214's site. Willow Bend School, an elementary school being built by Dist. 15, and Georgetown of Willow Bend will be south of the access road.

In a pre-annexation agreement with the City of Rolling Meadows, Arlen Properties agreed to construct the access road bridge on Dist. 214's property. The developer also has agreed to build a footbridge across Salt Creek on the northern end of an artificial lake separating the Dist. 15 property from Georgetown of Willow Bend.

DIST. 15'S PROPERTY is on the corner of Barker and Algonquin Road, Georgetown of Willow Bend is east of it and Dist. 214's site is north along Barker and Central Road.

Neither Dist. 214 or Dist. 15 have begun to build on their sites. Though Barker Avenue will be a major arterial street in Rolling Meadows, construction of the road and the bridge across it will not begin until next year when the city collects its motor fuel tax. A temporary road has been put in to provide access to the Dist. 15 site.

Dist. 214 will have access to the Rolling Meadows High School site from Central Road. Presently, Georgetown of Willow Bend has one exit onto Algonquin Road.

District 59 Selects New School Head

Dist. 59 has selected a new school superintendent although his name will not be released until next month, according to district officials.

After screening over 60 applicants for the job, the school board unanimously agreed on the selection of a candidate to fill that position, Allen Sparks, board president, said yesterday.

"Although details of the appointment cannot be made public until the new superintendent has informed his district of his future plans, it is anticipated that a complete announcement can be made next month," he added.

"We are extremely pleased with the selection and are confident that the broad educational and administrative experience which the new superintendent brings to us will inspire the continuation of the fine education program which has been a tradition in our district."

THE SEARCH for a new superintendent began July 1 following the resignation of Dr. Donald Thomas, past superintendent for 2½ years.

Sparks said he would rather not release any detailed information about the new superintendent at this time, but did say that he was not from the immediate area.

It has not been determined when the superintendent will begin work in the district. "This is something that we can't determine now," Sparks said. "It depends entirely on what the position of his board is on finding a replacement."

However, Sparks added, "It will certainly be no later than July, but we hope it will be much sooner than that."

Until the superintendent officially comes to Dist. 59, Al Waltman, acting superintendent since Thomas' resignation, will remain in administrative charge of district activities.

HELP Goal: Establish Teen Center

A description of the "Outreach" project of the Paintline Township Youth Committee was offered to the Wheeling-Buffalo Grove area HELP (Help Eliminate Local Problems) committee Wednesday.

The HELP committee is seeking to set up a program for area parents and youth aimed at helping them cope with mutual concerns. One of the goals of the HELP Committee is to set up a teen center for local youth, which Paintline has started in its "Outreach" program.

"DON'T JUMP" in too quick. Work on acceptance and on building a sound organization," was the advice offered by Emerson Thomas, supervisor of the Outreach program in Paintline.

He emphasized that youth of the area would have to be involved in running the program if it is to be successful.

The Rev. Bruce Wheeler of Prospect Heights, HELP chairman, said that "We must sell the idea to the kids. This is an area that needs a lot of work."

Don Day, coordinator of educational and social services for the Community School Services program said "They will come out if we talk their language."

The next meeting of the HELP committee is scheduled for Jan. 21 at Wheeling High School.

First Phase Of Study Submitted

Wheeling's Village Mgr. Matthew Golden submitted the first part of his proposed classification and pay study for the village to the trustees Monday, but the board decided to postpone discussion of any part of the plan until the entire study is completed.

Golden said Monday that the classification part of the study had been completed. He explained that it includes tables of organization for each village department with recommended job titles and levels of authority.

Golden said Monday that he would now give the proposed plan to village department heads for comments and suggestions before it is returned to the board with other parts of the study.

Although board members were given copies of the study, copies were not included in the official reports for the meeting. Golden said Tuesday that until department heads have commented on the report, it will not be made public.

THE TRUSTEES discussed possible repercussions which might come from employees finding out about the proposed classification.

Golden pointed out, however, that because a position is upgraded in the study does not necessarily mean that the same person who now holds that position will be promoted.

The trustees referred specifically to a lieutenant's position in the police department and to one post in the public works department.

"We don't want the public or employees to be unhappy or happy with the study at this point," Trustee Ira Bird pointed out. He said that employees should not feel the plan is anything but tentative. "We don't want any employ saying this is my 'God-given' right because the manager recommended it," Bird said.

"THESE ARE THE phases of the moon," Billy LeFebvre, left, a pupil at Feshanville School in Prospect Heights, tells his classmates. During a visit recently to the Adler Planetarium in Chicago, Billy took notes and later gave a presentation to his own and three other classes. In his presentation he drew diagrams showing the lunar and solar eclipses and the phases of the moon. Classmates listening to Billy are Mike Schlegel and Annie Garcia.

Bensenville Man Faces 3 Charges

Larry D. Maehlenkamp, Lot 162A, 7500 Elmhurst Road, Bensenville, was charged with driving on a revoked drivers license, driving while intoxicated and improper lane usage in Wheeling Wednesday evening.

Maehlenkamp was charged by Wheeling police at 6:50 p.m. after he was stopped by Patrolman Billy Ralston on Hintz Road near Glenn Avenue.

Ralston reported that he stopped the car after he observed it swerve across the center line, back into its own lane, off the road onto the shoulder, and back across the center line again.

Police reports indicated that Maehlenkamp's drivers license had been permanently revoked in 1967.

Maehlenkamp was released later Wednesday night on $1,000 bond. A Feb. 2 hearing date for the case in Arlington Heights District Court was set.

House Changes Course

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing itself, yesterday affirmed school desegregation efforts on the Health Education and Welfare Department. On a 216-180 vote it accepted Senate-passed language upsetting an earlier vote to curb the desegregation drive.

Hoffman Bars Lawyer

CHICAGO — Judge Julius Hoffman yesterday refused to admit Stuart Ball, attorney for the "Chicago Conspiracy 7," into court on the grounds that he was a "disgrace to this court." Ball is bearded and long-haired, and Hoffman objected to his manner of dress.

Barry: Bomb North

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Nixon to resume bombing of North Vietnam and to destroy Haiphong harbor and rail lines from China. The former Presidential candidate said there was no other alternative to a "never-ending war."

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

Fund Denial Clarified

A deduction that Palatine was denied federal funds for a transportation center because the Chicago area has no regional transportation plan is erroneous, a planning official said Wednesday.

Andrew Plummer, coordinative planner for the Chicago Area Transportation Study (CATS), stressed the federal government does recognize a Chicago regional transportation plan.

Speaking before the Northwest Municipal Conference, (NWMC) Plummer said Palatine's denial letter from the Department of Transportation (DOT) has been read out of context.

"It (the letter) said there was a transportation plan but these centers are not a part of it," Plummer told six area community representatives.

At the NWMC meeting, it was decided that Northwest Municipal Conference communities will be asked to appropriate $2,000 each in 1970 to hire a person or firm to conduct a transportation study.

The action would bring in a total of $34,000 if each of the 17-member communities participate.

About the NWMC decision, Palatine Village Mgr. said, "I'm glad to see something like this is getting under way."

But he agreed with Plummer, "I don't think it will help the chances of our federal application being approved."

"Even if this study had been started three years ago, it probably wouldn't have helped Palatine receive federal funds for our transportation center and commuter parking lot," he said.

"DOT does believe there is a regional transportation plan, developed by my organization and approved in 1962," Plummer said of the CATS three-volume plan.

"DOT does not say there is not a regional plan. They are saying they doubt if transportation centers are regional in scope," Plummer continued.

The CATS planner indicated Palatine's letter from DOT had been misinterpreted by officials of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC), a land use planning agency.

NIPC called a special Dec. 8 meeting, using the Palatine transportation center request as a peg to discuss a regional travel plan. An ad hoc committee was appointed at the NIPC meeting to meet with DOT officials on planning requirements.

"I'd assume this NIPC ad hoc committee might resolve some questions on the nitty gritty of planning," Plummer told the conference audience. He indicated a transportation center would probably fall under more detailed sub-regional planning than the CATS regional scope.

Plummer said his agency would never get down to the planning scale of a commuter center. He said CATS started planning transportation when there was only the Edens expressway and Old Orchard Shopping Center.

"We used a land use forecast and we were close about predictions where people would be. We had the forerunners of a transportation center in having transfer points. Our plan envisioned all suburban railroads would go to the center city where transfer points would spread people to the city."

Park Ski Trips Start Tuesday

Ski trips throughout the ski season are being sponsored by the Palatine Park District.

The first trip is Dec. 23 to Alpine Valley. Cost of the trip is $6 per person which includes cost of bus transportation and a day's tow ticket. The bus will leave the park district office at 9 a.m. and return by 6 p.m.

The same terms and times will be followed for a trip on Dec. 30 to Alpine Valley.

Six evening trips are planned for Thursday evenings with buses leaving the park district office at 5:45 p.m. and returning by 11:30 p.m.

Fees include bus transportation and tow tickets. A Jan. 8 trip is planned to the Lake Geneva Playboy Club, at $3 per person. On Jan. 15, a trip to Wilmet Mountain is scheduled, at $5.50 per person.

Skiing at Alpine Valley is planned for Jan. 22. Fees are $4.50 and $3 for high school students. Lake Geneva Playboy Club is scheduled for Jan. 29 at a cost of $3 per person.

On Feb. 5, a trip is planned for Wilmet Mountain, $5.50 per person. Last trip is for Alpine Valley on Feb. 12. Fees are $4.50 and $3 for high school students.

A weekend trip is planned for Feb. 20 through 22. The group will go to Indianhead and Powderhorn Mountains located in the upper peninsula of Michigan. Lodging will be at Indianhead Lodge.

Registration fee covers two nights' lodging, two days' tow tickets, two breakfasts and Saturday dinner, and bus transportation.

The group will leave Feb. 20 at 6 p.m. and return Feb. 22 about midnight. All youths under 18 years of age must be accompanied by an adult or adult chaperone. Registrations must be in by Feb. 11.

Registration fee is $75 for adults and $62 for children. Thirty registrations are required.

The park district is also sponsoring a seven day ski tour to Aspen, Colorado. The group will leave March 21 and return March 28. Lodging will be at the Wildwood Lodge in Aspen.

Skiing will be at Snowmass Mountain. Trip includes round trip jet fare and ground transportation from Denver to Aspen, seven nights lodging, daily continental breakfasts, daily lift tickets, insurance and free swimming and sauna.

Room preferences will be given upon request. Registration fee is $258 per person. Itinerary and additional information can be obtained at the park district office. A $50 deposit is required by Feb. 10 to hold a reservation.

Order of Gownsmen

Arnold P. Hayward III, son of Mrs. Robert Flynn of 2708 Canterbury Court, Route 2, Palatine, is a new member of the Order of Gownsmen at the University of the South.

The organization is the traditional student government body whose members wear the academic gown to classes as a badge of honor and a symbol of the order's upholding of the ideals and traditions of Sewanee.

The Order of Gownsmen acts in cooperation with the university administration in matters pertaining to student government, student problems and discipline, and enforcement of the honor code.

"I'M THE SPIRIT of Christmas past." In a holiday program at Cardinal Drive School in Rolling Meadows Wednesday night, students participated in "A Christmas Carol" by Charles Dickens. Ebenezer Scrooge, played by Lisa Ankorn, is awakened by Spirit of Christmas, Past, Susan Wilkerson, is one of three programs. Students also performed Legends of the Madonna and the fifth and sixth grade choir sang songs of Hanukkah.

Housing Group Formed

A permanent coalition of several groups working to obtain low and moderate-income housing in the Northwest suburbs was set up Tuesday by the steering committee of the Ad-Hoc Northwest Committee for Better Housing.

As yet, neither goals nor a plan for organizing the group has been drawn up however.

Members hope the organization will promote communication and cooperation among the various groups working for low and moderate-income housing in the area. They also hope this larger organization will be a stronger force in promoting low and moderate-income housing in the area.

About 45 persons from local human relations committees, churches, women's clubs, social welfare agencies, the League of Women Voters and various other organizations attended the meeting at the First Presbyterian Church in Arlington Heights.

THE GROUP APPROVED a motion by Roberto Munoz of the Illinois Migrant Council to "immediately set up a coalition in the Northwest suburbs to work for housing for low and middle-income families."

As envisioned by the committee, the new group will be an "umbrella" organization.

"We hope to get broadly based representation from existing committees in all communities," said Rudy Hazucha, spokesman for the committee. Hazucha is also a member of the Arlington Heights Human Relations Committee.

James Driver, staff worker for New Communities, Inc., said, "I hope that a far closer and more significant organization can be formed from this. If we get together and pool our resources, we will maximize our efforts in a unifying way."

The next meeting of the group will be held Jan. 14 at the Congregational United Church of Christ in Arlington Heights.

A COMMITTEE of eight persons volunteered to meet before that time to decide how to best organize the coalition.

The committee also will discuss how to insure broadly based representation from all local groups and individuals concerned with low and moderate-income housing. Several groups, such as Norwesco and Neighbors at Work, were not represented at the meeting. Those attending expressed a desire to have persons from these groups become members of the coalition.

The steering committee was formed as a result of a housing conference Dec. 5 in Mount Prospect. Persons attending that conference were asked to join the steering committee.

OK 2-Hour Parking Limit

Shoppers in downtown Palatine should find it easier to park with recent village board approval of an amendment concerning parking meters.

cerning parking meters.

The amendment prohibits a vehicle from occupying a parking space with a two-hour meter for longer than 120 minutes.

The board's action was requested by representatives of the Palatine chamber of commerce who were concerned about "meter stuffing" downtown.

Some employees working in downtown would park on the street during the entire day by putting more money in a meter every two hours, according to chamber members.

"WITH THAT GOING ON, there were only a few spaces left for downtown customers," explained Ken Eriksen, executive director of the chamber.

Meters affected by the amendment include all those on downtown streets, Brockway, Bothwell, Slade, and Greely and a few parking meters in the municipal lot at Brockway and Palatine Road.

Present Concerts

The Palatine High School symphonic band gave two Christmas concerts at Little City and the St. Joseph Home for the Elderly.

At each of the half-hour concerts, the brass choir has performed Leroy Anderson's "Suite of Carols." The fourteen-member brass choir includes Karl Keller, Eric Hartz, Norman Lagerquist, John Cunningham, Jane Ritchie, Hugh Brooks, Dave Braun, Steve Cunningham, John Maulding, Keith One, Karen Pipenburg, Cindy Harris, Diane Shergen, and Fred Hoegler.

LATIN AMERICANS Guillermo Barrio, left, and Carlos Vargas are planning to make the United States their home. They formerly were members of the Latin American Peace Corps and now live in Palatine.

Two Peace Corps 'Students' Here

by TOM JACHIMIEC

Two former members of the Latin American Peace Corps are making their home in the Northwest suburbs.

They are Carlos Vargas, 26, of Costa Rica, and Guillermo Barrio, 30, of Chile. Both men live at 208 Benton in Palatine.

Several months ago Carlos and Guillermo completed a two-year term in the peace corps in the Dominican Republic under a program financed by the Dominican Development Foundation and the Inter-American Bank.

Their job was to work with youths from 13 to 21 years of age in organizing a farm and community development program similar to our 4-H clubs.

The program has been successful, said Guillermo. "The agricultural production has been increased by 50 per cent," he said.

Following the completion of their work with the peace corps, both men came to the United States to live.

They have some difficulty with English but are determined to improve themselves by enrolling in a basic adult education class taught at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights and sponsored by the Illinois Migrant Council.

Guillermo, who attended the University of Concepcion in Chile for two years, wants to become a social worker. He says he first must understand the language in order to get a job.

Carlos is currently employed as a welder and mechanic at Power Tools Inc., Palatine. He attended a vocational college for one year.

Both said they came to the United States because they want to know what it is really like after hearing so much about it for many years.

"I want to know what the reality of the United States is like," said Carlos. "Your manner of thinking, I've heard so much about."

Carlos said it too soon for him to form opinions about the United States.

However, he said he likes the idea that in our country all people have the opportunity to live well. This is not so, he explained, in his country where "even if you work hard in Latin America you cannot rise as high as in the United States."

Guillermo said the United States is completely different from Latin America.

Along with a higher economy in the United States, he said the dollar is "more important than other human beings."

In Latin America, he said it is possible to live without money by relying on friends and relatives. Here, he said he does not think it is possible to live without money.

Guillermo, who studied sociology in college, said "mechanization in the United States has led to de-humanization."

There is no time for meditating and relating with other people," he said. "Here man is a slave of time."

NAW Appeal: 15 Families Need Help

general appeal for help for 15 Spanish American families is being sought by the Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization in Elk Grove Village.

The NAW says the families have been living in substandard housing in Elk Grove Township and need help immediately. Many of them are still living in shacks which have been cited with numerous building code violations by county inspectors earlier this week.

NAW has called a press conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove Township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, at which time an appeal will be made.

Louis Archbold, of NAW, said yesterday he plans to have the families out of the shacks and into motels by Christmas Day. If motel rooms are not available the NAW has indicated it will take the people into their homes.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the motel, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archbold.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1031 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E. Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Touhy Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said. "In case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexis Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Weltman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

But, according to a statement by the building commissioner last Sunday, they need help in finding the housing. Persons with information should call his office at 321-7922.

In another development, a fire Wednesday in the farmhouse where Armando Gomez and his wife and child had been living at 1031 W. Higgins Road, destroyed some of his possessions.

"I don't know why the whole building didn't go up in flames," a NAW member said.

Li Donald Kuhn of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, said the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate.

Study Sticker Cost Drop

Village officials in Palatine will investigate the possibilities of reducing the cost of vehicle stickers to disabled veterans.

Presently, a 1970 village sticker costs $10 or $9 if it's purchased before the first of the year.

The matter of reducing the cost was brought to the attention of village officials by a veteran living in Palatine who said he recently discovered "a little piece of sticky paper would cost him $9."

"The point that I want to make is that everyone is all praise for the veterans and they say thank you so much for everything that we have done, but when it comes down to helping the veteran, it is a completely different story," he wrote.

BUT THE VILLAGE board of trustees were apprehensive about allowing a reduction to all disabled veterans.

"I think we should investigate the terms for which disabled veteran licenses are issued by the state," Village Pres. John Moodie said.

The board agreed that in some cases the vehicle sticker should be offered at a nominal fee.

The Palatine veteran explained, "I am 100 per cent disabled I haven't worked since Jan. 19, 1969 after spending 17 months in Vietnam. It is expensive to live these days, even harder when you can't work at the age of 22."

He continued, "You say you are thankful for the jobs we do away from home, risking our lives for the people back at home. Now you are getting a chance to prove it."

'For Us A Child' To Be Presented

A Christmas Cantata, "For Us A Child Is Born," by Johann Sebastian Bach will be presented at Bethel Lutheran Church Sunday.

The adult choir will sing at the 9:30 and 10:45 a.m. services. This sermon in song will be under the direction of Mrs. Boyd White. Soloists will be Perry Mann, bass, Ann Heinemann, soprano, Lyia Dorwick, contralto.

The Chamber Ensemble will include Joan Dunlop and Betty White, violin, Christel Siedentop and Jean Lindner, recorder, J.C. Pfoutz, flute, Margaret White, cello, Tim Gieber, bass, Mrs. A. Stollus, piano and Nan Stocking, viola.

Tickets Are Available

A few extra tickets are available for the trip to Goodman Children's Theater sponsored by the Palatine Park District.

The play "Rumpelstiltskin" will be performed Sunday. Fee is $2.25 per ticket. A bus will leave the park district office at 1 p.m. with the performance beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Anyone interested should call the park district office.

House Changes Course

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing itself, yesterday affirmed school desegregation efforts on the Health Education and Welfare Department. On a 216-180 vote it accepted Senate-passed language upsetting an earlier vote to curb the desegregation drive.

Hoffman Bars Lawyer

CHICAGO — Judge Julius Hoffman yesterday refused to readmit Stuart Ball, attorney for the "Chicago Conspiracy 7," into court on the grounds that he was a "disgrace to this court." Ball is boarded and long-haired, and Hoffman objected to his manner of dress.

Barry: Bomb North

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Nixon to resume bombing of North Vietnam and to destroy Haiphong harbor and rail lines from China. The former Presidential-candidate said there was no other alternative to a "never-ending war."

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the Interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

Kirchoff Signal Set

A traffic signal will be installed at the intersection of Owl Drive and Kirchoff Road, on the corner of the Rolling Meadows City Hall, by spring if weather conditions are good and materials arrive on schedule, Edgar Fletcher, city engineer, says.

Bids for the traffic-actuated signal have been opened by the Rolling Meadows city council and will be reviewed by the finance committee Monday night. A recommendation will be presented to the city council at its Dec. 23 meeting.

The council has been working to obtain permission for a traffic signal at the intersection since June, 1968.

Rolling Meadows police took several surveys before the council decided to campaign for a signal with the Illinois State Highway Department. The department must approve all requests for traffic signals on state routes. Kirchoff Road is a state road.

In the survey data which the city sent to the highway department more than a year ago the council reported more than 700 pedestrians and 15,300 vehicles were counted crossing the intersection in a 24-hour period.

The traffic count was not significant enough to meet requirements to use the motor fuel tax for financing the Kirchoff Road and Owl Drive intersection. The city had more than this amount credited to its account, but the money can be released only when a project is approved.

Since the city first began seeking permission to install the traffic signal, the city hall addition, which houses the Illinois Juvenile Information File, has been completed.

Aldermen cited use of the intersection as a cross walk for students going to school during the winter and for children going to the pool in the summer as a definite reason for requesting the signal.

The State Highway Department finally approved the request this October. "We had to draw up specifications, and advertise for bids, which has taken time," Fletcher said.

The three bids opened Dec. 9 range from $29,690 to $41,200. Original estimates by the city last year were about $30,000.

"The contractor is ready to start work as soon as the contract is awarded," Fletcher said. The contract will have a 120-day completion clause. "But now with the winter weather, I don't know exactly when the intersection will be done," Fletcher said.

Traffic will not be obstructed while the traffic signal is being installed.

The standard traffic light signal will be equipped with pedestrian instruction signals and will be regulated by a traffic flow counter. No special turn signals will be installed at the intersection.

Creek To Move For High School

Salt Creek, on the western edge of the Dist. 214 site for a Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road and Barker Avenue will be moved 60 feet west of its present course to give the district benefit of the western part of the site.

At the Rolling Meadows city council meeting Dec. 9, the aldermen accepted the change in the upper branch of the creek, but directed City Engineer Edgar Fletcher to check on the position of a vehicular bridge over the creek on Dist. 214 property.

With moving the creek, the bridge over the northern branch on Dist. 214 property will be about 100 feet north and 75 feet east of a bridge being constructed by the city over the western branch of Salt Creek across Barker Avenue.

THE BRIDGE on Dist. 214 property also will serve as part of an access road to Georgetown of Willow Bend and will provide a second exit from the apartment complex.

The access road bridge is being built by Arlen Properties, developers of Georgetown of Willow Bend. An access road will run on the southern edge of Dist. 214's site. Willow Bend School, an elementary school being built by Dist. 15, and Georgetown of Willow Bend will be south of the access road.

In a pre-annexation agreement with the City of Rolling Meadows, Arlen Properties agreed to construct the access road bridge on Dist. 214's property. The developer also has agreed to build a footbridge across Salt Creek on the northern end of an artificial lake separating the Dist. 15 property from Georgetown of Willow Bend.

DIST. 15'S PROPERTY is on the corner of Barker and Algonquin Road, Georgetown of Willow Bend is east of it and Dist. 214's site is north along Barker and Central Road.

Neither Dist. 214 or Dist. 15 have begun to build on their sites. Though Barker Avenue will be a major arterial street in Rolling Meadows, construction of the road and the bridge across it will not begin until next year when the city collects its motor fuel tax. A temporary road has been put in to provide access to the Dist. 15 site.

Dist. 214 will have access to the Rolling Meadows High School site from Central Road. Presently, Georgetown of Willow Bend has one exit onto Algonquin Road.

Order of Gownsmen

Arnold P. Hayward III, son of Mrs. Robert Flynn of 2708 Canterbury Court, Route 2, Palatine, is a new member of the Order of Gownsmen at the University of the South.

The organization is the traditional student government body whose members wear the academic gown to classes as a badge of honor and a symbol of the order's upholding of the ideals and traditions of Sewanee.

The Order of Gownsmen acts in cooperation with the university administration in matters pertaining to student government, student problems and discipline, and enforcement of the honor code.

Housing Group Formed

A permanent coalition of several groups working to obtain low and moderate-income housing in the Northwest suburbs was set up Tuesday by the steering committee of the Ad-Hoc Northwest Committee for Better Housing.

As yet, neither goals nor a plan for organizing the group has been drawn up however.

Members hope the organization will promote communication and cooperation among the various groups working for low and moderate-income housing in the area. They also hope this larger organization will be a stronger force in promoting low and moderate-income housing in the area.

About 45 persons from local human relations committees, churches, women's clubs, social welfare agencies, the League of Women Voters and various other organizations attended the meeting at the First Presbyterian Church in Arlington Heights.

THE GROUP APPROVED a motion by Roberto Munoz of the Illinois Migrant Council to "immediately set up a coalition in the Northwest suburbs to work for housing for low and middle-income families."

As envisioned by the committee, the new group will be an "umbrella" organization.

"We hope to get broadly based representation from existing committees in all communities," said Rudy Hazucha, spokesman for the committee. Hazucha is also a member of the Arlington Heights Human Relations Committee.

James Driver, staff worker for New Communities, Inc., said, "I hope that a far closer and more significant organization can be formed from this. If we get together and pool our resources, we will maximize our efforts in a unifying way."

The next meeting of the group will be held Jan. 14 at the Congregational United Church of Christ in Arlington Heights.

A COMMITTEE of eight persons volunteered to meet before that time to decide how to best organize the coalition.

The committee also will discuss how to insure broadly based representation from all local groups and individuals concerned with low and moderate-income housing. Several groups, such as Norwesco and Neighbors at Work, were not represented at the meeting. Those attending expressed a desire to have persons from these groups become members of the coalition.

The steering committee was formed as a result of a housing conference Dec. 5 in Mount Prospect. Persons attending that conference were asked to join the steering committee.

OK 2-Hour Parking Limit

Shoppers in downtown Palatine should find it easier to park with recent village board approval of an amendment concerning parking meters.

The amendment prohibits a vehicle from occupying a parking space with a two-hour meter for longer than 120 minutes.

The board's action was requested by representatives of the Palatine chamber of commerce who were concerned about "meter stuffing" downtown.

Some employees working in downtown would park on the street during the entire day by putting more money in a meter every two hours, according to chamber members.

"WITH THAT GOING ON, there were only a few spaces left for downtown customers," explained Ken Eriksen, executive director of the chamber.

Meters affected by the amendment include all those on downtown streets, Brockway, Bothwell, Slade, and Greely and a few parking meters in the municipal lot at Brockway and Palatine Road.

Present Concerts

The Palatine High School symphonic band gave two Christmas concerts at Little City and the St. Joseph Home for the Elderly.

At each of the half-hour concerts, the brass choir has performed Leroy Anderson's "Suite of Carols." The fourteen-member brass choir includes Karl Keller, Eric Hartz, Norman Lagerquist, John Cunningham, Jane Ritchie, Hugh Brooks, Dave Braun, Steve Cunningham, John Maulding, Keith One, Karen Pipenburg, Cindy Harris, Diane Shergen, and Fred Hoegler.

LATIN AMERICANS Guillermo Barrio, left, and Carlos Vargas are planning to make the United States their home. They formerly were members of the Latin American Peace Corps and now live in Palatine.

Two Peace Corps 'Students' Here

by TOM JACHIMIEC

Two former members of the Latin American Peace Corps are making their home in the Northwest suburbs.

They are Carlos Vargas, 28, of Costa Rica, and Guillermo Barrio, 30, of Chile. Both men live at 208 Benton in Palatine.

Several months ago Carlos and Guillermo completed a two-year term in the peace corps in the Dominican Republic under a program financed by the Dominican Development Foundation and the Inter-American Bank.

Their job was to work with youths from 13 to 21 years of age in organizing a farm and community development program similar to our 4-H clubs.

The program has been successful, said Guillermo. "The agricultural production has been increased by 50 per cent," he said.

Following the completion of their work with the peace corps, both men came to the United States to live.

They have some difficulty with English but are determined to improve themselves by enrolling in a basic adult education class taught at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights and sponsored by the Illinois Migrant Council.

Guillermo, who attended the University of Concepcion in Chile for two years, wants to become a social worker. He says he first must understand the language in order to get a job.

Carlos is currently employed as a welder and mechanic at Power Tools Inc., Palatine. He attended a vocational college for one year.

Both said they came to the United States because they want to know what it is really like after hearing so much about it for many years.

"I want to know what the reality of the United States is like," said Carlos. "Your manner of thinking, I've heard so much about."

Carlos said it too soon for him to form opinions about the United States.

However, he said he likes the idea that in our country all people have the opportunity to live well. This is not so, he explained, in his country where "even if you work hard in Latin America you cannot rise as high as in the United States."

Guillermo said the United States is completely different from Latin America.

Along with a higher economy in the United States, he said the dollar is "more important than other human beings."

In Latin America, he said it is possible to live without money by relying on friends and relatives. Here, he said he does not think it is possible to live without money.

Guillermo, who studied sociology in college, said "mechanization in the United States has led to de-humanization."

There is no time for meditating and relating with other people," he said. "Here man is a slave of time."

NAW Appeal: 15 Families Need Help

general appeal for help for 15 Spanish American families is being sought by the Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization in Elk Grove Village.

The NAW says the families have been living in substandard housing in Elk Grove Township and need help immediately. Many of them are still living in shacks which have been cited with numerous building code violations by county inspectors earlier this week.

NAW has called a press conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove Township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, at which time an appeal will be made.

Louis Archbold, of NAW, said yesterday he plans to have the families out of the shacks and into motels by Christmas Day. If motel rooms are not available the NAW has indicated it will take the people into their homes.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the motel, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archbold.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1031 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E. Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Touhy Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said. "In case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexis Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Wellman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

But, according to a statement by the building commissioner last Sunday, they need help in finding the housing. Persons

Study Sticker Cost Drop

Village officials in Palatine will investigate the possibilities of reducing the cost of vehicle stickers to disabled veterans.

Presently, a 1970 village sticker costs $10 or $9 if it's purchased before the first of the year.

The matter of reducing the cost was brought to the attention of village officials by a veteran living in Palatine who said he recently discovered "a little piece of sticky paper would cost him $9."

"The point that I want to make is that everyone is all praise for the veterans and they say thank you so much for everything that we have done, but when it comes down to helping the veteran, it is a completely different story," he wrote.

BUT THE VILLAGE board of trustees were apprehensive about allowing a reduction to all disabled veterans.

"I think we should investigate the terms for which disabled veteran licenses are issued by the state," Village Pres. John Moodle said.

The board agreed that in some cases the vehicle sticker should be offered at a nominal fee.

The Palatine veteran explained, "I am 100 per cent disabled. I haven't worked since Jan. 19, 1969 after spending 17 months in Vietnam. It is expensive to live these days, even harder when you can't work at the age of 22."

He continued, "You say you are thankful for the jobs we do away from home, risking our lives for the people back at home. Now you are getting a chance to prove it."

with information should call his office at 321-7922.

In another development, a fire Wednesday in the farmhouse where Armando Gomez and his wife and child had been living at 1031 W. Higgins Road, destroyed some of his possessions.

"I don't know why the whole building didn't go up in flames," a NAW member said.

Lt. Donald Kuhn of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, said the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate.

Two former members of the Latin American Peace Corps are making their home in the Northwest suburbs.

One Case and 3-3 Deadlock

It was an uneventful evening last night as the Mount Prospect Board of Appeals failed to come up with a decisive vote on the only case heard during the meeting.

Robert W. Starck, a realtor, addressed the board for an off-premises parking variance for an office building under construction at 209 S. Main St.

Starck received a variance last year to build the building under the restriction that the structure not cover more than 2,800 square feet of the property and that he supply one parking space for each 270 square feet of retail space in the building.

THE PROPOSED BUILDING would cover 2,468 square feet of ground area and be two stories high.

After lengthy deliberations, the board decided the variance would be to allow Starck a reduction in parking from 17 spaces necessary under the ordinance to 14 spaces which he said he could supply.

The final vote was deadlocked at 3 to 3 and the case now goes to the Board of Trustees for future referral to the building committee.

Two other cases on the agenda were not heard because the petitioners failed to show up. The two cases were a proposed addition to a medical and dental building

New Reader Plan

A new research operation, Central Serials Service, is being utilized by the Mount Prospect Public Library.

The program was initiated by the North Suburban Library System, a library cooperative located in Morton Grove which serves 28 member libraries in the Northwest suburbs.

Patrons wishing to use back issues of magazines may forward requests to a centralized pool of microfilm housed in the Morton Grove Public Library. A copying machine then prints an enlarged image on standard paper and the requested article is then mailed to the patron.

IF THE CENTRAL Serials Service does not own a title that is requested, it refers the request to a network of reference and research centers throughout the state.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the motel, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archbold.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1031 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E. Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Tooty Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said. "In case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families' needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexius Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Wellman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

But, according to a statement by the building commissioner last Sunday, they need help in finding the housing. Persons with information should call his office at 321-7922.

In another development, a fire Wednesday in the farmhouse where Armando Gomez and his wife and child had been living at 1031 W. Higgins Road, destroyed some of his possessions.

"I don't know why the whole building didn't go up in flames," a NAW member said.

L. Donald Kuhn of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, said the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate.

District 59 Selects New School Head

Dist. 59 has selected a new school superintendent although his name will not be released until next month, according to district officials.

After screening over 60 applicants for the job, the school board unanimously agreed on the selection of a candidate to fill that position, Allen Sparks, board president, said yesterday.

"Although details of the appointment cannot be made public until the new superintendent has informed his district of his future plans, it is anticipated that a complete announcement can be made next month, he added.

"We are extremely pleased with the selection and are confident that the broad educational and administrative experience which the new superintendent brings to us will inspire the continuation of the fine education program which has been a tradition in our district."

THE SEARCH FOR a new superintendent began July 1 following the resignation of Dr. Donald Thomas, past superintendent for 2½ years.

Sparks said he would rather not release any detailed information about the new superintendent at this time, but did say that he was not from the immediate area.

It has not been determined when the superintendent will begin work in the district. "This is something that we can't determine now," Sparks said. "It depends entirely on what the position of his board is on finding a replacement."

However, Sparks added, "It will certainly be no later than July, but we hope it will be much sooner than that."

Until the superintendent officially comes to Dist. 59, Al Waltman, acting superintendent since Thomas' resignation, will remain in administrative charge of district activities.

Dist. 59 Asks Ill. Tax Share

Dist. 59 is seeking a share of the state income tax revenue being returned to municipalities. So far, it has been unsuccessful.

According to Al Waltman, acting superintendent, only one of the four district communities have been approached, but he will be contacting the others.

The law states that one-twelfth of the state income tax revenue be distributed to local governments and that it be used "solely for the general welfare of the people . . . including financial assistance to school districts."

WALTMAN SAID that the district will not be receiving any of the Des Plaines' rebate share since the village has designated that it will all go towards financial assistance to the police department.

He said he will be in contact with the village managers of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Elk Grove Village to see if there is any possibility of receiving a share of their rebates.

Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president said that he has not been asked by the school district for funds. He added, however, that plans for the money will not be included in the budget until after Jan. 1.

Dist. 59 has 10 of its 29 schools in Elk Grove Village. There is no other school district in the village.

MOUNT PROSPECT, which has five schools in Dist. 59, will receive $170,000 this year for its share of the state tax but has plans to use the money for the benefit of the whole village, according to Virgil Barnett, village manager.

No District 59 Cuts This Year

Dist. 59 budget cuts will not be effective until after the 1969-70 school year according to Al Waltman, acting superintendent.

Due to the Nov. 22 referendum loss, approximately $1,600,000 must be cut from the tentative 1970-71 budget, according to the school board.

A comment made by Board Member Harold Harvey at the Dec. 1 board meeting, preceded Waltman's statement yesterday.

Harvey said that in his opinion it would be easier on the district if budget cutting was spread over three semesters, beginning this school year, rather than the two semesters next school year.

Waltman said that as far as he knew, no one but Harvey had indicated that that idea in budget cutting would be used. "I haven't recommended a cut over three semesters to the board at all."

The question arose at a budget committee meeting.

Waltman explained that the purpose of the meeting was not to begin making plans for budget cuts, but to review the present budget.

"We have a very tight budget this year and have to constantly make sure it's OK," he said. "This year I think the budget is in good shape," he added.

The procedure for revising next year's budget is apparently long and involved.

"There is no big press for time," Waltman said. "I would rather take a lot of time and explore many alternatives."

He explained that action in budget cutting was not begun immediately to reassure the people that belt-tightening wouldn't take place this year.

"Many people were upset at the loss of the referendum and thought that we'd take it out on them," he said.

Months of planning went into the original tentative budget for the 1970-71 school year according to Richard Hess, budget committee chairman. At the time the tentative budget was presented, the board said that it had been restricted as much as possible while still retaining the quality education that the district has been providing.

Now the budget committee, board, and administrators must begin again.

Waltman said that the first thing to do is to talk to people in the district and get their ideas. He said that he has begun this already. A principal's meeting scheduled Thursday was another phase of this operation.

He added that Louis Audi, finance director, has worked out a new revenue section of the budget which will be utilized in determining budget cuts.

A survey to discover what district parents and taxpayers want was suggested by the communications committee last week. A request that the survey be formed and distributed was directed to the administration.

Thomas Warden, newly appointed administrative assistant, has been directed by Waltman to analyze information from the survey for use in budget cutting.

In reference to budget cutting Waltman said, "I don't know how we can do it, but we'll have to."

Collecting Trash A 'No Thanks' Job

by MURRAY DUBIN

The statues of Joseph and Mary didn't notice the three visiting men in Berkeley Square. No shining star lit their way and no angels heralded their presence.

Truck 56 crept along unnoticed on Hintz Road at 7 a.m. Wednesday morning. The truck and its three passengers would bring nothing into the Arlington Heights subdivision.

They would only take its garbage. The three employees of the Laseke Disposal Co., began their job of picking up a little after seven.

Rick Traub, the 21-year-old driver of the truck, told me that Berkeley Square has more garbage than anywhere else in Arlington Heights. While we were talking, Bob and Nick were hustling to the garages where cans awaited them.

SOME HOMES didn't have their cans out.

There have been a lot of complaints about the garbage pickup in Berkeley Square. Rick and Bob had a few of their own.

"In the summer, people fill plastic bags as big as I am with grass and they expect us to carry them without breaking the bag," Rick said.

"I swear they all cut their grass on the same day," he added.

Bob Stewart, who lives in Streamwood, complained of some people who have six or seven cans outside their garage.

RICK AND BOB agreed that an excess of cans slows them down. Rick suggested, "I'd like to see a three-can limit."

"The worst times are Christmas and Halloween — those damn pumpkins get pretty heavy," Rick admitted.

No one greeted the gorgemen except one sheepish looking woman who clutched at her housecoat as she opened the garage door. One businessman emptied his own cans into the truck and smiled embarrassedly as he put them back into the trunk of his Cadillac and drove off.

Dressed in Army fatigue shirts and Army caps, Rick and Bob moved too fast to get cold. Bob, who is 30 and has a five-year-old daughter, said, "One thing you don't have to worry about on this job is getting cold."

Rick and Bob have been working the same truck together for two months and Bob was proud of the job they do.

"Me and Rick can do this whole area in four or five hours."

IT WAS THE FIRST day for Nick in Berkeley Square and with his cheeks getting redder by the minute, he quietly emptied garbage cans, garbage bags, beer cans and an old speaker into his large plastic can, hoisted it to his shoulder and hurriedly walked to the truck's waiting mouth.

That gaping mouth had an odor that the green phantom couldn't help. As its food was swallowed, the entire truck shook, the stench spread and you wondered if a shower would help.

Why would anyone want to be a gorgeman?

It pays $1.24 for drivers and $4.05 for helpers. "I like hard work," said Bob. "I'm in the best shape ever and you ought to see my back."

"I GOTTA KEEP movin'. I get nervous when I'm just sittin' around."

"This ain't so tough anyway. I'll be doin' this kind of work 'till I kick."

Rick, who's wife is pregnant, goes to Harper Junior College at night.

"I want to be a CPA. I always have been good with figures and I keep thinking of this one guy who's been doin' this for 17 years."

"He's old before his time. Besides, I won't always be this strong either."

Nick said he had done work like this before and enjoyed working out of doors.

WEDNESDAY'S LOAD is twice as big as Saturday's and the truck was filled after three streets had been completed. Rick drove to the landfill and then truck 56 rested while its riders ate lunch.

By 11:15 they were back on the job. No one had noted their absence and no one greeted them on their return. A little boy pressed his nose to the window, past the chugging chew-it-all-up machine and Rick cursed at the child.

The only thing that showed they were there were empty garbage cans. Cans with lids back on.

"AREN'T WE DONE YET?" Rick Traub and Staff Writer Murray Dubin unload garbage in Berkeley Square. Rick complained of people who overflow their cans so much that he can't lift them. A typical Wednesday in Berkeley Square will fill the truck nearly three times. "Berkeley Square has more garbage than anywhere else in Arlington Heights," Rick insists. Rick lives in Arlington Heights and another Laseke truck collects his garbage. "I usually get good service, but if I didn't, I'd bring it all in to work."

Child-Psychologist Role Told

by BETSY BROOKER

"When a child exhibits adjustment problems in the classroom, it is not necessarily a reflection on the teacher," according to River Trails School Dist. 26 psychologist Dan Koren.

"We are here to identify the problems and find a solution," Koren told the Dist. 26 school board Tuesday night in a presentation explaining his activities and those of psychologist Rodney Marco.

Koren and Marco use a system under which teachers refer students to them that have been causing trouble in class. With the student goes a written description of the student's behavior.

According to James Retzlaff, assistant school superintendent, teachers are using the system much more this year than last year. "We have had 102 referrals already this year, while we had only 125 all of last year."

The child who is a problem can be a slow learner or a gifted student; an aggressive child or a withdrawn one.

"We had one case of the first type," said Koren, "with a boy in first grade who was reading at a sixth grade level. The teacher was not equipped to deal with him and the rest of the class so we moved him to a second grade reading class."

"We did not move him any higher up because we didn't want to affect his social maturation."

"THE POOR ACHIEVER usually has problems with reading, although we had some cases with math and spelling," said

Koren. "In the first of the year our greatest difficulty in emotional problems is with the aggressive child. But by the middle of the year, the teachers are able to handle them and we look toward the withdrawn child. The quiet child is actually harder to help than the aggressive child."

"Occasionally, we find a child who is neurotic, or living in a fantasy world. By the time the children reach sixth and seventh grade, the problem is likely to be more severe, and we find a few cases of psychotic children. In cases where we find neurosis or psychosis, we refer the children to resources in the community such as psychiatric centers."

"Once we identify the problem," said Marco, "it helps the teacher to accept the child and it helps the parents to look at the problem more objectively. Most parents prefer to overlook the problem or not admit it exists."

How do the psychologists identify the problem? The first step is a battery of testing according to Koren. This includes tests that measure I.Q., perceptive ability, personality, and achievement.

The next step, diagnosis, is more important. The psychologists try to determine what can be done to alleviate the problem.

This process includes conferences with the parents, teacher, principal and whoever else is in close contact with the child. Occasionally the child is placed in special education courses or he might be helped without being moved.

TO BETTER ILLUSTRATE the system,

Marco told a story about a boy he had worked with who had an emotional problem. "In the teacher's referral, she said the child couldn't listen for a long length of time, and was nervous. In investigating his records, I discovered the boy had also exhibited a gradual deterioration in his school work. While he had made B's and C's in the lower grades, he was now making D's and F's."

"Testing showed the boy's I.Q. had decreased 12 to 15 points, from high average to below average. During the testing he trembled and his speech was halting, showing depression and anxiety. In his personality test, he revealed he felt rejected by his family."

"In an interview with his parents, they reported he was moody, couldn't eat with the family, and couldn't communicate with them."

"For 15 to 20 minutes before the boy left for school, he beat his hands on a table, an action he also used when he was upset. Vomiting and stomach pains also accompanied his feelings of anxiety."

"The problem in this case was that the parents had waited for eight or nine years before seeking help," said Marco. "They thought the boy would grow out of it."

"We sent the parents and the boy to a clinic for family counseling. The psychiatrist's report showed the boy's tensions reflected the situation at home. Both his parents had ulcers, and frequently quarreled. With extensive psychotherapy, the child and the family might be helped."

Anticipating the future, Koren urged in-service training for the teachers so that they can administer some of the services of the psychologist. He also suggested hiring residents from the community to come into the school and work with an individual child on a one-to-one basis.

Creek To Move For High School

Salt Creek, on the western edge of the Dist. 214 site for a Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road and Barker Avenue will be moved 50 feet west of its present course to give the district benefit of the western part of the site.

At the Rolling Meadows city council meeting Dec. 9, the aldermen accepted the change in the upper branch of the creek, but directed City Engineer Edgar Fletcher to check on the position of a vehicular bridge over the creek on Dist. 214 property.

With moving the creek, the bridge over the northern branch on Dist. 214 property will be about 100 feet north and 75 feet east of a bridge being constructed by the city over the western branch of Salt Creek across Barker Avenue.

THE BRIDGE on Dist. 214 property also will serve as part of an access road to Georgetown of Willow Bend and will provide a second exit from the apartment complex.

The access road bridge is being built by Arlen Properties, developers of Georgetown of Willow Bend. An access road will run on the southern edge of Dist. 214's site. Willow Bend School, an elementary school being built by Dist. 15, and Georgetown of Willow Bend will be south of the access road.

In a pre-annexation agreement with the City of Rolling Meadows, Arlen Properties agreed to construct the access road bridge on Dist. 214's property. The developer also has agreed to build a footbridge across Salt Creek on the northern end of an artificial lake separating the Dist. 15 property from Georgetown of Willow Bend.

DIST. 15'S PROPERTY is on the corner of Barker and Algonquin Road, Georgetown of Willow Bend is east of it and Dist. 214's site is north along Barker and Central Road.

Neither Dist. 214 or Dist. 15 have begun to build on their sites. Though Barker Avenue will be a major arterial street in Rolling Meadows, construction of the road and the bridge across it will not begin until next year when the city collects its motor fuel tax. A temporary road has been put in to provide access to the Dist. 15 site.

Dist. 214 will have access to the Rolling Meadows High School site from Central Road. Presently, Georgetown of Willow Bend has one exit onto Algonquin Road.

Study Sticker Cost Drop

Village officials in Palatine will investigate the possibilities of reducing the cost of vehicle stickers to disabled veterans.

Presently, a 1970 village sticker costs $10 or $9 if it's purchased before the first of the year.

The matter of reducing the cost was brought to the attention of village officials by a veteran living in Palatine who said he recently discovered "a little piece of sticky paper would cost him $9."

"The point that I want to make is that everyone is all praise for the veterans and they say thank you so much for everything that we have done, but when it comes down to helping the veteran, it is a completely different story," he wrote.

BUT THE VILLAGE board of trustees were apprehensive about allowing a reduction to all disabled veterans.

"I think we should investigate the terms for which disabled veteran licenses are issued by the state," Village Pres. John Moodle said.

The board agreed that in some cases the vehicle sticker should be offered at a nominal fee.

The Palatine veteran explained, "I am 100 per cent disabled. I haven't worked since Jan. 19, 1969 after spending 17 months in Vietnam. It is expensive to live these days, even harder when you can't work at the age of 22."

He continued, "You say you are thankful for the jobs we do away from home, risking our lives for the people back at home. Now you are getting a chance to prove it."

Village To Use Bank Help

The computer data service division at the Mount Prospect State Bank will be used by the Village of Mount Prospect next year to keep its utility accounts, bills and receipts in order.

The computer will do all the utility billing, approximately 3,000 statements monthly, as well as all the receipts at a cost of $390 a month. The job is now being done by village employees without the help of any computer or billing machine.

"It was necessary to subscribe to a computer service because we just can't handle the job under the present circumstances. Our billing machine is broken, and the cost of replacing or repairing the equipment is out of the question now," Village Mgr. Virgil Barnett said.

"WE WOULD NEED to spend about $15,000 to replace the machine or spend $2,800 to repair it, plus hire an additional person to help with the billing. At this rate, the village will save almost $5,000 a year by using the computer service," Barnett said.

The computer service will cost about $4,400 a year, roughly 13 cents per bill. In addition to the financial savings, Barnett said the time factor was very important. At present village employees spend between six and seven days preparing 3,000 bills each month. The computer can do the job in about five hours.

"The computer service will relieve the department of a great burden, especially since we've purchased Fairview Gardens and Citizens' Utilities and we have more bills and accounts to handle."

"I THINK subscribing to the computer service is an important step for the village because we're beginning to modernize some of our operations. I'm satisfied because the village should be moving in this direction. We're becoming a sophisticated community and we should begin doing some of these things in a sophisticated way," Barnett said.

"Perhaps computer services can be extended in the future to include the village payroll as well as accounting."

Barnett expects the next six weeks will be spent in programming the computer with all the utility information. Computer service is expected to be in operation some time in late January.

Bad Check Opens Homuth Mystery

A sales clerk at Kay Campbell's in the Randhurst Shopping Center told Mount Prospect police Monday that the First National Bank of Highland Park returned a bad check for $40 which she received from a customer in November.

The clerk told police a Mrs. Arlene M. Homuth of Highland Park used a temporary Ill. driver's license and Texaco gas credit card for identification when she accepted the check. Mrs. Homuth reportedly told the clerk she had just moved to Highland Park from Palm Springs, Calif., police said.

Following an investigation by the police department, the suspect's alleged husband, Elmer Homuth, made application for a joint checking account with his wife at the First National Bank of Highland Park in October, according to a spokesman for the bank.

THE BANK CLOSED the account Nov. 12 after checks were received in excess of the deposits on hand, police said.

After further investigation by the department, police learned that the Texaco gas credit card used by Mrs. Homuth was reported stolen from a gas station in Fond du Lac, Wis. The card was issued to Elmer Homuth, Box 1083, of Fond du Lac and has been used extensively in the Chicago area, according to a security agent for Texaco.

The suspect, allegedly Mrs. Homuth, is reportedly driving a stolen 1969 Pontiac from Morton Grove with California license plates, according to police. The suspect is believed to be accompanied by two males about 25 years old, police said.

Stocky Man Robs Cleaners, Hunted

A young man robbed the One-Hour Martinizing Cleaners at 1010 S. Elmhurst Road of an undetermined amount of money late Wednesday afternoon, Mount Prospect police said.

The man reportedly handed the store clerk a white business envelope with the instruction, "Give me all your money and bills and no one will get hurt," police said.

THE CLERK FILLED the envelope with an undetermined amount of cash, and the man fled the store. No one was injured in the incident, according to police.

The clerk described the man as 5 feet 5 inches tall, stocky build with blondish brown hair, police said.

Young Democrats To Hear Two Speakers

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman and Paul Shanyfeldt, a Democratic candidate for the state senate race next year, will be guest speakers at a meeting of the Elk Grove Township Young Democrats Dec. 28.

Barry Christian, president, announced that the meeting is open to all high school and college students from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Elk Grove High School cafeteria.

A dance, featuring the Comm' Generation, will be held from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Admission is 50 cents.

'For Us A Child' To Be Presented

A Christmas Cantata, "For Us A Child Is Born," by Johann Sebastian Bach will be presented at Bethel Lutheran Church Sunday.

The adult choir will sing at the 9:30 and 10:45 a.m. services. This sermon in song will be under the direction of Mrs. Boyd White. Soloists will be Perry Mann, bass, Ann Heinemann, soprano, Lyla Dorwick, contralto.

The Chamber Ensemble will include Joan Dunlop and Betty White, violin, Christe Siedentop and Jean Lindner, recorder, J.C. Pfouts, flute, Margaret White, cello, Tim Gibler, bass, Mrs. A. Stollfus, piano and Nan Stocking, viola.

Christmas Caroling Concerts At Center

The Commonwealth Edison Chorallers and the Latter Day Saints Chorus will present the two closing Christmas Caroling Concerts at Randhurst Shopping Center this week.

Commonwealth Edison's 27 member chorus will perform on the mall Dec. 22 at 7 p.m. and the Latter Day Saints 40-member chorus will present the final concert at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Christmas Eve.

House Changes Course

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing itself, yesterday affirmed school desegregation efforts on the Health Education and Welfare Department. On a 218-180 vote it accepted Senate-passed language upsetting an earlier vote to curb the desegregation drive.

Hoffman Bars Lawyer

CHICAGO — Judge Julius Hoffman yesterday refused to readmit Stuart Ball, attorney for the "Chicago Conspiracy 7," into court on the grounds that he was a "disgrace to this court." Ball is bearded and long-haired, and Hoffman objected to his manner of dress.

Barry: Bomb North

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Nixon to resume bombing of North Vietnam and to destroy Haiphong harbor and rail lines from China. The former Presidential candidate said there was no other alternative to a "never-ending war."

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

LATIN AMERICANS Guillermo Barrio, left, and Carlos Vargas are planning to make the United States their home. They formerly were members of the Latin American Peace Corps and now live in Palatine.

Two Peace Corps 'Students' Here

by TOM JACHIMIEC

Two former members of the Latin American Peace Corps are making their home in the Northwest suburbs.

They are Carlos Vargas, 26, of Costa Rica, and Guillermo Barrio, 30, of Chile. Both men live at 208 Benton in Palatine.

Several months ago Carlos and Guillermo completed a two-year term in the peace corps in the Dominican Republic under a program financed by the Dominican Development Foundation and the Inter-American Bank.

Their job was to work with youths from 13 to 21 years of age in organizing a farm and community development program similar to our 4-H clubs.

The program has been successful, said Guillermo. "The agricultural production has been increased by 50 per cent," he said.

Following the completion of their work with the peace corps, both men came to the United States to live.

They have some difficulty with English but are determined to improve themselves by enrolling in a basic adult education class taught at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights and sponsored by the Illinois Migrant Council.

Guillermo, who attended the University of Concepcion in Chile for two years, wants to become a social worker. He says he first must understand the language in order to get a job.

Carlos is currently employed as a welder and mechanic at Power Tools Inc., Palatine. He attended a vocational college for one year.

Both said they came to the United States because they want to know what it is really like after hearing so much about it for many years.

"I want to know what the reality of the United States is like," said Carlos. "Your manner of thinking, I've heard so much about."

Carlos said it too soon for him to form opinions about the United States.

However, he said he likes the idea that in our country all people have the opportunity to live well. This is not so, he explained, in his country where "even if you work hard in Latin America you cannot rise as high as in the United States."

Guillermo said the United States is completely different from Latin America.

Along with a higher economy in the United States, he said the dollar is "more important than other human beings."

In Latin America, he said it is possible to live without money by relying on friends and relatives. Here, he said he does not think it is possible to live without money.

Guillermo, who studied sociology in college, said "mechanization in the United States has led to dehumanization."

There is no time for meditating and relating with other people," he said. "Here man is a slave of time."

One Case and 3-3 Deadlock

It was an uneventful evening last night as the Mount Prospect Board of Appeals failed to come up with a decisive vote on the only case heard during the meeting.

Robert W. Starck, a realtor, addressed the board for an off-premises parking variance for an office building under construction at 209 S. Main St.

Starck received a variance last year to build the building under the restriction that the structure not cover more than 2,800 square feet of the property and that he supply one parking space for each 270 square feet of retail space in the building.

THE PROPOSED BUILDING would cover 2,468 square feet of ground area and be two stories high.

After lengthy deliberations, the board decided the variance would be to allow Starck a reduction in parking from 17 spaces necessary under the ordinance to 14 spaces which he said he could supply.

The final vote was deadlocked at 3 to 3 and the case now goes to the Board of Trustees for future referral to the building committee.

Two other cases on the agenda were not heard because the petitioners failed to show up. The two cases were a proposed addition to a medical and dental building at 405 W. Prospect Rd., and a sign variance for the Northwest Electrical Company at 30 S. Main St.

New Reader Plan

A new research operation, Central Serials Service, is being utilized by the Mount Prospect Public Library.

The program was initiated by the North Suburban Library System, a library cooperative located in Morton Grove which serves 23 member libraries in the Northwest suburbs.

Patrons wishing to use back issues of magazines may forward requests to a centralized pool of microfiche housed in the Morton Grove Public Library. A copying machine then prints an enlarged image on standard paper and the requested article is then mailed to the patron.

IF THE CENTRAL Serials Service does not own a title that is requested, it refers the request to a network of reference and research centers throughout the state.

NAW: 15 Families Urgently Need Aid

A general appeal for help for 15 Spanish American families is being sought by the Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization in Elk Grove Village.

The NAW says the families have been living in substandard housing in Elk Grove Township and need help immediately. Many of them are still living in shacks which have been cited with numerous building code violations by county inspectors earlier this week.

NAW has called a press conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove Township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, at which time an appeal will be made.

Louis Archibald, of NAW, said yesterday he plans to have the families out of the shacks and into motels by Christmas Day. If motel rooms are not available the NAW has indicated it will take the people into their homes.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the motel, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archibald.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1033 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E. Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Touhy Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said "in case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families' needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexius Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Wellman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

But, according to a statement by the building commissioner last Sunday, they need help in finding the housing. Persons with information should call his office at 321-7922.

In another development, a fire Wednesday in the farmhouse where Armando Gomez and his wife and child had been living at 1031 W. Higgins Road, destroyed some of his possessions.

"I don't know why the whole building didn't go up in flames," a NAW member said.

Lt. Donald Kuhn of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, said the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate.

District 59 Selects New School Head

Dist. 59 has selected a new school superintendent although his name will not be released until next month, according to district officials.

After screening over 60 applicants for the job, the school board unanimously agreed on the selection of a candidate to fill that position, Allen Sparks, board president, said yesterday.

"Although details of the appointment cannot be made public until the new superintendent has informed his district of his future plans, it is anticipated that a complete announcement can be made next month, he added.

"We are extremely pleased with the selection and are confident that the broad educational and administrative experience which the new superintendent brings to us will inspire the continuation of the fine education program which has been a tradition in our district."

THE SEARCH for a new superintendent began July 1 following the resignation of Dr. Donald Thomas, past superintendent for 2 1/2 years.

Sparks said he would rather not release any detailed information about the new superintendent at this time, but did say that he was not from the immediate area.

It has not been determined when the superintendent will begin work in the district. "This is something that we can't determine now," Sparks said "It depends entirely on what the position of his board is on finding a replacement."

However, Sparks added, "It will certainly be no later than July, but we hope it will be much sooner than that."

Until the superintendent officially comes to Dist. 59, Al Waltman, acting superintendent since Thomas' resignation, will remain in administrative charge of district activities.

Dist. 59 Asks Ill. Tax Share

Dist. 59 is seeking a share of the state income tax revenue being returned to municipalities. So far, it has been unsuccessful.

According to Al Waltman, acting superintendent, only one of the four district communities have been approached, but he will be contacting the others.

The law states that one-twelfth of the state income tax revenue be distributed to local governments and that it be used "solely for the general welfare of the people ... including financial assistance to school districts."

WALTMAN SAID that the district will not be receiving any of the Des Plaines' rebate share since the village has designated that it will go towards financial assistance to the police department.

He said he will be in contact with the village managers of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Elk Grove Village to see if there is any possibility of receiving a share of their rebates.

Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president said that he has not been asked by the school district for funds. He added, however, that plans for the money will not be included in the budget until after Jan. 1.

Dist. 59 has 10 of its 20 schools in Elk Grove Village. There is no other school district in the village.

MOUNT PROSPECT, which has five schools in Dist. 59, will receive $170,000 this year for its share of the state tax but has plans to use the money for the benefit of the whole village, according to Virgil Barnett, village manager.

No District 59 Cuts This Year

Dist. 59 budget cuts will not be effective until after the 1969-70 school year according to Al Waltman, acting superintendent.

Due to the Nov. 22 referendum loss, approximately $1,600,000 must be cut from the tentative 1970-71 budget, according to the school board.

A comment made by Board Member Harold Harvey at the Dec. 1 board meeting, preceded Waltman's statement yesterday.

Harvey said that in his opinion it would be easier on the district if budget cutting was spread over three semesters, beginning this school year, rather than the two semesters next school year.

Waltman said that as far as he knew, no one but Harvey had indicated that that idea in budget cutting would be used. "I haven't recommended a cut over three semesters to the board at all."

The question arose at a budget committee meeting.

Waltman explained that the purpose of the meeting was not to begin making plans for budget cuts, but to review the present budget.

"We have a very tight budget this year and have to constantly make sure it's OK," he said. "This year I think the budget is in good shape," he added.

The procedure for revising next year's budget is apparently long and involved.

"There is no big press for time," Waltman said. "I would rather take a lot of time and explore many alternatives."

He explained that action in budget cutting was not begun immediately to reassure the people that belt-tightening wouldn't take place this year.

"Many people were upset at the loss of the referendum and thought that we'd take it out on them," he said.

Months of planning went into the original tentative budget for the 1970-71 school year according to Richard Hess, budget committee chairman. At the time the tentative budget was presented, the board said that it had been restricted as much as possible while still retaining the quality education that the district has been providing.

Now the budget committee, board, and administrators must begin again.

Waltman said that the first thing to do is to talk to people in the district and get their ideas. He said that he has begun this already. A principal's meeting scheduled Thursday was another phase of this operation.

He added that Louis Audi, finance director, has worked out a new revenue section of the budget which will be utilized in determining budget cuts.

A survey to discover what district parents and taxpayers want was suggested by the communications committee last week. A request that the survey be formed and distributed was directed to the administration.

Thomas Warden, newly appointed administrative assistant, has been directed by Waltman to analyze information from the survey for use in budget cutting.

In reference to budget cutting Waltman said, "I don't know how we can do it, but we'll have to."

Collecting Trash A 'No Thanks' Job

by MURRAY DUBIN

The statues of Joseph and Mary didn't notice the three visiting men in Berkley Square. No shining star lit their way and no angels heralded their presence.

Truck 56 crept along unnoticed on Hintz Road at 7 a.m. Wednesday morning. The truck and its three passengers would bring nothing into the Arlington Heights subdivision.

They would only take its garbage.

The three employees of the Laseke Disposal Co., began their job of picking up a little after seven.

Rick Traub, the 21-year-old driver of the truck, told me that Berkley Square has more garbage than anywhere else in Arlington Heights. While we were talking, Bob and Nick were hustling to the garages where cans awaited them.

SOME HOMES didn't have their cans out.

There have been a lot of complaints about the garbage pickup in Berkley Square. Rick and Bob had a few of their own.

"In the summer, people fill plastic bags as big as I am with grass and they expect us to carry them without breaking the bag," Rick said.

"I swear they all cut their grass on the same day," he added.

Bob Stewart, who lives in Streamwood, complained of some people who have six or seven cans outside their garage.

RICK AND BOB agreed that an excess of cans slows them down. Rick suggested, "I'd like to see a three-can limit."

"The worst times are Christmas and Halloween — those damn pumpkins get pretty heavy," Rick admitted.

No one greeted the garbagemen except one sheepish looking woman who clutched at her housecoat as she opened the garage door. One businessman emptied his own cans into the truck and smiled embarrassedly as he put them back into the trunk of his Cadillac and drove off.

Dressed in Army fatigue shirts and Army caps, Rick and Bob moved too fast to get cold. Bob, who is 30 and has a five-year-old daughter, said, "One thing you don't have to worry about on this job is getting cold."

Rick and Bob have been working the same truck together for two months and Bob was proud of the job they do.

"Me and Rick can do this whole area in four or five hours."

IT WAS THE FIRST day for Nick in Berkley Square and with his cheeks getting redder by the minute, he quietly emptied garbage cans, garbage bags, beer cans and an old speaker into his large plastic can, hoisted it to his shoulder and hurriedly walked to the truck's waiting mouth.

That gaping mouth had an odor that the green phantom couldn't help. As its food was swallowed, the entire truck shook, the stench spread and you wondered if a shower would help.

Why would anyone want to be a garbageman?

It pays $4.24 for drivers and $4.05 for helpers. "I like hard work," said Bob. "I'm in the best shape ever and you ought to see my back."

"I GOTTA KEEP movin'. I get nervous when I'm just sittin' around."

"This ain't so tough anyway. I'll be doin' this kind of work 'till I kick."

Rick, who's wife is pregnant, goes to Harper Junior College at night.

"I want to be a CPA. I always have been good with figures and I keep thinking of this one guy who's been doin' this for 17 years."

"He's old before his time. Besides, I won't always be this strong either."

Nick said he had done work like this before and enjoyed working out of doors.

WEDNESDAY'S LOAD is twice as big as Saturday's and the truck was filled after three streets had been completed. Rick drove to the landfill and then truck 56 rested while its riders ate lunch.

By 11:15 they were back on the job. No one had noted their absence and no one greeted them on their return. A little boy pressed his nose to three windows, past the chugging chew-it-all-up machine and Rick cursed as the truck stalled.

The only thing that showed they were there were empty garbage cans. Cans with lids back on.

"AREN'T WE DONE YET?" Rick Traub and Staff Writer Murray Dubin unload garbage in Berkley Square. Rick complained of people who overfill their cans so much that he can't lift them. A typical

Wednesday in Berkley Square will fill the truck nearly three times. "Berkley Square has more garbage than anywhere else in Arlington Heights," Rick insists. Rick lives in Arlington Heights and another Laseke truck collects his garbage. "I usually get good service, but if I didn't, I'd bring it all in to work."

Child-Psychologist Role Told

by BETSY BROOKER

"When a child exhibits adjustment problems in the classroom, it is not necessarily a reflection on the teacher," according to River Trails School Dist. 26 psychologist Dan Koren.

"We are here to identify the problems and find a solution," Koren told the Dist. 26 school board Tuesday night in a presentation explaining his activities and those of psychologist Rodney Marco.

Koren and Marco use a system under which teachers refer students to them that have been causing trouble in class. With the student goes a written description of the student's behavior.

According to James Retzlaff, assistant school superintendent, teachers are using the system much more this year than last year. "We have had 102 referrals already this year, while we had only 125 all of last year."

The child who is a problem can be a slow learner or a gifted student; an aggressive child or a withdrawn one.

"We had one case of the first type," said Koren, "with a boy in first grade who was reading at a sixth grade level. The teacher was not equipped to deal with him and the rest of the class so we moved him to a second grade reading class."

"We did not move him any higher up because we didn't want to affect his social maturation."

"THE POOR ACHIEVER usually has problems with reading, although we had some cases with math and spelling," said

Koren. "In the first of the year our greatest difficulty in emotional problems is with the aggressive child. But by the middle of the year, the teachers are able to handle them and we look toward the withdrawn child. The quiet child is actually harder to help than the aggressive child."

"Occasionally, we find a child who is neurotic, or living in a fantasy world. By the time the children reach sixth and seventh grade, the problem is likely to be more severe, and we find a few cases of psychotic children. In cases where we find neurosis or psychosis, we refer the children to resources in the community such as psychiatric centers."

"Once we identify the problem," said Marco, "it helps the teacher to accept the child and it helps the parents to look at the problem more objectively. Most parents prefer to overlook the problem or not admit it exists."

How do the psychologists identify the problem? The first step is a battery of testing according to Koren. This includes tests that measure I.Q., perceptive ability, personality, and achievement.

The next step, diagnosis, is more important. The psychologists try to determine what can be done to alleviate the problem.

This process includes conferences with the parents, teacher, principal and whoever else is in close contact with the child. Occasionally the child is placed in special education classes or he might be helped without being moved.

TO BETTER ILLUSTRATE the system,

Marco told a story about a boy he had worked with who had an emotional problem. "In the teacher's referral, she said the child couldn't listen for a long length of time, and was nervous. In investigating his records, I discovered the boy had also exhibited a gradual deterioration in his school work. While he had made B's and C's in the lower grades, he was now making D's and F's."

"Testing showed the boy's I.Q. had decreased 12 to 15 points, from high average to below average. During the testing he trembled and his speech was halting, showing depression and anxiety. In his personality test, he revealed he felt rejected by his family."

"In an interview with his parents, they reported he was moody, couldn't eat with the family and couldn't communicate with them."

"For 15 to 20 minutes before the boy left for school, he beat his hands on a table, an action he also used when he was upset. Vomiting and stomach pains also accompanied his feelings of anxiety."

"The problem in this case was that the parents had waited for eight or nine years before seeking help," said Marco. "They thought the boy would grow out of it."

"We sent the parents and the boy to a clinic for family counseling. The psychiatrist's report showed the boy's tensions reflected the situation at home. Both his parents had ulcers, and frequently quarreled. With extensive psychotherapy, the child and the family might be helped."

Anticipating the future, Koren urged in-service training for the teachers so that they can administer some of the services of the psychologist. He also suggested hiring residents from the community to come into the school and work with an individual child on a one-to-one basis.

Creek To Move For High School

Salt Creek, on the western edge of the Dist. 214 site for a Rolling Meadows High School on Central Road and Barker Avenue will be moved 50 feet west of its present course to give the district benefit of the western part of the site.

At the Rolling Meadows city council meeting Dec. 9, the aldermen accepted the change in the upper branch of the creek, but directed City Engineer Edgar Fletcher to check on the position of a vehicular bridge over the creek on Dist. 214 property.

With moving the creek, the bridge over the northern branch on Dist. 214 property will be about 100 feet north and 75 feet east of a bridge being constructed by the city over the western branch of Salt Creek across Barker Avenue.

THE BRIDGE on Dist. 214 property also will serve as part of an access road to Georgetown of Willow Bend and will provide a second exit from the apartment complex.

The access road bridge is being built by Arlen Properties, developers of Georgetown of Willow Bend. An access road will run on the southern edge of Dist. 214's site. Willow Bend School, an elementary school being built by Dist. 15, and Georgetown of Willow Bend will be south of the access road.

In a pre-annexation agreement with the City of Rolling Meadows, Arlen Properties agreed to construct the access road bridge on Dist. 214's property. The developer also has agreed to build a footbridge across Salt Creek on the northern end of an artificial lake separating the Dist. 15 property from Georgetown of Willow Bend.

DIST. 15'S PROPERTY is on the corner of Barker and Algonquin Road, Georgetown of Willow Bend is east of it and Dist. 214's site is north along Barker and Central Road.

Neither Dist. 214 or Dist. 15 have begun to build on their sites. Though Barker Avenue will be a major arterial street in Rolling Meadows, construction of the road and the bridge across it will not begin until next year when the city collects its motor fuel tax. A temporary road has been put in to provide access to the Dist. 15 site.

Dist. 214 will have access to the Rolling Meadows High School site from Central Road. Presently, Georgetown of Willow Bend has one exit onto Algonquin Road.

Study Sticker Cost Drop

Village officials in Palatine will investigate the possibilities of reducing the cost of vehicle stickers to disabled veterans.

Presently, a 1970 village sticker costs $10 or $8 if it's purchased before the first of the year.

The matter of reducing the cost was brought to the attention of village officials by a veteran living in Palatine who said he recently discovered "a little piece of sticky paper would cost him $9."

"The point that I want to make is that everyone is all praise for the veterans and they say thank you so much for everything that we have done, but when it comes down to helping the veteran, it is a completely different story," he wrote.

BUT THE VILLAGE board of trustees were apprehensive about allowing a reduction to all disabled veterans.

"I think we should investigate the terms for which disabled veteran licenses are issued by the state," Village Pres. John Moodie said.

The board agreed that in some cases the vehicle sticker should be offered at a nominal fee.

The Palatine veteran explained, "I am 100 per cent disabled. I haven't worked since Jan. 19, 1969 after spending 17 months in Vietnam. It is expensive to live these days, even harder when you can't work at the age of 22."

He continued, "You say you are thankful for the jobs we do away from home, risking our lives for the people back at home. Now you are getting a chance to prove it."

Village To Use Bank Help

The computer data service division at the Mount Prospect State Bank will be used by the Village of Mount Prospect next year to keep its utility accounts, bills and receipts in order.

"The computer will do all the utility billing, approximately 3,000 statements monthly, as well as all the receipts at a cost of $300 a month. The job is now being done by village employees without the help of any computer or billing machine."

"It was necessary to subscribe to a computer service because we just can't handle the job under the present circumstances. Our billing machine is broken, and the cost of replacing or repairing the equipment is out of the question now," Village Mgr. Virgil Barnett said.

"WE WOULD NEED to spend about $15,000 to replace the machine or spend $2,500 to repair it, plus hire an additional person to help with the billing. At this rate, the village will save almost $5,000 a year by using the computer service," Barnett said.

The computer service will cost about $4,400 a year, roughly 13 cents per bill. In addition to the financial savings, Barnett said the time factor was very important. At present village employees spend between six and seven days preparing 3,000 bills each month. The computer can do the job in about five hours.

"The computer service will relieve the department of a great burden, especially since we've purchased Fairview Gardens and Citizens' Utilities and we have more bills and accounts to handle."

"I THINK subscribing to the computer service is an important step for the village because we're beginning to modernize some of our operations. I'm satisfied because the village should be moving in this direction. We're becoming a sophisticated community and we should begin doing some of these things in a sophisticated way," Barnett said.

"Perhaps computer services can be extended in the future to include the village payroll as well as accounting."

Barnett expects the next six weeks will be spent in programming the computer with all the utility information. Computer service is expected to be in operation some time in late January.

Bad Check Opens Homuth Mystery

A sales clerk at Kny Campbell's in the Randhurst Shopping Center told Mount Prospect police Monday that the First National Bank of Highland Park returned a bad check for $40 which she received from a customer in November.

The clerk told police a Mrs. Arlene M. Homuth of Highland Park used a temporary Ill. driver's license and Texaco gas credit card for identification when she accepted the check. Mrs. Homuth reportedly told the clerk she had just moved to Highland Park from Palm Springs, Calif., police said.

Following an investigation by the police department, the suspect's alleged husband, Elmer Homuth, made application for a joint checking account with his wife at the First National Bank of Highland Park in October, according to a spokesman for the bank.

THE BANK CLOSED the account Nov. 12 after checks were received in excess of the deposits on hand, police said.

After further investigation by the department, police learned that the Texaco gas credit card used by Mrs. Homuth was reported stolen from a gas station in Fond du Lac, Wis. The card was issued to Elmer Homuth, Box 1063, of Fond du Lac and has been used extensively in the Chicago area, according to a security agent for Texaco.

The suspect, allegedly Mrs. Homuth, is reportedly driving a stolen 1969 Pontiac from Morton Grove with California license plates, according to police. The suspect is believed to be accompanied by two males about 25 years old, police said.

Stocky Man Robs Cleaners, Hunted

A young man robbed the One-Hour Martinizing Cleaners at 1010 S. Elmhurst Road of an undetermined amount of money late Wednesday afternoon, Mount Prospect police said.

The man reportedly handed the store clerk a white business envelope with the instruction, "Give me all your money and bills and no one will get hurt," police said.

THE CLERK FILLED the envelope with an undetermined amount of cash, and the man fled the store. No one was injured in the incident, according to police.

The clerk described the man as 5 feet 5 inches tall, stocky build with blondish brown hair, police said.

Young Democrats To Hear Two Speakers

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman and Paul Shanyfeldt, a Democratic candidate for the state senate race next year, will be guest speakers at a meeting of the Elk Grove Township Young Democrats Dec. 28.

Barry Christian, president, announced that the meeting is open to all high school and college students from 7 to 8 p.m. in the Elk Grove High School cafeteria. A dance, featuring the Comin' Generation, will be held from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Admission is 50 cents.

'For Us A Child' To Be Presented

A Christmas Cantata, "For Us A Child Is Born," by Johann Sebastian Bach will be presented at Bethel Lutheran Church Sunday.

The adult choir will sing at the 9:30 and 10:45 a.m. services. This sermon in song will be under the direction of Mrs. Boyd White. Soloists will be Perry Mann, bass, Ann Heinemann, soprano, Lyla Dorwick, contralto.

The Chamber Ensemble will include Joan Dunlop and Betty White, violin, Christel Siedentop and Jean Lindner, recorder, J.C. Ploutz, flute, Margaret White, cello, Tim Gibler, bass, Mrs. A. Stollfus, piano and Nan Stocking, viola.

Tickets Are Available

A few extra tickets are available for the trip to Goodman Children's Theater sponsored by the Palatine Park District.

The play "Rumpelstiltskin" will be performed Sunday. Fee is $2.25 per ticket. A bus will leave the park district office at 1 p.m. with the performance beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Anyone interested should call the park district office.

House Changes Course

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing itself, yesterday affirmed school desegregation efforts on the Health Education and Welfare Department. On a 216-190 vote it accepted Senate-passed language upsetting an earlier vote to curb the desegregation drive.

Hoffman Bars Lawyer

CHICAGO — Judge Julius Hoffman yesterday refused to readmit Stuart Ball, attorney for the "Chicago Conspiracy 7," into court on the grounds that he was a "disgrace to this court." Ball is bearded and long-haired, and Hoffman objected to his manner of dress.

Barry: Bomb North

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., urged President Nixon to resume bombing of North Vietnam and to destroy Haiphong harbor and rail lines from China. The former Presidential-candidate said there was no other alternative to a "never-ending war."

U.S. Pollution Help

CHICAGO — The federal government will aid Illinois officials in cases against alleged polluters of Lake Michigan, Atty. Gen. William Scott announced yesterday.

Scott said he received word of the help when he met with Carl Klein, assistant secretary of the interior for water quality and research. Scott earlier met with Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the matter.

General at My Lai

WASHINGTON — The general commanding the American troops who allegedly massacred civilians at My Lai was aboard a helicopter monitoring radio conversations at the time, the Defense Department said yesterday.

The statement raised the possibility that it was the division commander, Maj. Gen. Samuel W. Koster, who sent a radio warning to the company commander on the ground at My Lai not to kill noncombatants.

"WHERE'S MY TYPEWRITER?" Lifting a garbage can to his shoulders, staff writer Murray Dubin spent Wednesday morning as a garbageman. Shucking his tie and jacket for

Laseke Gets Initial Nod

Adding numerous points to the contract, the finance committee of the Arlington Heights Village Board last night agreed to a three-year contract with the Laseke Disposal Co.

Village Atty. Jack Siegel will draw a new contract and the board will vote on the committee's recommendation.

Committee members agreed that the $4.45 rate for bi-weekly pickups wasn't exorbitant as long as the service provided matched the rate.

One of the stipulations tacked on to the contract required large signs on the garbage trucks indicating the frequency of pickup. Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said, "We're going to write the ground rules."

ANOTHER ADDITIONAL clause indicated that Laseke would provide one pickup weekly for those residents on a fixed low income over 65 years of age for $2.25 monthly.

Trustee Burt Thompson said, "The implementation of this clause will be hard."

The members agreed that an application system would have to be started. Committee Chairman Frank Palmatier added, "We'll have problems with the little old lady who has 12 trees in her backyard and bushels of leaves."

The committee decided that the residential routes shouldn't exceed 300 customers.

John Cost, director of public works, said, "Laseke told me flat out that he'd go along with a route of 300."

IF THIS POINT WAS approved by the scavenger service and the village board, Laseke would have to add one extra residential route.

Other points added to the agreement were that garbage would not be collected on holidays, the village manager would arbitrate disputes between Laseke and his customers and that all leaves and grass clippings would be bagged by the residents and left at the curb.

The members concurred that the first six months of the contract would be considered an initial probationary performance period and every six months after that, a performance review would occur.

Palmatier pointed out that 50 cents of Laseke's increase was caused by the village raising its dumping charges.

Hanson said the village could lower the rate to $3.95 but that it would cost $78,000. He added that some of this money could be gotten additional revenue from the state.

After discussion and the listing of other village priorities such as another fire station and money for public works, the committee agreed not to use village funds to lower the rates.

Dist. 59 Picks Superintendent

Dist. 59 has selected a new school superintendent although his name will not be released until next month, according to district officials.

After screening over 60 applicants for the job, the school board unanimously agreed on the selection of a candidate to fill that position, Allen Sparks, board president, said yesterday.

"Although details of the appointment cannot be made public until the new superintendent has informed his district of his future plans, it is anticipated that a complete announcement can be made next month, he added.

"We are extremely pleased with the selection and are confident that the broad educational and administrative experience which the new superintendent brings to us will inspire the continuation of the fine education program which has been a tradition in our district."

THE SEARCH FOR a new superintendent began July 1 following the resignation of Dr. Donald Thomas, past superintendent for 2½ years.

Sparks said he would rather not release any detailed information about the new superintendent at this time, but did say that he was not from the immediate area.

It has not been determined when the superintendent will begin work in the district. "This is something that we can't determine now," Sparks said. "It depends entirely on what the position of his board is on finding a replacement."

However, Sparks added, "It will certainly be no later than July, but we hope it will be much sooner than that."

Until the superintendent officially comes to Dist. 59, Al Walkman, acting superintendent since Thomas' resignation, will remain in administrative charge of district activities.

Family Aid Sought By NAW

A general appeal for help for 15 Spanish American families is being sought by the Neighbors at Work (NAW) organization in Elk Grove Village.

The NAW says the families have been living in substandard housing in Elk Grove Township and need help immediately. Many of them are still living in shacks which have been cited with numerous building code violations by county inspectors earlier this week.

NAW has called a press conference today at 7:30 p.m. in the Elk Grove Township hall, 2400 S. Arlington Heights Road, at which time an appeal will be made.

Louis Archibald, of NAW, said yesterday he plans to have the families out of the shacks and into motels by Christmas Day. If motel rooms are not available the NAW has indicated it will take the people into their homes.

TWO FAMILIES and a single woman are currently being housed at the Elk Grove Village Holiday Inn. One room has been provided free by the motel, another is being paid for by the township, and another by NAW, said Archibald.

The rest of the families are still in shacks in the township.

Four landowners who own the shacks have been ordered by the County to appear before the Department of Buildings compliance board Monday in the Civic Center in Chicago.

According to the building department they are Mrs. Margaret Hoeske, of 1031 W. Higgins Road, Edward Hoeske, of 1127 W. Higgins Road, George Goebbert of 25 E.

Algonquin Road, and Sam Miller of 201 W. Touhy Ave.

MRS. RITA Gara, president of NAW, said yesterday the organization is sending telegrams to the Salvation Army and Red Cross in an appeal for help for the families.

"We need bedding for these people and funds," she said. "In case they get evicted."

Persons who want to donate clothing or furnishings should call Walter McCoy at 437-4134, said Mrs. Gara.

She said that $150 has been donated and that an account at the Bank of Elk Grove would be opened.

NAW also plans to ask the churches in the village to donate a designated amount for the families needs.

Mrs. Gara said NAW member John Sheehan also is planning to meet with township auditors tomorrow to discuss the emergency housing problem.

A JOINT STEERING committee of NAW members and village officials have been meeting this week in an attempt to obtain funds for mobile homes to be installed temporarily in the village to house the 15 families.

Several sites have been mentioned with the latest being on St. Alexius Hospital-owned property in the village. The property is zoned for special use.

Attempts to obtain trailers and funding have not succeeded as of yesterday. Another meeting of the steering committee has been called today at 7 a.m. in the village hall.

"We have to see where we stand as to finalizing the site," Joseph Wellman, chairman of the committee, and a sociology instructor at Elk Grove High School said.

MRS. GARA said she thought the village is "dragging its feet. Maybe I'm mistaken but we can't afford to waste time."

Meanwhile county officials will continue to check housing in unincorporated areas of northwest Cook County.

But, according to a statement by the building commissioner last Sunday, they need help in finding the housing. Persons with information should call his office at 321-7022.

In another development, a fire Wednesday in the farmhouse where Armando Gomez and his wife and child had been living at 1031 W. Higgins Road, destroyed some of his possessions.

"I don't know why the whole building didn't go up in flames," a NAW member said.

Lt. Donald Kuhn of the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, said the state fire marshal's office has been called in to investigate.

GOP Collecting Gifts

For the third straight year, the Wheeling Township Republican Organization is collecting gifts donated by the families of Republican precinct captains for Cook County children who are wards of the state.

Potboilers

WINDING UP a record-short park board meeting Monday night, Thomas Thornton, park director, said there were no committee reports and no park use applications. Board president Charles Cronin looked at the agenda and said, "and now adjournment. Good night."

THE ELUSIVE and ever busy Jack Siegel, village attorney, attended a Cultural Commission meeting for the first time Wednesday night after being scheduled to appear for the last three meetings. Commissioner Robert Hawley shook the lawyer's hand and said, "So this is the mythical Jack Siegel." Siegel replied, "Well that's about the kindest thing that's been said about me."

ALL IS NOT roses at the new post office — There are a few "bugs" to be worked out, according to one employee. The electric eyes on the back doors don't always work and it's a little chilly in the building because something's wrong with the furnace.

A SURVEY of various groups in the village is being conducted by the Cultural Commission. The questionnaire includes an opinion from the group on what type facilities should be included in a potential cultural center. A local stamp club replied that a center should include "a meeting room with very good light."

BUD BEACHAM, chairman of the cultural commission, presented a series of suggested designs for the top of the commission's official stationery. He asked the commissioners to vote on their favorite design and Sidney Rosenfeld asked, "Did you bring your applause meter?"

STILL DISCUSSING their stationery, cultural commission members decided to have their names printed on the top of the sheets. The decision came after a few minutes of debate which was quickly settled by commissioner Dr. Edward Jacobs. He said, "Let's put the names on and make anyone who resigns buy the remaining stationery."

ANY MOTORIST who drives over 25 miles per hour on Campbell Street is out of his mind. The street is so heavily covered by police radar that flocks of geese have been pulled over to the curb for exceeding the limit. Police cars are often lurking behind the weeping willow tree at the First Baptist Church. Peek-a-boo, fellas.

TIPTOE THROUGH THE MEETING — Plan commission members were in a hurry Wednesday night and ended their meeting in less than an hour and a half. James Ryan admitted that he wanted to see Tiny Tim get married.

A REASONABLE FACSIMILE — Village Pres. Jack Walsh has made it. The trustees have passed a resolution allowing his signature to be copied on village paperwork. Walsh mentioned something about a "rubber stamp."

"AREN'T WE DONE YET?" Rick Traub and Staff Writer Murray Dubin unload garbage in Berkley Square. Rick complained of people who overfill their cans so much that he can't lift them. A typical Wednesday in Berkley Square will fill the truck nearly three times. "Berkley Square has more garbage than anywhere else in Arlington Heights," Rick insists. Rick lives in Arlington Heights and another Laseke truck collects his garbage. "I usually get good service, but if I didn't, I'd bring it all in to work."

mouth. That gaping mouth had an odor that the green phantom couldn't help. As its food was swallowed, the entire truck shook, the stench spread and you wondered if a shoe emptied garbage cans, garbage bags, beer cans and an old speaker into his large plastic can, hoisted it to his shoulder and hurriedly walked to the truck's waiting wheel.

Why would anyone want to be a garbage man?

It pays $4.24 for drivers and $4.05 for helpers. "I like hard work," said Bob. "I'm in the best shape ever and you ought to see my back."

"I GOTTA KEEP movin'. I get nervous when I'm just sittin' around."

"This ain't so tough anyway. I'll be doin' this kind of work 'till I kick."

Rick, who's wife is pregnant, goes to Harper Junior College at night.

"I want to be a CPA. I always have been good with figures and I keep thinking of this one guy who's been doin' this for 17 years."

"He's old before his time. Besides, I won't always be this strong either."

Nick said he had done work like this before and enjoyed working out of doors.

WEDNESDAY'S LOAD is twice as big as Saturday's and the truck was filled after three streets had been completed. Rick drove to the landfill and then truck 56 rested while its riders ate lunch.

By 11:15 they were back on the job. No one had noted their absence and no one greeted them on their return. A little boy pressed his nose to the window, past the chugging chew-it-all-up machine and Rick cursed as the truck stalled.

The only thing that showed they were there were empty garbage cans. Cans with lids back on.

Ways To Finance Cultural Center

by SANDRA BROWNING

Arlington Heights' Cultural Commission found out Wednesday night that it isn't the only governmental body in the Northwest suburbs talking about a cultural center.

Cultural centers are included in the future plans for Schaumburg and Harper Junior College.

Jack Siegel, village attorney for Arlington Heights and Schaumburg, told the cultural commissioners that Schaumburg requires a dedication of money from apartment developers which request zoning from the village.

The $100 per apartment unit donated by developers will be held aside for the cost of constructing a cultural center. The village also has an arrangement with George Hardy Museum, previously located in Chicago. The museum lost its building because of an urban renewal project about six years ago and the various displays of paintings and medieval armor are presently in storage.

THE AGREEMENT states that the museum will have facilities in the cultural center when it is built.

However, Siegel said, Schaumburg is not as far along as Arlington Heights in actually building a cultural center. Schaumburg has not yet formed a cultural commission as provided for in state legislation and passed this summer by the state legislature.

Siegel explained the various alternatives for financing the construction and operation of a cultural center. Commission chairman George Beacham added that a parking facility built for use by patrons of the center could also be used during the day for commuter parking.

The future plans of Harper Junior College were explained by Robert Lahti, president of the two-year school. A comprehensive music facility built in two stages, includes a building for practice, taping and other rooms and a performing center.

THE PERFORMING area would include room for about 1,400 persons and would be constructed adjacent to the building housing practice rooms and areas for educational purposes.

The practice building will be ready for bids as soon as funds are available. The performing stage facility is part of 10-year planning for the Palatine campus.

Lahti stressed the attitude of the college board is very community oriented. Other future plans include a physical education facility with handball courts, a swimming pool and other items which would be available to residents when it is not being used by the college.

A planetarium for use by the college and the community was also mentioned by Lahti as a future possibility. In the space age, a planetarium is a very important educational facility, Lahti said.

THE NEED FOR a cultural center in the Northwest suburbs was stressed by the college president. He said, "As a representative of the Harper board, I would like to say we stand ready to cooperate in any way we can to create better educational and cultural programs."

Commissioner Dr. Edward Jacobs was disturbed about the plans for cultural centers in other parts of the northwest suburban area. "We have to know if we would be duplicating facilities."

Lahti assured the commission members that if Arlington Heights did build a center, it would definitely affect the college's plans. The center in the village would be very accessible after Euclid is extended from Plum Grove Road through to Algonquin Road and could be used for Harper groups, performances.

Lahti pledged the college's help and cooperation in the commission's attempt to construct a cultural center in the village.

LATIN AMERICANS Guilmo Barrio, left, and Carlos Vargas are planning to make the United States their home. They formerly were members of the Latin American Peace Corps and now live in Palatine.

Two Peace Corps 'Students' Here

by TOM JACHIMIEC

Two former members of the Latin American Peace Corps are making their home in the Northwest suburbs.

They are Carlos Vargas, 26, of Costa Rica, and Guilmo Barrio, 30, of Chile. Both men live at 208 Benton in Palatine.

Several months ago Carlos and Guilmo completed a two-year term in the peace corps in the Dominican Republic under a program financed by the Dominican Development Foundation and the Inter-American Bank.

Their job was to work with youths from 13 to 21 years of age in organizing a farm and community development program similar to our 4-H clubs.

The program has been successful, said Guilmo. "The agricultural production has been increased by 50 per cent," he said.

Following the completion of their work with the peace corps, both men came to the United States to live.

They have some difficulty with English but are determined to improve themselves by enrolling in a basic adult education class taught at Forest View High School in Arlington Heights and sponsored by the Illinois Migrant Council.

Guilmo, who attended the University of Concepcion in Chile for two years, wants to become a social worker. He says he first must understand the language in order to get a job.

Carlos is currently employed as a welder and mechanic at Power Tools Inc., Palatine. He attended a vocational college for one year.

Both said they came to the United States because they want to know what it is really like after hearing so much about it for many years.

"I want to know what the reality of the United States is like," said Carlos. "Your manner of thinking, I've heard so much about."

Carlos said it too soon for him to form opinions about the United States.

However, he said he likes the idea that in our country all people have the opportunity to live well. This is not so, he explained, in his country where "even if you work hard in Latin America you cannot rise as high as in the United States."

Guilmo said the United States is completely different from Latin America.

Along with a higher economy in the United States, he said the dollar is "more important than other human beings."

In Latin America, he said it is possible to live without money by relying on friends and relatives. Here, he said he does not think it is possible to live without money.

Guilmo, who studied sociology in college, said "mechanization in the United States has led to de-humanization."

There is no time for meditating and relating with other people," he said. "Here man is a slave of time."

CAN YOUR FEET Take 65,000 MILES?

The average American will walk that many miles in a lifetime. In addition to this his feet are subject to rubbing, scuffing, scraping and kicks, as well as being exposed to the elements — rain, heat and cold. Add to this the daily friction building up heat inside the shoes and normal flexing that takes place.

It is easy to see that, to stand the strain over the years, you must take extra special care of your feet. We have a complete Foot Care Department in our pharmacy to help you with everyday foot needs. For special problems with your feet we always recommend you consult with your doctor or podiatrist.

No District 59 Cuts This Year

Dist. 59 budget cuts will not be effective until after the 1969-70 school year according to Al Waltman, acting superintendent.

Due to the Nov. 22 referendum loss, approximately $1,600,000 must be cut from the tentative 1970-71 budget, according to the school board.

A comment made by Board Member Harold Harvey at the Dec. 1 board meeting, preceded Waltman's statement yesterday.

Harvey said that in his opinion it would be easier on the district if budget cutting was spread over three semesters, beginning this school year, rather than the two semesters next school year.

Waltman said that as far as he knew, no one but Harvey had indicated that that idea in budget cutting would be used. "I haven't recommended a cut over three semesters to the board at all."

The question arose at a budget committee meeting.

Waltman explained that the purpose of the meeting was not to begin making plans for budget cuts, but to review the present budget.

"We have a very tight budget this year and have to constantly make sure it's OK," he said. "This year I think the budget is in good shape," he added.

The procedure for revising next year's budget is apparently long and involved.

"There is no big press for time," Waltman said. "I would rather take a lot of time and explore many alternatives."

He explained that action in budget cutting was not begun immediately to reassure the people that belt-tightening wouldn't take place this year.

"Many people were upset at the loss of the referendum and thought that we'd take it out on them," he said.

Months of planning went into the original tentative budget for the 1970-71 school year according to Richard Hess, budget committee chairman. At the time the tentative budget was presented, the board said that it had been restricted as much as possible while still retaining the quality education that the district has been providing.

Now the budget committee, board, and administrators must begin again.

Waltman said that the first thing to do is to talk to people in the district and get their ideas. He said that he has begun this already. A principal's meeting scheduled Thursday was another phase of this operation.

He added that Louis Audi, finance director, has worked out a new revenue section of the budget which will be utilized in determining budget cuts.

A survey to discover what district parents and taxpayers want was suggested by the communications committee last week. A request that the survey be formed and distributed was directed to the administration.

Thomas Warden, newly appointed administrative assistant, has been directed by Waltman to analyze information from the survey for use in budget cutting.

In reference to budget cutting Waltman said, "I don't know how we can do it, but we'll have to."
